Demo Head Asks Ike to Take a Rest

WASHINGTON (UP)—Senate Democratic Whip Mike Mansfield urged President Eisenhower to take an immediate rest in the sun to avoid endangering "his health and our security."

Hospital Plan Biggest in City History

The biggest philanthropic challenge in the city's history has been placed before the people of the Long Beach area by the United Hospital Fund.

The campaign goal totals $1,000,000. This money will buy equipment for the new hospital buildings already authorized by voters under a $10,500,000 bond issue.

The drive has been under way since mid-January.

In this time, medical doctors have pledged a total of $1,022,716, well over their million-dollar goal. Hospital employees have pledged $113,241 — after setting a $100,000 goal.

The rest now is up to the people of Long Beach and neighboring areas, the people to whom good hospitals are a life-and-death matter.

MAINSTAY OF the laymen's part of the drive is the major memorial gifts division, led by J. Donald Locke.

This division, which went into action Thursday, has set a goal of $2,000,000.

The division's first report meeting will be at noon Thursday in the Victor Hugo Restaurant.

In urging full support by businessmen of this phase of the campaign, Earl B. Miller, president of the United Hospital Fund Board of Directors, pointed out that contributions "may be regarded as an investment in the community in which a corporation does business."

"And it is good business," he added. "It will bring tangible returns in the hastened recovery of sick and injured personnel, in lessened production delays and in improved morale stemming from the employee's confidence that there will be a bed in the hospital whenever he, his wife or child needs care."

KEYSTONE OF the major memorial gifts drive is its memorial endowment plan. Under this plan, donors may endow

Storm Downs Esther's Plane

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (UP)—A private plane carrying Actress Esther Williams and her husband, Ben Gage, made an emergency landing in the desert south of here Saturday after being caught in a sudden storm.

The actress told friends she and her husband were returning to Southern California from a trip to Baja California, Mex., to inspect a gold mine they own south of Ensenada when they ran into the storm. Joe Blakeley, the pilot, landed the plane safely in the desert and no one was injured.

L.A.C. Says:

A Squeeze Play

It seems apparent Long Beach is to be punished by the county manager and downtown Los Angeles interests because of our opposition to the $51-million-dollar downtown Los Angeles auditorium, music hall and parking lot promotion. The punishment may be in the form of the county delaying erection of the county courthouse scheduled to be completed in Long Beach in two years. Plans are prepared, lands have been acquired and buildings demolished. But that was all arranged before Long Beach exposed the selfish interests involved in the scheme which would place a $51 million installation in downtown Los Angeles but charge the costs to all the people of the county.

The idea of holding up erection of the courthouse apparently is based on the hope that Long Beach will "cooperate" by discontinuing opposition. But as one

The Montana Democrat told the United Press that Eisenhower "should not take chances with his health."

"It is too important a man," Mansfield said. "So much is wrapped up in his personal prestige, and the western world depends on him so much, that he should not take chances which might endanger his health and our security."

The White House announced Friday that Eisenhower is considering going to Florida next week to see if the sun and a rest there will help him shake off a persistent cough and a related cold and ear infection.

WHITE HOUSE Press Secretary James C. Hagerly told reporters Saturday the President will wait until Monday to make a final decision on the trip.

If he does go, he will leave on Tuesday. Hagerly had a detailed map of Florida on his desk as he talked.

Hagerly reported the President was still suffering from the "slight head cold and a slight inflammation of an ear tube."

"It's fine with the exception of those irritating things," he said.

Despite his ailments, the President worked at his desk for three hours this morning. He saw two callers and then signed the Middle East doctrine resolution.

THE PRESIDENT had a spell of coughing just after the signing ceremony but otherwise appeared in good spirits and joked with photographers who crowded around his desk.

The cotton that Eisenhower had in his left ear at his news conference Thursday for treatment of the inflammation there was missing.

Hagerly said that if Eisenhower goes to Florida his weekly schedule of cabinet, national security council and other meetings will have to be "tele-scoped."

Knowland Hits Aid to Poland

WASHINGTON (UP)—Sen. Knowland (R-Calif.) said Saturday if the Eisenhower Administration gives economic aid to Poland it may pave the way for "a Communist Marshall Plan" that could cost this country a billion dollars a year.

Knowland, the Senate Republican leader, told reporters he has put President Eisenhower and Secretary of State Dulles on notice there will be "considerable opposition" in Congress to any economic assistance for Poland or any other country occupied by Soviet troops.

"ANY PROGRAM of aid to Poland could be the opening wedge for a Communist Marshall Plan," Knowland told reporters. "If we start giving help to Poland it would be difficult to discriminate against Romania, Bulgaria, Czechoslovakia and Hungary."

"IF THE LOCAL mineral waters have a radioactive content," the paper quoted the scientist as saying. "Then it's likely a slight increase in radioactivity of the atmosphere resulting from H-bomb tests could upset the local balance."

A Ministry of Health spokesman said: "We are mystified by the problem at Cheltenham. We expect to send out a team of experts to investigate."

RADIATION, SUSPECT

City's Many Undersize Babies Cause Inquiry

LONDON (Sunday) (AP)—The tiny babies born in Cheltenham have stumped the medical experts. Some suspect atomic radiation.

"There has been a staggering number of these tiny babies," Dr. George Bramley, county medical officer, told the Gloucestershire Health Committee this week. "Some have been as small as two pounds."

Dr. Thomas Lawson, chief health officer of the city of 55,000, said the atomic radiation theory cannot be ignored and "we shall certainly investigate the theory."

The tiny baby trend in Cheltenham was first noticed in 1950. In 1954, when 23 babies under 3½ pounds were born in one maternity hospital alone, city officials began hunting for the reason.

A COMMITTEE of obstetricians, pediatricians, general practitioners and Health Ministry officials has been studying the problem for two years but has found no medical explanation.

Cheltenham is famous for its mineral waters. The Sunday Pictorial reported today it had sent a London scientist specializing in atomic radiation to Cheltenham to take samples of the local water.

The paper said the theory was that the mineral water may have a certain amount of radioactivity. Fallouts from atomic bomb explosions may have increased radioactivity.

"IF THE LOCAL mineral waters have a radioactive content," the paper quoted the scientist as saying. "Then it's likely a slight increase in radioactivity of the atmosphere resulting from H-bomb tests could upset the local balance."

A Ministry of Health spokesman said: "We are mystified by the problem at Cheltenham. We expect to send out a team of experts to investigate."

Refugee Plan Hit by Solon

HARRISBURG, Pa. (UP)—Rep. Francis E. Walter (D-Pa.) said Saturday night that President Eisenhower's proposal to liberalize the immigration laws would flood this country "with an excessive number of immigrants."

He said the plan would admit an extra 200,000 immigrants a year, about double the present number.

Big Three to Reject Soviet Bid

WASHINGTON (UP)—The United States, in an unusual move, Saturday told nine Middle Eastern nations it plans to reject Moscow's month-old call for a Big Four policy declaration on the critical Mideast.

Along with Britain and France the United States this week will turn down the Soviet Union's Feb. 11 proposal as a propaganda move in direct conflict with Russian efforts to stir up trouble in the Middle East.

THE STATE Department summoned diplomats representing Israel, Lebanon, Syria, Yemen, Sudan, Jordan, Egypt, Saudi Arabia and Iraq Saturday to be informed of contents of the U.S. note. The Middle East diplomats met separately with Stewart Rockwell, acting director of the State Department Office for Near Eastern Affairs.

The broad-scale move was disclosed in response to United Press inquiries about the steady flow of Middle Eastern diplomats in and out of the State Department.

A SPOKESMAN explained that the department was "informing them of the contents of the note we shall deliver to the Soviet Union."

The note already has been outlined to other members of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) and to Iran.

The United States, Britain and France are expected to deliver their notes in Moscow Tuesday. The concerted action will mark the first important show of three-power harmony since the Western alliance was strained over the British-French-Israeli attack on Egypt last fall.

Auto Smugglers Arrested

MEXICO CITY (UP)—A ring for autos and trucks purchased in the United States.

The Treasury said police traffic officials "in every Mexican state" were involved, and charged that, for $80, false licenses could be obtained "anywhere."

The 2,000 autos were brought in only at Manzanillo, officials said, and it was believed that "many more" may have been introduced elsewhere.

Tidal Waves Wreck Hawaii Beach Homes

Nine-Foot Combers Roll Inland ¼ Mile; Ruin Boats, Bridges

HONOLULU (AP)—A series of tidal waves from 3 to 9 feet high, triggered by major earthquakes in Alaska, crashed over the northern shores of the Hawaiian Islands for five hours Saturday.

The waves rolled inland up to a quarter of a mile, swept away or destroyed 28 beach homes on the island of Kauai, hurled other houses about and soaked dozens more.

Some bridges and roads were washed out. Huge hunks of coral rock were tossed into sugar cane fields.

Many small boats were wrecked. There were no confirmed casualties due to wave action.

SAHAR PARK, reporter for the Honolulu Star-Bulletin who was observing the waves, was killed in the crash of a light plane off North Oahu. The pilot and a photographer were injured, the pilot critically.

Two sailors were swept off a submarine in a Kauai harbor but were rescued.

The Air Force searched for three persons rumored missing off Kauai, but police there said they had no report of anyone missing.

The first wave hit the northern shores of the islands at 8:58 a.m.—almost to the minute of its predicted arrival.

IT WAS GENERATED by a strong earth shock in the Aleutians at 4:07 a.m. (HST). The waves raced at 500 miles an hour across the Pacific, hitting first Midway Island and then Hawaii.

No damage was reported on Midway.

Christmas Island, the British H-bomb test site, had waves one foot above normal, the Navy said.

New surges were expected following a second and third quake in the same area but did not materialize here.

The waves diminished slowly, but steadily. Pacific Fleet headquarters at Pearl Harbor called off the tidal wave alert at 3:30 p.m.

DAMAGE was generally concentrated on the two northern islands of Kauai and Oahu.

TIDAL WAVES SAFETY STORY IN SOUTHLAND

"YOU'RE SAFE FROM TIDAL WAVES," Southland Magazine headlines in an up-to-the-minute lead story today.

The article by Staff Writer Vera Williams describes the warning network which gives U. S. citizens advance notice of the big ocean disturbances. It also tells about the steep continental shelf and underwater canyons along Pacific shores which serve as barriers to the waves.

The article points out that lack of a warning system was a factor in the nation's most disastrous tidal wave—the huge wall of water which deluged Galveston in 1900.

Synthetic Penicillin Produced

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (UP)—

Two scientists reported Saturday they have won a nine-year research struggle to produce penicillin chemically. They said it was as difficult as "placing an anvil on a house of cards" because the unstable penicillin molecule disintegrates so easily.

Dr. John C. Sheehan, a chemistry professor, and an associate, Dr. K. L. Henery-Logan, at Massachusetts Institute of Technology, said they had developed 10 varieties of synthetic penicillin which up to now has been made exclusively from molds in a fermentation process.

SYNTHETIC penicillin would cost more than the natural variety. But they said different kinds may prove effective against disease organisms presently resistant to natural penicillin and against a greater number of infections.

They said new penicillins also might have less tendency to produce allergic reactions in patients. Tests are being conducted with them on animals at the Merck, Sharpe and Dohme laboratories, Rahway, N. J.

A concerted effort by approximately 1,000 American and British scientists during World War II to synthesize penicillin ended in failure. Sheehan, who had participated in the wartime study, began his new research in 1948.

Southlanders Dash From Beach Areas

Hardly Perceptible Overtide Rolls to L.B. Area Shores

SAN DIEGO (UP)—A 25-knot tidal surge in San Diego Bay at 10:50 p.m. Saturday damaged one pier and set several vessels adrift, one of which crashed into a smaller vessel.

Damage was estimated at $5,000.

Among vessels torn loose from their moorings was the Halcyon, 105-foot former submarine chaser and the 83-foot 4-F, which crashed into the 50-foot auxiliary schooner Sea Star.

Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Scudder and two small daughters, asleep aboard the schooner were shaken but unhurt.

A wave of curiosity capped by occasional panic swept the California coast Saturday as a tidal wave raced across the Pacific Ocean.

Hundreds of persons were evacuated from their homes in some Southland coastal towns after the State Disaster Office in San Francisco alerted law enforcement agencies.

Thousands flocked to the beaches to get a look at the phenomenon, which in most cases was not even discernible when it finally struck the Southern California coast.

POLICE SWITCHBOARDS

were swamped with inquiries. The tidal wave, spawned by a violent earthquake in the Aleutian Islands, reached Long Beach at 1:45 p.m. Coast Guard headquarters here reported.

Here it amounted to a six-inch overtide and was not visible to the naked eye. The wave measured 10 inches in the La Jolla-San Diego area, according to the Scripps Institute of Oceanography.

REDONDO BEACH police estimated "several hundred" persons were evacuated there.

A squad car equipped with a loud-speaker system announced the warning. Foot patrolmen also spread the alert.

Some of the evacuees went to the Salvation Army building. Others went to the homes of friends, as did the Martin Wilder family of 407 Hermosa Ave.

Wilder said he herded his family—wife, Mary, and daughters, Carol, 16, and Virginia, 18—into a car and sent them to a

Runaway AF Missile Found by Cowboy

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (UP)—The Air Force Saturday recovered the remains of a Matador guided missile which escaped from White Sands proving ground Feb. 21 about 25 miles west of here.

State police said the missile landed in mountainous country only a short distance west of this city of about 100,000. Earlier reports had placed the remains of the missile further away, on the slopes of Mount Taylor, nearly 100 miles west.

State policeman Bob Cook of San Fidel, who was at the scene where the missile was found, said the Matador hit in mountainous country about 25 miles west of Albuquerque.

The shattered missile was found on the Lee S. Evans ranch by Bill Smith, a cowboy.

TWO MAJOR EARTHQUAKES hit the Aleutian Islands (A) Saturday sending a series of tidal waves racing across the Pacific Ocean. Northern shore of the Hawaiian Islands (B) was hit by tidal waves and the San Francisco area (C) and coastal towns south to San Diego were alerted.—(AP Wirephoto)

Abandon Try to Salvage Plane

SEOUL, Korea (UP)—The U. S. Army called off Saturday with "great reluctance" attempts to salvage the wreckage of a U. S. Air Force Globemaster which crashed in the Na River killing 22 American servicemen.

The plane carrying 159 passengers and crew on a flight to Tokyo crashed onto a tiny sandspit in the river Feb. 22.

leading citizen said: "I don't mind making a deal that is right—but I don't like making it with a gun at my temple." Other local civic leaders have said it would be better to lose the courthouse than it would be to give in on a principle of such importance. That principle is that county supervisors should not expend such vast sums in the city of Los Angeles without allowing the people of the county to vote on the issue.

Reason given for holding up the courthouse is subsidence. It is said a new survey should be made. The fact is, the county engineers made complete surveys before the plans were approved. All factors of subsidence were taken into consideration.

There has been no change in subsidence rates or characteristics since those engineering studies were made. It is estimated by all engineers employed by the county and city that future subsidence will be about 50 per cent as much as has already occurred. All that was taken into consideration when the plans were approved. It was agreed that at the location (acquired after the county's own studies had been made) there would be no danger under structural engineering such as we now use for earthquake protection.

All this was done before the L. A. auditorium scheme was sprung on the people of the county. Downtown L. A. interests are attempting to place a $15 million parking installation which will enhance property values in the downtown area. It is a downtown promotion scheme which would be fine for Los Angeles and property owners in the downtown area but it is completely immoral to attempt to force the rest of the county taxpayers to underwrite the venture. It is good for Los Angeles, let the taxpayers of that city pay for it. If it does not interest them to that extent it should be abandoned.

Supervisor Burton Chace of Long Beach has insisted that the scheme not be placed in effect until the people have a chance to vote on it. This, the county manager and his supporters are reluctant to do. It is apparent this attitude has brought about the "squeeze play" by threatening to delay the Long Beach courthouse.

It is a dangerous situation which other county areas would be wise to observe. What is happening here can happen to them. An indication of the power exerted by the Los Angeles interests was the endorsement of the Los Angeles scheme by last year's grand jury. There was nothing before that body calling for action. But it publicly voted endorsement.

It is an indication of how the Los Angeles interests are seeking to make all of the county into a borough system of government, under the County Board of Supervisors, controlled by downtown Los Angeles interests. Giving in to such a "squeeze play" is not the way to avoid such rule. It would, however, be the way to lose our own identity and to build a dangerous machine controlling all of the county.—L.A.C.

sons to evacuate beach areas. A surprise tidal wave generated in the same Aleutian area killed 169 persons and caused 25 million dollars damage in Hawaii in 1936.

Two small villages on Kauai, Kalahai and Wainiha were virtually washed away Saturday. Twelve houses were swept out to sea in Kalahai and six in Wainiha.

POLICE SAID most of the houses were flimsy beach structures.

The Red Cross set up shelters for the homeless. Honolulu harbor was closed for eight hours and the liners Lurline and Lellani remained outside, along with several other ships. They docked about six hours behind schedule.

Ships in the harbor rocked vigorously as the tide level dropped up to 10 feet. The waves rolled in 15 to 20 minutes apart. Before each one, the ocean level dropped several feet, exposing sandy bottom.

The weather remained sunny and balmy throughout.

On Oahu, water washed through some homes and fields and left mud, sand and stranded fish behind. Several persons were reported catching fish in cane fields. One man gathered 40 pounds of stranded fish.

BUT AT WAIKIKI, across the island, one surfboard rider calmly paddled away, although the surf ran high. And a travelling circus, its tent pitched 200 yards from the shore, played a matinee to a full house.

Miss Park, 29, killed in the plane crash, was a war correspondent in Korea.

Critically injured was Paul O. Beam, 42, advertising executive and former Associated Press war correspondent, who was flying the plane. A Kahuku hospital spokesman said he was expected to recover.

New Quakes Hit Thessaly Temblor Zone

ATHENS, Greece (AP)—A new series of tremors rocked earthquake-stricken central Greece Saturday as King Paul and Queen Frederika toured the stricken area reassuring the homeless residents.

An Athens newspaper reported 300 casualties in the quakes which hit Thessaly Friday and the continuing tremors Saturday. At least 32 tremors were registered Saturday. One was felt early Saturday in Athens, about 200 miles to the southeast.

A COMMUNIQUE issued by the Ministry of Interior said one person was killed and 71 were injured since the first shock hit. The communique reported 3,350 houses were wrecked and some 10,000 persons were homeless. It said some 20,000 persons were in desperate need of food, clothing and other supplies.

Tidal-Wave Precaution Disturbs Surf Anglers

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—The ocean front and warned people to "get back."

AT SANTA CRUZ and Monterey, south of San Francisco, surfers also were ordered off the sands and the wharves. But they flocked from all areas to await arrival of the tidal waves.

Many fishermen, having cast their lines into the surf, were perturbed when officers told them to cease angling.

Tidal Waves Travel Fast

WASHINGTON, March 9 (AP)—Tidal waves such as the one reported in the Pacific today travel faster than some jet airplanes.

Capt. Elliott B. Roberts of the U. S. Coast & Geodetic Survey said the waves travel at speeds up to about 600 miles an hour in the deep ocean.

NEED FATTENIN'

U.S. Relief Asked for Rattlesnakes

OKENE, Okla., (AP)—The drought has struck another low blow—at the rattlesnake.

Here it is just three weeks until the annual rattlesnake hunt in the gypsum hills around this northwest Oklahoma wheat center, and there isn't enough meat on the rattlers to cover a cocktail cracker.

Rattlesnake meat is considered by some an hors d'oeuvre delicacy. A few eat it like beef or steak.

JACK ROBERTS, chief rattler for the sponsoring International Rattlesnake Hunters Association, Saturday reported the sad news—to rattlesnake hunters, that is—that a pre-hunt survey is discouraging.

"There hasn't been enough for them to eat to keep a rattlesnake alive," Roberts moaned. "We have applied to the U. S. Department of Agriculture for drought disaster aid but I don't know if it will make a decision in time. We also have a big feed mill cooking up something to fatten the snakes."

For those who have never gotten close to a rattlesnake, it eats rodents, other small animals, small birds, eggs and anything else it can sink its fangs into.

ABOUT 25,000 persons from more than 15 states are expected.

Nasser Organizes 1-Party System

CAIRO, Egypt (AP)—The newspaper Al Shabab said Saturday President Nasser will issue a decree next week setting up a "national union" which will function as Egypt's single political party.

The paper said the date of elections for the first Egyptian parliament under the Nasser regime will be announced within three weeks.

Labor Probe Tapes 'Dirty Evidence'

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Senate Rackets Investigating Committee said Saturday some of its evidence is "too obscene . . . too dirty" to be used in a public hearing.

Robert F. Kennedy, 31-year-old committee counsel, said the evidence in question consists of tape and wire recordings of conversations. He said the recordings were made secretly by racketeer James B. (Big Jim) Elkins of Portland, Ore., when Elkins thought rival racketeers and some teamsters union officials were about to "frame" him.

friend's home atop a hill overlooking Redondo Beach.

He said he took some clothing, his dog and camera and departed in a second car.

"You know, it's very strange," he said. "You look around at the things around you—the home you own, the 27-inch television set, all sorts of things—and wondered what to save."

"I took my wife's clothes, my dog, and my polaroid camera," he said. "I remember that as I ran for my car," he continued, "one of my neighbors who refused to evacuate yelled at me to take something more important than clothes."

WIDRIG SAID it took his family but a few minutes to travel the three to four blocks to the safety of the hill, but by the time he left, the traffic was so heavy it required him 45 minutes to cover the same distance.

"The way people were running around," a Redondo Beach teenage girl commented, "you would have thought the tidal wave was crashing against the back door."

Observers said some residents ran into the streets in their bathrobes.

In Manhattan Beach, police kept persons off the strand and the pier there.

Hermosa Beach police said they issued a warning but canceled it a few minutes later.

IN REAL BEACH, police advised persons on the pier to leave and instructed those on the beach to be watchful.

"We didn't close the pier," a Sea Beach officer said, "but people left of their own volition. We left it to their discretion."

At Huntington Beach, the police department said the pier was cleared.

tidal wave. They said there was no alarm among residents.

Laguna Beach police notified persons on the beach there, adding "there weren't many there because of the rain."

AVALON HARBORMASTER Chick Upton said Catalina Island residents in the vicinity of Avalon "didn't even know there was a tidal wave around."

On the other hand, at Ocean-side, some 5,000 persons crowded cliffs above the ocean to await the big wave. Authorities closed beach concessions, and police barreled all streets leading to the ocean front.

A quarter-mile-long pier at Ocean-side was evacuated as well as five small stores along it for three hours. Authorities removed barricades and reopened the pier when reports reached them that the tidal wave had dissipated at sea.

LOS ANGELES police sent three helicopters aloft for reconnaissance over the Venice area. Santa Monica lifeguards said they observed nothing unusual along the strand in their area.

Farther north, numerous fishing craft left Morro Bay anchorage for deeper water as a precautionary measure.

At Bolinas, 15 air miles north of San Francisco, the tidal movement passed unnoticed by watchers on the cliffs. But to those on the beaches a slight difference could be discerned shortly after 1 p. m.

Slowly a clam beach would be covered to a depth of an inch or two. Five minutes later the water had receded. Then the beach would again be flooded. This occurred three times.

AT ARCATA, also in Northern California, officers reported difficulty in keeping people back from the water. Thousands of spectators gathered along San Francisco beaches after the alert was sounded.

The alert, which caused all the excitement in California, was broadcast by Stanley Pierson, director of the California State Disaster Office. It was directed to all coastal sheriff and police stations.

In his report, Pierson said he was issuing the alert "only as a precautionary measure."

A grizzly Redondo Beach veteran of high tides refused to leave his beachfront home when the alert reached him.

He sat on his front porch, accompanied by a bottle of liquid fortification.

Fresno Elected

Ernest Crutchfield of Fresno was elected president of the Pest Control Operators of California, Inc., at the close of the annual convention Saturday in the Wilton Hotel.

Other officers include Kenneth Scott, Glendale, first vice president and Donald Sturdevant, of San Bernardino, second vice president.

ENERGETIC THIEVES

Swipe Huge Church Sign

Hardworking thieves stole a 4x5-foot sign from in front of the Christian Faith Church, 3433 Studebaker Rd., police reported Saturday afternoon.

The sign, valued at $100, had been anchored in the ground and officers surmised that several hours work was required to dig it out of the ground.

L.B. Police Seize Bookie Suspect; Accused of $10,000-a-Day Play

Accused of operating a $10,000 a day bookie operation in his home, Forrest C. Fowler, of 2060 Conquistador Ave., was arrested by police Saturday on suspicion of bookmaking.

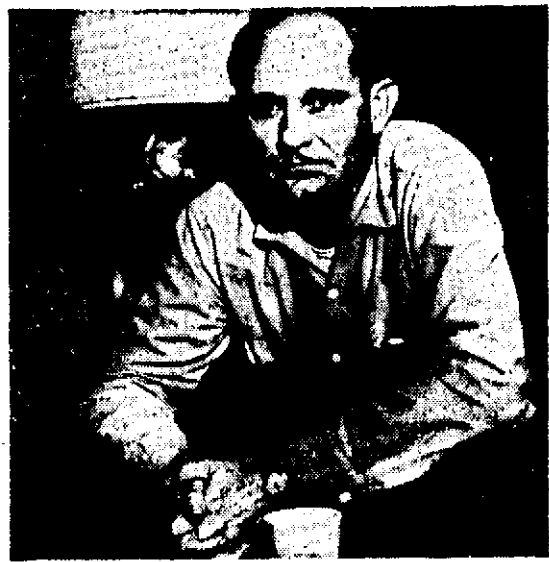

Police said Fowler had been under surveillance for several days after they had received an anonymous tip about the operation.

BETTING MARKERS, and receipts for Friday amounting to $9,000 were found in the house, police said.

Arresting officers, Detective Inspectors Leonard Hermanson, R. R. Martin and Policewoman Eleanor Grubb said they operated the phones in the house after the arrest of Fowler and received several calls from persons wanting to place bets.

Fowler, police said, had been arrested in 1952 for illegal bookmaking in Bellflower.

He was released on $1,000 bail.

Bones Dug Up Said to Be Old Indian

Bones of an Indian, dead several centuries according to Long Beach police, were uncovered by a fence digger in North Long Beach Saturday.

Jack Sweet, 32, an employee of a fence company, uncovered a skull, jaw and arm bones of a human being when digging the foundation for a fence at the home of Melvin R. Wagner, 49 Ellis St.

Detective Inspectors Harry P. Finch and Robert P. Shaw said the body had been buried, probably several hundred years ago.

The bones were sent to the County Coroner's office, Los Angeles.

Liberians Bid Nixon Farewell

MONROVIA, Liberia (CP)—Vice President Richard M. Nixon ended his three-day visit to Liberia Saturday and took off on a 3,000-mile flight across equatorial Africa to Entebbe, Uganda.

Nixon, beginning to show signs of his grueling African tour and his bout with influenza, looked forward to the long flight as a chance to get some much-needed rest. He is scheduled to arrive in Uganda on Africa's east coast today.

Crewmen replaced one engine in his four-engine plane Saturday and made a 40-minute test-hop before the Vice President climbed aboard. He looked a little wan after a restless night, aggravated by a breakdown of the air conditioner in his suite.

Suez Toll Claimed by Egypt

(Combined Wire Services)
CAIRO — Egypt's information director declared Saturday that all Suez Canal tolls must be paid henceforth to Egyptian authorities. He rejected a U. S.-backed proposal for collection by a neutral agency which would split the revenue with Egypt 50-50.
"The Egyptian government will not accept any such proposal because it violates Egypt's rights according to the 1884 convention on the Suez Canal," Abdel Kader Hatem said in an interview.
In Washington, President Eisenhower signed his name to an historic declaration pledging that the United States is prepared to fight if necessary to protect the Middle East from Communist aggression.

EVEN AS the President signed the Mideast Doctrine resolution, Egypt raised the prospect of new tension in the Middle East by denying Israeli ships passage through the Suez Canal. Israeli Ambassador Abba Eban called at the State Department to protest.

The declaration, backed by Congress and popularly known as the "Eisenhower Doctrine," closes the last major gap in U. S. defense commitments for territory surrounding Russia and Red China.

Methods for collection of the Suez tolls—running around 100 million dollars a year—have been disputed since President Nasser's nationalization last July of Egyptian assets of the Paris-based Suez Canal Co.

The issue returns to the spotlight now that (1) Israel finally has evacuated the Gaza Strip and Sharm El Sheikh, the last bits of territory she won in the British-French-Israeli invasion of Egypt last fall, and (2) the canal is cleared of all but two of the major hulks blocking the channel.

The United States, Britain and France suggested to U. N. Secretary General Dag Hammarskjöld last month the tolls might be paid to the World Bank or some other international agency, which would give Egypt half for operating expenses and impound the rest until the toll issue is finally settled. Before the invasion, ships of Britain and France paid their tolls to accounts of the old company in Paris or London.

THE SHOWDOWN will come when tankers and other vessels up to 10,000 tons head into the canal after the U. N. salvage fleet removes the 841-ton tug Edgar Bonnet, sunk midway in 103-mile-long waterway, and the 1,461-ton Egyptian frigate Abu-El, which went down four miles from the southern end.

Egypt has started preliminary work toward their removal. U. S. Lt. Gen. Raymond A. Wheeler (Ret.), head of the U. N. salvage operation, predicted Saturday it would take three or four weeks just to examine and remove the Edgar Bonnet after the Egyptians give his crew the green light.

Speedboat Victim Wed in Las Vegas

MARRIED IN Las Vegas, Boni Ann Buchler, 25, a daughter of Charles M. Blalack, 29, are shown at the Hotel Sahara where they are honeymooning. Miss Buchler lost an arm and a leg in a speed boat accident in 1953. She had planned to be a dancer. — (AP Photo)

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (UP)—Boni Buchler, 27, one-time airline stewardess who lost an arm and a leg in a speedboat accident, was married here Saturday.

The bridegroom is Charles M. Blalack, 27, a San Marino, Calif., broker.

The wedding, performed at the Little White Chapel by the Rev. John Whitehead, climaxed a romance of about eight months.

Boni, who lost her left leg and arm when she fell from a boat on Lake Arrowhead, Calif., in August of 1953, wore an artificial limb during the ceremony. Blalack placed the wedding ring on a finger of her right hand.

The couple had a wedding dinner of hamburgers at a drive-in following the early morning ceremony.

Cancer May Be Caused by Virus

HOUSTON, Tex. (UP)—A research scientist Saturday exhibited photographs of incredibly tiny particles in cancerous leukemic cells taken from humans, mice and chickens and identified them as viruses.

The diseased cells were shot through with little dark specks. They showed up under magnifications of 30,000 to 150,000 times.

THIS FINDING gives an enormous boost to a growing belief of medical scientists that viruses are a cause of cancer, and perhaps the main cause. It was made by Dr. Leon Dmochowski of M. D. Anderson Hospital and Tumor Institute here and presented at the concluding session of the 11th annual symposium on fundamental research in cancer. The symposium is sponsored by this branch of the University of Texas.

DR. DMOCHOWSKI made no claim that these viruses caused

Meeting Set

Al-Anon Family Group of San Pedro will hold its 12th anniversary meeting at 8:30 p.m., Wednesday, in the YWCA, 437 W. 9th St., San Pedro.

The meeting is open to persons interested in the problem of alcoholism.

the cancers in question. The main significance, he reported, is that the work places the virus "at the scene of the crime."

The next step will be to put these viruses into test animals and see what they do to the healthy tissues.

If they produce cancerous growths in the test, the way will be open toward making a vaccine against leukemia, one of the most damaging kinds of malignancy. Only yesterday Dr. B. R. Burmester, a government virus expert, announced the production of a vaccine against leukemia in chickens.

The tissue samples which yielded the startling pictures were taken from the lymph glands of a human being; the lymph glands, spleen, liver and thymus gland of a mouse, and the spleen and liver of a chicken. Normal tissues from these sites do not contain the particles, Dr. Dmochowski said.

In the formation of blood, leukemia great abnormalities appear in the number and structure of blood cells. Immature but long-lived white blood cells interfere with the functioning of the blood as a whole and produce complications which cause death.

GROCEER FEEDS BURGLAR'S FAMILY

Grocer Raquel Cordova (left) of Denver, who captured Alfonso Vigil burglarizing his store last week, learned that Vigil's wife and nine children were without food. Saturday he bundled up cases of food from his store and delivered them to the jailed man's family. Mrs. Vigil, 30, with 2-month-old Roger in her arms, thanks him. Three other children look on—Paul, 5, Jimmie, 8, and Harry, 1.—(AP Wirephoto)

Robbed Grocer Santa Claus to Suspect's Wife, 9 Tots

DENVER (AP)—A grocer who captured a burglar in his store played Santa Claus to the suspect's wife and nine children Saturday night.

Raquel Cordova, 62, took eight boxes of fruits, vegetables, meats and canned goods from his store and delivered them personally to the five-room apartment where Mrs. Corina Vigil, 30, and her nine children looked on in awe.

"I would like for those kids to eat," Cordova said.

HE LEARNED of their plight after he captured Alfonso Vigil, 30, in Cordova's grocery store Thursday night.

In his city jail cell, the fearful Vigil said: "It was a wonderful thing for Mr. Cordova to do, after what I did to him."

He said there "wasn't a stick to eat" when he resorted to burglary to feed his children, who range in age from 2 months to 11 years. He has no previous police record, officers said.

Leaving the Vigils' $39-a-month public housing project quarters, Cordova told Mrs. Vigil:

"Let me know if there's anything more I can do."

Combo $10, $1 Bills in N. Y. Worth $350

NEW YORK (AP)—A printer's error that is worth about $350 to rare money collectors has turned up in the New York area.

It's a $10 bill on one side and a $1 note on the other. The Chase Manhattan Bank says four others like it turned up about two years ago.

Collectors are looking for 13 more, because U. S. currency is printed in sheets of 18 notes.

Woman Puts Paper Over Head, Killed

A heavy rain, causing poor visibility, was blamed for a traffic death Saturday.

Mildred Spawr, 59, of 1061 E. 16th St., died of multiple fractures and internal injuries in St. Mary's Hospital after being struck by a car driven by Floyd L. Osborne, 31, of 1028 Alamos Ave., at 16th St. and Alamos Ave.

Osborne told police that the woman stepped off the curb in front of his auto with a newspaper over her head to ward off the heavy rain. He said he was going 15 miles an hour at the time because of the poor visibility. He was not cited.

In other accidents Saturday: Driver Antonio LaGrasso, 24, U.S. Coast Guard, suffered nose lacerations and his passenger, George S. Biswell, 22, also U.S. Coast Guard, a possible concussion when their car hit a parked car on Pacific Coast Hwy. near Caspian Ave.

James F. Fielding, 27, of 11454 Copeland St., Lynwood, suffered a broken left knee and face lacerations when his car jumped the curb and hit a tree in front of 2239 Daisy Ave.

Crosses Nation for Wedding, Dies in East

A Long Beach woman who crossed the nation to attend her granddaughter's wedding died Saturday in Augusta, Ga.

She was Mrs. Walter Mills Strong, 5801 Garford St., whose two sons are in the ministry—Dr. Robert Strong of Augusta's First Presbyterian Church and Dr. William T. Strong of Los Angeles.

She went to Georgia in mid-February to attend the wedding of her granddaughter, Patricia Strong, and became ill a few days later.

Other survivors include her husband, Walter W., and a daughter, Mrs. Laura S. Hodge, the latter of Downey.

Fonda and Countess Married by Jurist

NEW YORK (AP)—Stage and film actor Henry Fonda and Italian Countess Aldera Franchetti were married Saturday in a simple civil ceremony witnessed only by the bridegroom's family.

It was the fourth marriage for Fonda, who is 51, and the first for his 24-year-old bride. Supreme Court Justice S. M. Gold performed the ceremony in Fonda's home at 151 East 74th St. Peter Fonda, 17, a student at Westminster Academy, Simsbury, Conn., was his father's best man. Mrs. Maria Stella Serenas, of Rome, Italy, a childhood friend of the bride, was matron of honor.

Present at the wedding were Fonda's daughter, Jane, a Vassar College student, and his brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. John Peacock of Omaha, Neb., and another sister, Mrs. John Schoentgen of California.

The couple postponed a wedding trip because Fonda still has another week's work on a new picture being filmed here.

While performing on the picture set last Thursday Fonda got a silver of steel in his right eye and minor surgery was required. He showed no trace of the injury at the wedding.

Fonda formerly was married to actress Margaret Sullivan. His second wife was Frances Brokaw and his third was Susan Blanchard. His first and third marriages ended in divorce. His second wife died.

Alberta to Pay Each Citizen $22 in Oil Dividends

EDMONTON, Alta. (AP)—The Province of Alberta will make a taxpayer's dream come true this year. It plans to give each of its citizens a $22 dividend out of revenues collected from natural resources.

But the windfall won't be all gravy. The federal government will hold the dividend as taxable income, Revenue Minister J. J. McCann announced in commons in Ottawa.

Provincial treasurer Edgar Hinman announced in his budget address last Friday that the Social Credit government will give a yearly oil royalty to every Albertan over 21 if he has been a resident here for over five years. Each will receive approximately $22 as this year's dividend.

Polio 'Season' Near; Shot Demand Mounts

WASHINGTON (AP)—A government spokesman said Saturday the demand for Salk polio vaccine has picked up sharply since January but there is no shortage.

The spokesman said a backlog of 26 million cubic centimeters of the vaccine that piled up in production plants during the fall and winter has now moved out to wholesalers, druggists and doctors.

Although this means producers' supplies are low it does not mean there is a current shortage. The vaccine has merely moved into the distribution system for eventual injections.

In Detroit, Parke Davis & Co., one of the nation's largest suppliers of Salk vaccine, said its supplies are exhausted and no more will be available for about a month.

A SPOKESMAN for the firm said many state and local public health agencies have been paying drug supply houses during the last few days, asking for vaccine, but none has been available.

The principal suppliers are Lilly and Co., Indianapolis; Pitman-Moore, Indianapolis; Sharpe & Dohme, Philadelphia, and Wyeth, near Philadelphia.

Lilly said it would have no vaccine for a month. A spokesman said it takes several months to manufacture and test a batch of vaccine.

The Health, Education and Welfare Department had no current figures on how many additional persons have received shots from the 26 million cubic centimeters backlog, enough for one shot for 26 million people.

HIT IT SAID the sudden movement of the backlog from production plants indicates more people want the shots with the approach of another polio season.

The disease year begins April 1 but cases do not begin mounting until May and the peak is not reached until August. The disease hits heaviest first in the South and then moves north.

THE NATIONAL Foundation for Infantile Paralysis reports that 8 million persons up to the age of 40 have received no vaccine at all.

As of Jan. 1, 11 million had received only one shot, 25 million had received two and nine million, three.

The foundation said that of 45 million persons who have received vaccine, it is estimated that 40 million were under the age of 20. And most of these were under 10 years of age or expectant mothers.

This means that hardly any headway has been made in vaccinating young adults. The foundation is making a special effort to get this age group inoculated.

African Program Boost Proposed

WASHINGTON (AP)—A Senate Foreign Relations subcommittee reported Saturday that U.S. "Point Four" programs in Latin America should be continued at present levels but that the African program should be stepped up considerably.

The findings were included in an 11-page report by a subcommittee on technical assistance programs headed by Sen. Mike Mansfield (D-Mont.). They were based on on-the-spot studies in the two continents.

Suspect in Tourists' Mexico Disappearance Tries Suicide

ACAPULCO, Mexico (AP)—Travel agent Luis Fenton tried unsuccessfully to commit suicide Saturday night after he confessed planning the $80,000 robbery of two missing American tourists.

Fenton, who had just implicated two tourist guides in the disappearance and possible murder of Attorney Joseph Michel and Mrs. Edith Hallock, slashed his wrists with a tequila glass.

Detectives applied emergency tourniquets, preventing the loss of blood, and doctors said the wounds were "of no importance."

The 35-year-old tourist agent and the pair of guides were undergoing intensive questioning as police sought a "quick solution" to the mystery surrounding the disappearance of the two New Yorkers on Feb. 20.

Fenton at first admitted "setting up" a robbery of the couple but said he had "no idea" whether they were dead or alive.

Later, however, he said he and his assistant, Daniel Rios, beat the tourists to death with a chain and disposed of the bodies in the ocean off Acapulco.

He said he tried to kill himself because "I know what the newspapers are going to say about me tomorrow."

Officers believed the couple dead but none of the three men arrested would admit killing them.

City and federal police renewed the search for the two

Hospital Campaign Challenges Area

CROWDED CORRIDORS like these are a common sight in Long Beach hospitals, where growth has lagged far behind the boom in population. The youngster in the wheelchair should be undergoing treatment at a children's hospital, with its specialized facilities. When the planned $14,500,000 expansion of hospitals is completed, the crowded conditions will end and there will be—among other things—a completely equipped children's hospital within the new Memorial Hospital.—(Staff Photo.)

Seaside's Progress Recorded

From a humble, 16-bed beginning in a house at Junipero and Broadway, Seaside Memorial Hospital has grown since 1907 to its present position of 370 beds, 55 bassinets.

A record of more than 20,000 in-patients and 39,000 out-patients were treated last year, and 2,700 babies were born there.

Fifty-eight community leaders, representing many groups, organizations and professions, serve without pay as the board of trustees for this non-profit hospital.

With other hospitals, Seaside struggled to keep up with the tide of population growth through the years with expansion in 1911, 1919, 1926 and 1932. During the war years present buildings were remodeled to use every available space for beds, increasing capacity at one time to 423 beds. This was economically unsound, with service for only 250 beds, but a way of meeting an urgent and drastic need.

SINCE THE WAR many of these areas have proved so unsuitable for patient care that the bed total has been cut back to 370.

Still these conditions persist: A ward for 48 women with two lavatories.

Two wings with three floors each that are one block down the corridor from the dietary department.

Surgical facilities for a 250-bed hospital.

Inadequate children's facilities in non-fire-resistant buildings with room doors so small that beds cannot be wheeled out.

A critical shortage of clinic facilities, treating 39,000 out-patients a year.

ALSO THERE ARE no psychiatric facilities.

No contagious disease facilities.

No facilities to resume the School of Nursing discontinued in 1940 to provide bed space.

Cramped, dark, dingy patient rooms.

Inadequate facilities for X-ray, laboratory, physical therapy, dietary and laundry—all built to provide care for only 250 beds.

Inadequate emergency facilities to provide for the more than 12,000 emergency patients each year.

Contractor Meet

WASHINGTON (CP) — Some 1,700 leaders of the construction industry will meet here next week for the 38th annual convention of the Associated General Contractors of America. The sessions will begin Monday and run through Thursday.

Doctors Over Quota, Now It's Up to You

"almost anything planned in the new construction in the hospital program," explained H. E. (Bud) Ridings Jr., campaign general chairman.

Memorials range from a few thousand to a half-million dollars. Units which may be endowed include rooms, items of equipment, even entire wards.

"Through this plan of memorials, we can join the long line of distinguished persons who, in various ways, have placed their constructive mark upon mankind," Ridings said.

"It certainly is not far-fetched to believe that the lives of our loved ones, or even our own lives, may be saved through this highly-personal humanitarian program that now is opening in Long Beach."

ALTHOUGH THE major memorial gifts division will have the biggest single financial share of the campaign, the women's division will have the greatest number of prospects.

This division is headed by Mrs. Donnell V. Davis, chairman, and Mrs. John B. Fowler, associate chairman.

Their volunteer organization of 900 persons will call on about 6,000 prospects—the majority of them businessmen with fewer than 10 employees.

What will the $1,000,000 mean? It will mean successful completion of a $14,500,000 hospital expansion program which authorities say is long overdue in Long Beach.

Hospital growth hasn't kept pace with population growth.

Occupancy of hospitals is running as high as 108 per cent of capacity. Beds are placed in halls to take care of the overflow.

Much equipment is old, out-dated. If there were a mass emergency, there would be no margin of hospital facilities to care for the extra patients.

UNITED HOSPITAL FUND officials have listed 50 major improvements which will be provided by the expansion.

Among these are:

A total of 775 new hospital beds for adults and children.

A modern psychiatric nursing unit.

A modern children's hospital within a general hospital.

Expanded clinic areas.

Modern blood storage units.

A modern cobalt bomb for radiological work.

Addition of a modern school of nursing (which will be run in conjunction with the new, 400-bed Memorial Hospital which will be operated by trustees of the present Seaside Memorial Hospital.)

The list goes on, but it adds up to one thing:

The kind of hospital facilities Long Beach needs.

Hospital Case Load Multiplied

Dedicated on July 15, 1924, with a start of 100 beds, Community Hospital gave care to 1,935 patients in its first year of existence and 302 babies were born.

The institution, which owes its beginnings to the vision of Fillmore Condit, added 50 beds in 1943. In 1949, just 25 years after its start, there were 8,400 patients cared for and 1,328 babies born—a 400 per cent increase.

By 1956, the record jumped to 10,056 in-patients and 1,782 babies—an increase of 500 per cent—while the bed increase for that 32-year period was only 50 per cent.

From 1942 on, while Long Beach went through the frenzy of war years, patient beds in the corridors were commonplace in Community Hospital. Over-extended laboratory and X-ray facilities worked far into the nights to meet the demand.

JUST UNDER 4,000 surgical procedures were conducted in 1946. And 10 years later, in 1956, with the same overcrowded facilities, surgeons at Community carried out almost 5,000 surgical procedures. There was no increase in space, although a continuous modernization program has been followed.

During the past year, Community had a census at one time of 108 per cent, or 8 per cent greater than its bed capacity. Patients were jammed into halls or already overcrowded rooms. An occupancy of 85 per cent is considered the maximum for most efficient operation.

Community Hospital is governed by a 20-member board of directors who serve voluntarily and without pay.

At present:

There are inadequate beds for acute cases.

There are no beds for contagious cases.

No beds for short-term psychiatric care.

Children's care facilities are not sufficient.

Services such as X-ray laboratory, medical records, storage, laundry, dietary, physical therapy and others are pressed to meet the demands made upon them.

TO LONG BEACH CITIZENS

An Open Letter

Following is an open letter addressed to CITIZENS OF THE LONG BEACH AREA by H. E. (Bud) Ridings Jr., general chairman, United Hospital Fund:

Nothing is MORE important to YOU and YOUR family than adequate health facilities... especially when you need the services of our voluntary general hospitals. In case of a city-wide emergency the chances of you and your family receiving adequate hospital care are extremely remote. WHY? Because Long Beach is dangerously short of hospital beds. We must balance our health needs with maximum efficiency and minimum cost.

Providing the necessary hospital beds and related facilities is the sole objective of the United Hospital Fund of Long Beach. For that reason a dedicated group of volunteers is conducting this program to raise $4,000,000 to equip the hospitals, which will be built as the result of the overwhelmingly favorable vote for the $10,500,000 bond issue.

During the past months the Independent and Press-Telegram have been telling you the facts of our critical hospital problems. Something DEFINITE, IMMEDIATE AND ADEQUATE has been—and is to be—done about it. We must meet the challenge head-on.

Complete unity of community support, individual and corporate, must be achieved if this program, vital to the physical welfare of all, is to succeed.

We are confident Long Beach will measure up to this challenge with fine cooperation arising from its sober appreciation of the great need involved.

Sincerely,

H. E. (BUD) RIDINGS, JR.

Osteopathic Doctors Serve 100,000 Here

Osteopathic Hospital officials estimate about 100,000 people in Long Beach and immediate vicinity are served by the osteopathic profession.

The first osteopathic hospital in Long Beach was founded in 1932. Known as the Pacific Clinic Hospital, it was located at 1036 Broadway and served 127 patients, including 28 births during its first year of existence.

Progressive additions included Magnolia Hospital, opened in 1934 with 18 beds. Seventeen more beds were added in 1940 and a 20-bed unit was constructed in 1941. By that time there were more than 200 births a year and about 1,200 patients were being cared for annually.

IN 1944 the Los Cerritos Maternity Hospital was added with facilities provided for 20 obstetrical patients. Births jumped to 1,000 by 1946 and patient load as early as 1934 was more than 3,500.

The Long Beach Polyclinic was added in 1947 to provide for those people unable to pay for private physicians.

Organizing for the future, members of the osteopathic profession formed Osteopathic Hospital of Long Beach, Inc., as a non-profit organization in 1945. Following various fund projects, the 92-bed Osteopathic Hospital was opened on June 12, 1956.

The governing body of this non-profit hospital is composed of civic leaders from many walks in life who serve in guiding the hospital's operation without pay, as a community service.

IN THE PAST 10 years the patient load has increased to the point that facilities in existence before 1956 have cared for 38,873 patients and there have been 8,880 births.

But even with the 92 new beds, the program for Osteopathic Hospital is barely half completed. Already rooms are crowded, surgeries are over-taxed, maternity areas are full, X-ray and laboratory technicians are hard pressed to keep up with their work.

Here, too, the need for trained professional nurses is badly felt as once again the lack of nurses training school in Long Beach forces officials to go far afield in nurse recruiting.

NURSES REPRESENTING the three hospitals taking part in the United Hospital Fund campaign have an impromptu roundtable discussion. Hospital employees exceeded their gift goal of $100,000.

TIME PAYMENTS, TOO

Fund Gifts Qualify for Tax Exemptions

Donations to United Hospital Fund's $4,000,000 campaign may be paid over a four-year period, fund officials point out.

Both the federal and state governments encourage gifts by allowing income tax exemptions, Harry Buffum, campaign associate chairman, said.

"These exemptions make possible large investment gifts at a minimum cost," he explained.

GIFTS ARE deductible in computing individual or corporate federal income taxes. Unusual savings may be realized by contributing stocks, bonds or other capital assets which have increased in value since they were acquired, Buffum said.

"FOR EXAMPLE, a person

'THE THING'

Pony-Bufferalo Riddle Grumbles Like a Pig

Glenn Spiller's walking riddle grunts like a pig, lopes like a pony, has the cleft feet of a cow and is predominantly buffalo. But don't ask him the answer to the riddle. Spiller doesn't know—either. Gene Holter of Anaheim, who stages wild animal shows at county and state fairs, brought the critter into Spiller's Lakewood Stables, 11365 E. Carson St., a couple weeks ago. He said he captured the horned animal in the mountains of an unidentified western state. He guesses its age at about 4 years.

SPILLER, AT WHOSE stables the animal has been boarding, promptly dubbed his guest "The Thing."

About that riddle—experts at the recent Indo fair couldn't be sure of the critter's breed.

However, Spiller has one clue to the preferences of "The Thing." When it's turned out to pasture, it invariably elects to horse around with the ponies.

Geological Films Slated

"Geological Wonderland" will be the subject of a program featuring Dr. Richard Miller of Long Beach State College as guest-speaker Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. in Alamitos Branch Library, 1836 E. 3rd St.

Films to be screened include "If the Beginning," a documentary recreating the formation of the Grand Canyon, and "Lake George Expedition" which shows the summer break-up of the giant Knik Glacier north of Anchorage, Alaska.

Altadena Wife Killed in Crash

TUCSON, Ariz., (UP) — Mrs. Therese A. Dean, 21, of Altadena, Calif., was fatally injured Saturday when her car overturned two miles north of Tucson.

Her husband, Muriel E. Dean, 25, received a possible ankle fracture in the accident.

The Arizona Highway Patrol reported that Mrs. Dean apparently fell asleep while driving and her auto went off the left side of the road and turned over.

Body of Man Found Shot; Listed Suicide

SAN PEDRO—The body of a 75-year-old man with a gunshot wound through his mouth and head was found in the tule weeds a few yards from the water at Lake Machado, one quarter of a mile north of Anaheim St., near Normandie Ave. late Saturday.

Police identified the man as Richard Guyer Imboden. Identification was made through a driver's license and a bank book, which gave his address as Post Office Box 350, Waveria.

Police said the man had been dead for at least two days.

Police found a .38 caliber revolver alongside the body and listed Imboden's death as a suicide.

Imboden's bank book showed a balance of $1,258.73, police said.

YELLOW KID STARTED IT

Comics 60 Years Old

80 Million Read Funnies Daily in American Homes

NEW YORK (AP) — During one of New York's periodic newspaper delivery strikes, the late Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia rushed to a radio microphone to perform a singular public service.

He read the funnies — presumably to the kiddies, although Trendex might have reported a sizable audience of adults if the mayor had a sponsor.

Today, as in LaGuardia's day, the comic pages constitute a daily reading habit for an estimated 80 million adults and kiddies across the country, a habit that has successfully defied the threat of movies and television.

People who read the funnies every day—and few will admit not being addicts—cannot recall a time when the nation has been without them, just as veteran readers cannot remember when Orphan Annie last got a new dress.

DESPITE THIS ageless and timeless quality of comic characters, the comics themselves did have a beginning, just 60 years ago—an event celebrated this week by cartoonists and their loyal fans.

Cultural historians, who judge prehistoric man by the feeble reindeer he drew on the walls of a cave, should find an interesting judgment in modern man's most popular art form: six decades of color comics, stretching from the debut of "The Yellow Kid" in 1896 to the latest episodes of "Dennis the Menace."

The comics emerged as the most coveted spoils in the great turn of the century circulation war between Joseph Pulitzer's New York World and William Randolph Hearst's New York Journal. The Yellow Kid, a saga of slum life begun by Richard F. Outcault in the World, was responsible for the label "yellow journalism" applied to newspapers of that era.

Why yellow? The color was a technical expedient. The four color rotary press had been invented several years before and all colors except yellow seemed to work fine. Charles Sallburgh, engraving room foreman of the World, found that tallow wax kept yellow from running and celebrated his discovery by liberally dousing Outcault's drawings with the color.

THE YELLOW KID, a title supplied by the readers and not the artist, was a hit from the moment he appeared on the World's color pages and soon set a familiar comic pattern by jumping to Hearst's Journal.

This amoeba-like quality of comics, sub-dividing into cells and continuing separate but similar existences under different names in competing papers, results from the fact that most strips are owned by the newspaper or syndicate and not the cartoonist.

Rudolph Dirks, who established the Katzenjammer Kids in the Journal in 1897, hopped to the World in 1913 and continued the same characters under the title "The Captain and the Kids," while H. H. Knerr took over on the original strip. Both are still going strong.

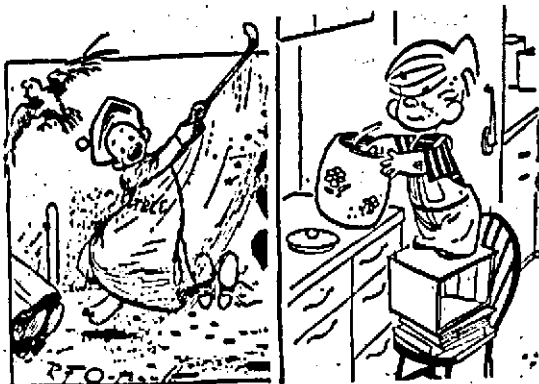

Similarly, the comic pages now show an amazingly similar Major Hoople and Judge Puffie, a "There Ought to Be a Law" and "They'll Do It Every Time."

Many strips are continued by different writers and different artists, long after their originators die or move on to other papers and other syndicates to create new comics. The Gumps, Wash Tubbs and Peter Rabbit are but a few among many examples.

IN RARE INSTANCES, a strip may be permanently retired as a measure of gratitude to the genius of its creator. Such was the case with George Herriman's "Krazy Kat," the first cartoon to win a wide following among intellectuals.

The changing nature of comic characters often belies their origin. How many readers know that Dixie Dugan began her comic strip life as a chorus girl, that there once was a Mutt but no Jeff, that Captain Easy, Nancy and others began as relatively minor characters, that the Captain and Mama in the Katzenjammer Kids have never been united in bonds of matrimony?

Comics change. The subtle witticisms and satire of Pope are a far cry from the blunt Junior has had to move over slapstick of The Yellow Kid, at the comic pages to make But throughout the six decades room for Daddy.

From Yellow Kid to The Menace

Pendleton Marine Seized on 3 Counts

SAN JUAN CAPISTRANO—A Camp Pendleton Marine was booked by Orange County sheriffs deputies Saturday on suspicion of kidnaping, assault, burglary and robbery.

Deputies arrested Thomas H. Cole, 19, after George Dawson of 31811 Hwy. 101, complained Cole had attacked and robbed him in his apartment Friday night.

The kidnaping, Dawson said, occurred more than two weeks ago, when he gave a ride to Cole and another hitchhiker, Marine. The two forced him at knife point to drive them to Long Beach, Dawson said.

THEY TOOK his wallet and watch, threatening to "take care" of him if he called police, Dawson added.

He said he did not contact officers, fearing reprisal.

Then Friday night Cole plus two more Marine companions forced their way into his apartment, Dawson said. Cole knocked him down in the kitchen and when he "came to," Dawson related, his wallet and his shirt were gone.

He said he staggered to the window and managed to obtain the license number of the car as the trio drove away. The auto was stopped by police in Laguna Beach where officers arrested Cole.

New Italian Bike 'Boon' to Commuter

NEW YORK (AP)—Italy's latest contender for U. S. consumer dollars is a flamboyantly styled, lightweight racing bicycle with 10 forward speeds. The manufacturer, E. Bianchi & Co., of Milan, says a trained athlete can pedal it along at 60 miles an hour.

According to Bianchi's executive director, Luigi Venosta, the new bike is unlike anything on the market today.

"It's designed," he states, "for teenagers and commuters."

THE VEHICLE is coated with a chrome-based iridescent paint that glows (colors range from pale bronze to light blue—the favorite right now is lilac). It has 28-inch wheels (two inches larger in diameter than those of the conventional U. S. bike), a complicated gearshift mechanism and hand-operated brakes. The bike weighs less than 23 pounds.

Storms Lash Japan

Tokyo (AP)—Heavy snow and rain storms lashed north and central Japan Saturday at sea, two fishing vessels with a total crew of 18 were reported missing, Iwate Prefecture, 300 miles north of Tokyo, reported 23 inches of snow.

It sells for $135.

It's Venosta's expressed hope that commuters and others of the station wagon set will make the Bianchi bike as fashionable as the Jaguar sports car. The commuter, he explains, can ride the bike to the station weekdays and pedal it in the country weekends for sport and health.

CC Urges Plan for Budget

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Council of State Chambers of Commerce Saturday listed ways in which it said President Eisenhower's record $71.8 billion budget could be trimmed by $7.5 billion.

This would leave the budget for the fiscal year 1958 at $64.3 billion. The council said the Eisenhower Administration came into office in 1953 "with a commitment to cut the Federal budget to $60 billion."

It urged the Administration and Congress to "begin immediately" seeking ways and means of "reaching the promised $60 billion goal which is only 10 per cent less than was spent in the fiscal year 1956."

THE COUNCIL said $3 billion on the new budget could be saved on military spending by adopting two measures: a proposal by Adm. Arthur W. Radford, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, to reduce armed service personnel, and for Congress to force a more realistic unification of the armed services.

The additional $4.5 billion could be saved, the council said, by:

1—Rejecting new spending programs; rejecting proposals to expand or extend certain federal programs beyond their present termination dates; reduction in Federal civilian personnel to two million; curtailing of spending on authorized public works.

2—Curtailment of certain loan programs, such as the Rural Electrification Administration and Farmers' Home Administration, urban renewal, Federal National Mortgage Association and Veterans Administration direct loans.

3—Repeal or amendment of grant and subsidy programs, such as public assistance, maternal and child welfare, and vocational education.

The report was prepared by Eugene F. Rinta, director of research to the 30 member state and regional chambers of commerce in the council. It was based on recommendations of the council's federal finance committee.

The council said that Congress "is in a mood to cut" the budget and suggested "there is a good chance the job will be done."

But it warned "the voters" must "express their unequivocal desire and appreciation for this action" and not "request exception of programs or projects of particular interest to themselves."

Police Bare Bomber's Tribulations

MONTREAL (AP) — Police conceded Saturday that the weirdly masked young man shot down Friday as he attempted to rob a bank while laden with enough dynamite to wreck a city block may have had his reasons.

They said their investigation disclosed that Andre Deblols, 25, now in hospital with a bullet through his neck and jaw, lost a 7-month-old baby last October; suffered slight injuries in a truck accident in January; was burned out of his home in Chambly County later that month; lost his job in a Montreal engineering plant a month and a half ago; lost his father-in-law to a fatal illness Wednesday. In addition, his father had been hospitalized until Friday.

WITH 30 STICKS of dynamite fastened to his body and wired to a contraption on his head, Deblols held a gun on employees and patrons of a Toronto-Dominion branch bank for 20 minutes Friday afternoon. Wearing a nylon stocking pulled down over his face, a false nose, dummy glasses and a bathing cap, he threatened to explode the dynamite if police tried to arrest him.

Constable Joseph Oerron finally kicked in a window and shot Deblols through the neck.

Old Murals Found

FERRARA, Italy (AP) — Two murals attributed by experts to the 15th Century painter Il Garofalo have been uncovered in restoration of the Conception Chapel here. They show episodes in the life of Jesus and Old Testament scenes. The painter's real name was Benvenuto Isl.

Pipeline in Desert to Reopen

DAMASCUS, Syria (AP) — A team of oil experts began work in the Syrian desert Saturday to repair vital oil pipeline installations that were blown up during the Anglo-French invasion of Egypt.

The 20-man team was headed by Thomas Elliot, chief engineer of the Iraq Petroleum Company, whose pipelines carrying oil from Persian Gulf fields to the Mediterranean have been blocked for four months.

THE SYRIAN government gave the company official permission last Wednesday to repair the lines. Syria previously had refused to let blown-up pumping stations be repaired pending final withdrawal of all Israeli troops from Egypt.

The I.P.C. lines run from Iraq to terminal points at Tripoli, Lebanon and Haifa, Syria.

Oil is expected to resume flowing through the pipelines in about two weeks at a rate of about 11,000,000 tons annually—about half the pre-Suez rate.

A company spokesman said Friday that the resumption of oil flow across Syria would be only a matter of "twisting a few valves."

THE SYRIAN agreement to permit repair work was the first break in an unofficial Arab blockade of the flow of oil from Persian Gulf fields to Europe.

It coincided with indications that Egypt would give a go-ahead for the removal of the last two obstacles blocking the Suez Canal to passage by tankers.

The Suez-Canal blockade, along with the oil-line stoppage, has forced oil-short European countries to buy expensive oil in the United States and South America.

Pilots Back Suspended TWA Capt.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Airline Pilots Association has come to the support of a suspended captain who is accused of leaving an assigned altitude without clearance and almost causing a collision with another airliner.

Under emergency suspension is Capt. Leonard Specht of Transworld Airlines, a veteran with a perfect safety record compiled in more than 15,000 flying hours.

The suspension was ordered by the Civil Aeronautics Administration. It took away Specht's air transport rating. This means he can fly only as a co-pilot pending outcome of a Civil Aeronautics Board hearing. An ALPA spokesman said the demotion will cost Specht several hundred dollars a month in pay.

SPECHT WAS ACCUSED of violating federal air traffic control rules soon after taking off from LaGuardia Field in New York on a flight bound for St. Louis, last Jan. 29.

The CAA charged he left an assigned altitude of 14,000 feet without permission even though he had already been advised that a Capital airliner was at 10,000 feet, only a few miles behind him. The TWA plane was trying to reach 18,000 feet to avoid icing at its assigned lower altitude.

Capt. Specht said he had declared an emergency because of severe icing. He accused the traffic control center in New York of ignoring a declared emergency and failing to advise Capital that the TWA flight was climbing through the former's altitude.

House Unit Votes $1,500 Ceiling on Government Cars

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Appropriations Committee has voted to allow the government to pay up to $1,500 each for new automobiles. It was reported Saturday.

The present ceiling is $1,350. Rep. Henry S. Reuss (D-Wis.), who announced the committee action, said it would help independent auto makers in bidding for government business.

The measure also raised the top price the government may pay for station wagons from $1,800 to $1,950.

Colonel's Position Outlined

HUNTSVILLE, Ala. (UP)—An Army colonel facing court-martial in the services' missile-control dispute said Saturday the Army has the "best qualified" forces to get "accurate missiles" into the field at the earliest moment.

Col. John C. Nickerson, accused by the Army of leaking secret information in a memorandum he wrote about the split-up of the missile program between Army and Air Force, issued a statement through his attorney.

Nickerson is restricted to the huge Redstone Arsenal here where German and American scientist teams are developing the weapons of the future.

THE DECORATED West Point graduate said in his statement that he was prompted to defend the Army's role in the program because it has the best developmental program, the greatest need for missiles and is best equipped to handle them.

The case stemmed from an announcement by Secretary of Defense Charles Wilson that the Air Force would be given responsibility for such missiles as the "Jupiter," now handled by the Army. The order, some quarters fear, may mean a break-up of the Army's giant rocket center here.

NICKERSON allegedly sent the document critical of Wilson's intentions to several congressmen and newspapermen. He has denied there was any secret information involved.

Saturday he said "since court-martial proceedings have been instituted against me and the implications are serious, I feel it necessary to make a statement to clarify my intentions in taking the action I did."

The colonel then listed the three points in detail. They included:

1. The guided missile research programs under way with Army supervision here and at the jet-propulsion laboratory at California Institute of Technology "are the best qualified ballistic missile development groups in the United States." He said these groups have made the Jupiter into a missile of "demonstrated superiority" over the Thor, the weapon created in competition by the Air Force.

2. "The Army has an urgent need for the intermediate range ballistic missile under its own operational control." He said also the Army, which has always suffered the greatest toll of casualties in the recent wars, can reduce the toll "by the employment of this weapon . . . in support of deep airborne and mechanized operations . . ."

3. The Army can handle the intermediate missile best because the missile "is similar in artillery and dissimilar to aircraft." He said the goal is to get accurate missiles into the field at the earliest moment and the Army can do this with experience already accumulated.

Jet Airliner Ready for Maiden Test

SEATTLE (UP)—America's first jet passenger plane, the Boeing 707, will make its maiden visits to the airports of Baltimore, Chicago and Denver next week.

The tour will mark the start of a stepped-up program to acquaint major airport managements with the special problems of handling the much faster and much larger — and somewhat noisier — jet airliners of tomorrow.

It also is designed to demonstrate that some of these problems — primarily those associated with noise output and runway lengths — have been exaggerated and may no longer be real problems when jets go into full scale airline operations in 1959. Boeing Airplane Co. says the production model of the plane will be equipped with sound suppressors.

The company said Saturday the four-jet 707 will attempt a transcontinental crossing Monday at more than twice current airline speeds.

With three pilots, three stewards, 32 newsmen and a dozen Boeing flight and ground crew personnel aboard, the plane will fly nonstop from Seattle to Friendship International Airport near Baltimore, on a schedule planned for less than four hours, weather permitting.

Red Reich Cadets

BERLIN (UP)—Communist East Germany has opened its first Army cadet school to groom boys from 12 to 18 as future officers. Admission is restricted to sons of workers and farmers. Newspaper pictures showed well-scrubbed cadets marching in smart Army uniforms.

KERENSKY AT HOOVER LIBRARY

Leader of Russia's Democracy Believes Freedom Will Return

PALO ALTO (AP)—Alexander Kerensky, who headed the one short-lived democratic government Russia has known, believes today that liberation of the people of Russia from Communist dictatorship is inevitable.

When liberation is achieved, Kerensky says, any "menace of a new world conflagration of nuclear war will disappear."

Forty years ago, on March 12, 1917 the people of Russia rose up in spontaneous revolt and overthrew Czar Nicholas II. Kerensky, now 76, is the sole survivor of the provisional government that took over after Nicholas II's abdication.

Kerensky's regime died a scant eight months later in Nikolai Lenin's seizure of power with the Communists on Nov. 7, 1917. Lenin was supported by Bolsheviks like Joseph Stalin, Leon Trotsky and V. M. Molotov, invited by Kerensky's government to return from czar-imposed exile.

Kerensky has been in exile from his homeland from the time the Communists took control.

HE NOW IS working on a research project of the Herbert Hoover library on the Stanford University campus. The object is a history in documentary text of the provisional government.

"I know them—I know the Russian people," said Kerensky,

a medical student knows the human body."

Kerensky said he believes the present Kremlin team of Nikita Khrushchev and Nikolai Bulganin is an "interim leadership."

"This interim Kremlin leadership is under pressure from a new middle class that wants a regime of law, of personal security," Kerensky said.

"But also there is a larger pressure. The people of the Soviet are beginning to move in the direction of their traditional political goals—to turn from absolutist power to a democratic regime based on social justice and the political rights of a human being."

"The spine of the terror regime has been broken. To restore the totalitarian regime as it existed until Stalin's death in 1953 is impossible."

KERENSKY CITED the Kremlin's concessions to Poland's Gomułka and the rebellion in Hungary as evidences of a changed temper in Soviet leadership. The Hungarian revolt was suppressed, but not, he said, in the ruthless style Stalin or Lenin would have used.

"And Russia's suppression of the Hungarian freedom movement caused great repercussions inside Russia, on the young generation and the workers," Kerensky said.

The generations born since 1917, he said, represent no less than 75 per cent of the population of the nation almost as sitting in the scholar's cubicle, small and spare, which is his work room.

Absent from Russia nearly 40 years, Kerensky has devoted himself to the study of his country's history and he has kept in touch on Soviet events through other exiles and foreign visitors to Russia.

His career before World War I was as a political lawyer, a defender of politically accused. He covered nearly every corner of Russia. "We political lawyers," Kerensky said, "got to know the social and political tissues of the nation almost as

Oil Conspiracy Charges • Hearing to Open Tuesday

By HARRY WILSON SHARPE charges that giants of the petroleum industry are conspiring to defeat a pending oil bill. The Tennessee Democrat said his subcommittee will air his conclusive evidence the companies are forcing "captive" gasoline dealers and jobbers to join the campaign under threat of having their gasoline supplies cut off. He has subpoenaed 20 companies, two trade associations and four oil company officials to produce all documents pertinent to the inquiry.

The legislation in question is the Kefauver-Patman Amendment to the Robinson-Patman Act which passed the House 393 to 3 last spring but died in the Senate. It would nullify a Supreme Court decision that an interstate oil company—Standard Oil of Indiana—"acted in good faith" when it granted price cuts to some but not all of its customers in the Detroit area to keep them from buying from a cut-rate competitor.

The court said this "realistic approach" was necessary to preserve the company's business. The pending amendment provides that any company resorting to such practices would violate the anti-trust laws if the price cuts tended to kill off competition.

THE MEASURE has most of the oil industry up in arms. Companies, trade associations and individuals are harrying congress with pleas to defeat it. This apparently was the source of Kefauver's conspiracy charge. He said the protests have been coming in since Congress convened Jan. 3. He said this was puzzling because the legislation is designed to help

ILWU Gang Boss Slain After Fight

SAN FRANCISCO 67 — A longshore boss was shot to death, an officer of the ILWU was wounded, and a longshoreman was jailed on suspicion of murder Saturday as a fist fight led to gunfire on Pier 29.

Joseph Red Leary, 39, boss of the longshore crew working on the freighter Mary Luckenbach was killed by a bullet in the abdomen.

The same bullet had passed through the arm of Walter Nelson, 50, business agent of ILWU Local 10.

Booked on the murder charge was Nicholas Gorshen, 56, a Russian immigrant longshoreman.

Police said they were told Gorshen became enraged because Leary refused to let him go to work, on the grounds he had been drinking.

Ecuador Realizes 40-Year Dream, Railway Finished

QUITO, Ecuador 67 — Government officials Saturday pounded in the last spike on the Quito-San Lorenzo Railroad to realize a 40-year dream of uniting this capital with the Pacific Coast port.

The 230-mile route through the Andes Mountains not only gives Quito access to the Pacific Coast by rail but also opens markets to nearly two million acres of fertile agricultural land in Imbabura and Esmeraldas Provinces.

The railway was constructed at a cost of 16 million dollars.

when you first need them
— wait 45 days for and take 2 years to pay, if needed

WHY SUCH EASY CREDIT

"I don't have to worry about paying my expenses as a dentist if I am interested first in giving service," Dr. Campbell said. "I have found through trial and error that every one of my offices must give a lot of credit to be prosperous. In the past, when one of my offices curtailed credit, this office became less prosperous. People gladly pay for good service when you are thinking of them before the money. My records prove that this is good business both for my patients and for me."

WHY 2 YEARS TO PAY, WHEN NEEDED

Although most people find it easy to pay my low prices on the customary 15 months, I want to remove the money barrier even more. Make up your mind now to have new dentures when you first need them.

Lost Boy, 4, Found Dead in Cistern

PERRY, Okla. (AP) — They found little Tommy Daniel Saturday, drowned in a cistern only a block from his home.

Hundreds of the some 2,000 persons who hunted throughout the night for the 4-year-old boy had passed by the cistern. A man who remembered it and pulled the lid aside then toppled had searched it "on a hunch."

led to the lad's discovery. The youngster, son of Mr. and Mrs. D. T. Daniel, was pulled from four feet of water. The cistern is at the rear of a house only one block from the lady's home in this north central Oklahoma community.

Police Chief C. O. deVillbiss said the cistern had a heavy wooden lid and was barely visible. He said hundreds of volunteer searchers passed the spot during the hunt which ended at 2:30 a. m.

He theorized the boy had inside the 12-foot deep cistern.

Child Assailant Allowed to Give Self Probation

AKRON, Ohio (AP)—Compassionate to get through to you to "I sentence me to 30 days in jail," said Holsey. "I suspend the 30 days and put me on probation for a year."

Plains Judge Walter B. Wanamaker decided to let the convicted prisoner sentence himself, because he had spent eight months in jail awaiting trial.

AKRON, convicted Friday of felonious assault on a 6-year-old girl, "maybe it would be better of his word and let the sentence stand."

Hitters Frolic in Openers

Compiled From AP & UP

All 16 major league teams inaugurated the grapefruit and cactus circuit exhibition baseball season Saturday with a generous sprinkling of ambitious rookie talent in all lineups.

As usual the hitters dominated the pitching in the training camp battles, although Hank Aguirre, Cal McLish and Stan Pita each tossed shutout ball as the Cleveland Indians, under their new manager—Kerby Farrell—blanked the New York Giants 2-0. The Giants got six hits in the game at Tucson, Ariz.

The world champion New York Yankees shoved across three runs in the seventh inning to tie the score against the St. Louis Cardinals at St. Petersburg, Fla., but singles by Tom Alston and Don Blasingame and Eddie Kasko's sacrifice brought in the winning run for St. Louis in the last half of the ninth.

MICKEY MANTLE, the Yankees' star outfielder, entered the game in the seventh as a pinch hitter and drew a walk.

In other games, with the home run prominent at Orlando and Clearwater, Fla., the Washington Senators defeated the Kansas City Athletics, 8-7; the Pittsburgh Pirates downed the Philadelphia Phillies by the same score; the Cincinnati Redlegs blasted the Chicago White Sox, 8-4; the Detroit Tigers romped over the Boston Red Sox, 10-1; the Baltimore Orioles edged the Chicago Cubs, 7-6, and in the lone night game, Brooklyn took Dick Gray homered in the bottom of the ninth inning as the Dodgers edged Milwaukee, 3-2.

JIM LEMON'S 3-run homer in the third inning and a single in his only other appearance at the plate drove in four runs in Washington's victory at Orlando. At Clearwater, Bill Virdon slammed a two-run roundtripper in the eighth inning to give Pittsburgh the necessary margin over the Phils, after Rip Repulski's three-run homer in the seventh had put Philadelphia ahead. The slugger Cincinnati Redlegs mugged Chicago rookies Jim Derrington, Bill Dufour and Tom Flanagan for 14 hits at Tampa, Fla. Minnie Minoso hit a two-run homer for Chicago.

BOSTON PITCHERS handed out eight bases on balls, and the Red Sox committed three costly errors.

Australia's New 'Landy' Sizzles in 4:00.4 Mile Win

MELBOURNE, U.S.—Herbert Elliott, a 19-year-old lad from western Australia, took over John Landy's mantle as Australia's top miler when he beat Olympian Merv Lincoln to win the Australian mile championship in 4:00.4 at Olympic Park Saturday.

It was the fastest mile ever turned in down under by an Australian with the exception of Landy.

The only other Aussie who recorded a faster time was Jim Bailey, who was clocked in 3:58.6 while competing for the University of Oregon in a victory over Landy at Los Angeles May 5, 1956.

IN INDEPENDENT MONDAY

Test Your Knowledge in 'You're Manager' Series

Every rabid baseball fan has on occasion mentally donned the uniform of the major league manager who struts out to the mound to decide with his pitcher how to handle a particularly tough spot in a game.

Should he change pitchers? What will the opposing manager do? Will he use a pinch-hitter? Will he hunt or hit away?

Well, here's your chance to be a second guesser. "You're the Manager," a 24-installment feature begins in Monday's Independent to test your baseball knowledge.

"You're the Manager" gives you all the information at the manager's command and then challenges you to decide the play and the eventual outcome. The series is based on actual plays of last year.

Be sure to follow "You're the Manager" starting with Lou Boudreau in Monday's Independent sports section.

POULSON DECLARES:

Dodgers in L.A. in '58--or Not at All

If you think you know for sure where the Brooklyn Dodgers are going to play in 1958, don't bet on it.

The wisdom of avoiding such wagers was indicated Saturday by some fairly murky remarks from Los Angeles mayor Norris Poulson, who is trying to get the Dodgers to come to L.A., and Brooklyn president Walter O'Malley, whose precise intentions are not yet apparent.

Poulson returned Friday night from a conference with O'Malley at Vero Beach, Fla., and said:

"It's too late to get the Brooklyn team this year, but we'll have the Dodgers in 1958."

When O'Malley heard this, he asked: "When is that election out there?" He referred to the April election in which Poulson will be trying to stay in the mayor's office.

THE SIGNIFICANCE of O'Malley's question was clouded somewhat, however, by the fact that he winked when he asked it.

Poulson, advised of O'Malley's question, said he would like to amend the statement attributed to him Friday. He said he would like it to read:

"If they (the Dodgers) are going to come here at all, they're going to come in '58."

"O'Malley is a smart operator as well as a smart baseball man," the mayor said. "He would like to be the first one to move into the most virgin (major league) baseball area in the country."

UCLA and Washington. It is their first title since 1946. Larry Friend led the scoring with 28 points.

Danny Rogers, the Trojans' fiery guard, scored 25 points to become the all-time, single season SC scoring champ. He totaled 463 for the year to break the record of 448 set by Bill Sharman in 1950.

The Trojans grabbed a 47-45 halftime lead. Cal used its full-court press effectively and took an early eight-point advantage, but Troy finally solved the tactics and moved to the front. It was see-saw for the rest of the half.

COACH Pete Newell's Bears will represent the PCC in the Western Regional NCAA tournament starting next week-end in Corvallis, Ore.

Cal's starting center, Duane Asplund, quickly got four fouls charged against him, and Joe Hagler, his substitute, received a gash in his forehead and had to retire for several minutes and repairs. Hagler will replace Asplund in the NCAA tourney, Asplund being ineligible for that series.

California didn't alter its style of play against the Trojans, but SC's use of the press speeded up the game and provided more scoring and more fouls.

THE TROJANS were right in the fight until the last minute of play, when a series of SC fouls increased Cal's one-point margin and saw Jim Sterkel banished for his fifth infraction.

California had 27 baskets in 52 attempts, but its mark at the free throw line was phenomenal. The Bear sharpshooters sank 35 of 43, 19 of 20 in the first

Thomson's 67 Leads Wall by 2 Strokes

PENSACOLA, Fla. (UP)—Australian Peter Thomson, wielding a sure putter, shot the best round of the event so far, a five-under-par 67, to take a two-stroke lead Saturday at the end of 54 holes in the $15,000 Pensacola Open golf tournament.

Thomson, three times British Open champion, had only two bogeys for a three-round total of 205, two strokes ahead of Art Wall Jr., Peconic Manor, Pa., who carried a 69.

Thomson sank a 45-foot sloping putt on the second hole, and dropped a 40-footer on No. 16 to take birdies on both par three holes.

Once Over Lightly

by DAVE LEWIS

Baseball men will tell you that there is nothing new in baseball.

You can pretty much wager that any "new" strategy has been used some time before.

In baseball, you "play by the book." In other words, you play the percentages. There's an accepted way to handle every situation and rarely does anyone deviate from the "book."

Once in awhile a manager will come up with a new twist in meeting some individual challenge, such as the Ted Williams shift used by Lou Boudreau when he managed the Indians a few years ago, but that instance, and in most other cases, you can look back and see where the basic maneuver has been used before.

But despite the fact that baseball strategy is pretty much stereotyped, there is far more to the game than merely taking a turn at bat or catching a fly ball. There are ways and means, everything else being equal, of one team gaining an advantage over a rival.

Perhaps the outstanding interview along these lines in recent months involved Bob Cerv, the former Yankee who was traded at the end of the '56 season to the Kansas City A's.

Cerv opened the discussion by saying the Yankees are able to pay most of the signs of the top pitchers on their chief rivals... and that this sign-detecting is just one example of the thoroughness and attention to detail which, along with playing talent, of course, enable the Yanks to win so many pennants.

"I didn't see to play as much as I would have liked to with the Yanks," Cerv says, "but I wouldn't trade my years with them for anything because I believe I learned more about baseball than I could have with any other club. I know I'm a much smarter player as a result of the time I spent with the Yanks."

Cerv points out that the Yankees leave as little as possible to chance. They reduce the risk of losing to a minimum. "In fact," he declares, "there were times when I wondered how they could ever lose. They make it a practice to take advantage of every opportunity that comes their way. They do a lot of things not immediately evident on the field, but which contribute to their success."

It's a very thorough organization from the top down and when you're with them you get to understand why they win pennants.

"Take the matter of getting the signs of other clubs," Cerv points out. "Those who aren't in the lineup are expected to concentrate on the job of reading whoever is pitching against them. The fellows in the dugout aren't just bench-warming spectators. They all have a job to do... and because they do it good, they contribute to the seemingly endless string of Yankee victories."

Cerv went on to say that the Yankees had most of the signs of the top pitchers on the leading clubs. Not an umpire, I guess with the second-division clubs, except possibly the top man or two, because they don't worry so much about them.

"The Yankees learn to watch all the mannerisms of the better pitchers, their movements before they pitch and how these movements tie in with the pitch they are going to throw."

"Quite often I went to the plate and knew what was coming up. I like that. Most hitters like to know whether it's going to be a fast ball or a curve. I know that on several occasions Mickey Mantle has been tipped off on what was coming up."

"Yogi Berra is one of the few who don't take the tips. He'd rather hit on his own and not know what's being thrown. But all the other Yankees profit by the information."

"And, believe me, the Yankees get such information... far more than the other clubs suspect. Almost every pitcher does something unconsciously to give himself away and if you study him intently enough you discover what it is. A lot of clubs don't take the trouble to study pitchers, but the Yanks have developed this practice into a real art."

"MAYBE THE REALLY great hitters don't need this information. They get enough hits without it. But lots of others can use it to advantage," Cerv says.

"And the Yankees are pretty cute with the information they get on what a pitcher is throwing and the signs given by opposing coaches."

"For one thing, they never tip their hand early in a game. They know what's coming, I've seen other clubs spot a pitcher and utilize this information right away... and in most cases they defeat their purpose because that pitcher usually is yanked out."

Delany Wins Handily: 4:09

NEW YORK (AP)—Ron Delany toyed with his rivals until two laps from home, then opened up as usual and won the Columbia Mile in 4:09.4 Saturday night in the Knights of Columbus games at Madison Square Garden.

A crowd of 8,932—used to Delany's tactics by this time—1,500-meter Olympic champion hang back in third place almost all the way before he decided to pass Burr Grim of Maryland and George Kerr of the New York Athletic Club.

Grim was second, about 15 yards behind Delany, and King took third though he was far, far back.

Delany's streak now stands at 16 straight indoor races. He has won 13 miles in a row and three at assorted other distances.

The quarter times were 61.8, 2:05.2 and 3:10, final time 4:09.4.

BUT IF THE customers were displaced with Delany's performance, they certainly took the opposite attitude toward Tom Courtney, the Olympic 800-meter champion, who whipped a 2:08.8 victory in the 1,000.

He received most of the cheers of the night.

With his "psychological barrier," Arnie Sowell, not present to harass him, Courtney was undisputed king of the race. He was whipped into the lead at the start and never was headed, finishing 11 yards in front of Dave Scurlock of North Carolina.

Off like a shot, Mel Barnwell, a Pitt freshman competing unattached, won the 80-yard dash in 6.2. He beat defending champion George Sydnor of Villanova, one of the co-holders of the 6.1 world indoor record.

Charlie Pratt of Manhattan won a close duel with Elias Gilbert of Winston Salem Teachers in 7.3.

Charlie Jenkins, who won the 100-meter in the Olympics, scored an easy victory in the 600, getting home in 1:11, two yards ahead of Bob McMurray of Morgan State.

Don Bragg of Villanova captured the pole vault with a 15-1 effort. Horace Ashenfelter won the two-mile for the seventh straight year in 9:01.4. Jim Beatty of North Carolina was second, and George Shaw won the hop, step and jump with a leap of 49-5 1/2.

George Dennis of Morgan State won the high jump at 6-4 1/2 as Phil Reavis went out at 6-4, and the New York Pioneer Club won the mile relay in 3:17.

Campbell, Olympic decathlon champion, equalled the world and meet standard of 6.1 in the 50-yard high hurdle trials. The former Indiana star copped the finals in 6.2.

Truex's unexpected victory earned him a special trophy as the outstanding athlete in the meet.

Truex first pulled ahead of Macy with four and a half laps remaining, but surrendered the lead with two to go. The little gamecock dogged Macy, refusing army officer now attending the University of Houston, until he was within sight of the tape.

Turning on the speed, Truex breezed past Macy and won by 12 yards. Phil Coleman of the Chicago Track Club was third in 9:05.5.

Two-Mile; Richards: 15-5

MILWAUKEE (AP)—Max Truex, plant-sized Olympian from the University of Southern California, overwhelmed Poland's John Macy with a half-lap remaining Saturday night to post a crisp 8:56.7 victory in the Journal Games two-mile race before 10,653.

Running on the boards for the first time in his career, Truex established one of the two met records.

The Rev. Bob Richards set the other, clearing the bar with a vault of 15 feet, 5 1/2 inches—his 118th of 15-foot or better.

Conley in Record 243-4 Spear Toss

Phil Conley, Olympic team member, Saturday broke an 18-year-old meet record in the javelin at the Southern Pacific 8:01.9.

AAU relays which opened the 1957 track and field season at East Los Angeles junior college. The meet was rained out after a few events.

Conley, former Caltech star now with the Los Angeles Athletic Club, hurled the spear 243 feet, 4 inches to break the record of 234-1 1/2 set by Bob Peoples, Southern California, in 1939. His nearest competitor was SC's Bob Volles at 214 feet.

Another feature of the meet before the grounds became too wet to continue was the performance of Dave Davis, Trojan freshman, who set a meet record in the freshman shotput of 53-6 1/2, bettering Don Vick's old mark of 51-0 1/2. Vick, of UCLA, won the open shotput with a toss of 54-1 1/2.

FAVORED Bobby Seaman of UCLA suffered an upset in the 5,000-meter run by Alex Henderson, transplanted Australian competing for Arizona State College of Tempe. Henderson led practically all the way by better than 100 yards and won in 14:33.6. Seaman turned in 14:44.5.

Propose Drastic Overhaul of Present Baseball Setup

WASHINGTON (AP)—A high official of the Washington Senators said Saturday that baseball is a business—and Congress should act on it.

"And it's big business," C. Leo DeOracy said as he proposed a drastic overhaul of the present baseball system to counter congressional monopoly charges. DeOracy proposed that:

1—The American and National Leagues be replaced by a single league of 16 teams with an Eastern and a Western division. He said this would meet one of the chief criticisms that the present setup is monopolistic and pave the way for Los Angeles and San Francisco to become major league cities.

2—A limit be placed on the number of farm teams and farm players a major league club can have because "the greatest monopoly in baseball is the farm system."

3—Revise the controversial reserve clause. He suggested an "option clause" type contract under which a club could hold on to a player for a certain term of usefulness.

In This Corner with DICK ZEHRMS

Like the man said, you never know when a knock will turn out to be a boost.

The sponsor of the old Casaba Club, who used to prance around as a spirited running guard in city league circles long ago when he wasn't coaching somebody, will believe it Monday night, March 18, when a bunch of his friends toss him a testimonial banquet at the Hawaiian.

People from afar who have been important in his life have been invited, among them Chief Newman and Aubrey Bonham of Whittier College, where he indulged in football and basketball antics, and a few Marine officers from San Diego, with whom he served in World War II.

Charles R. Church has been "Mr. Basketball" in our town for a long time; longer, perhaps, than he wishes to remember. He won a flock of titles, first at Poly High and later at Long Beach City College. The correct count, say the historians, is 21 in 24 years.

Chas. has been in the trade since 1930 when he became "B" coach at Poly. He won 10 straight "B" championships. Then he took charge of the Poly varsity and won eight more. In the service, he coached the San Diego Marine Base quintets to a 90-2 record, including numerous titles.

The roundball boss, an avid hunter and fisherman, has just completed his ninth year at the Viking helm. His Norse record shows three Metropolitan Conference championships, two San Barry Tournament titles and one Modesto state tournament crown.

This year the Vikings came upon hard times. Although Russ Taylor cracked a few Norse scoring marks, the collective success of the team was at perhaps its lowest ebb in Norse history. As a result, Church was hung in effigy by somebody who was either given to whim or who does not know all the facts in the case.

From this misdeed has come the testimonial banquet, organized by a committee composed of Johnny Webb, George Marmion and Lauren Proctor, the sporting goods impresario. They felt the insult to Charlie and his colossal record was unjustified. This testimonial, they reasoned, will be the answer—given by appreciative friends of Church who recognize his mangle touch in his chosen field.

Plans have been made to accommodate a crowd of 300. Tickets for the dinner will go on sale Monday at Proctor's Sporting Goods, 128 West Broadway.

Efforts are being made to have many of Church's former players attend. The dinner will be a reunion of some of Long Beach's greatest basketball products as well as a tribute to the man who had a part in making them great.

This should be an adequate answer to the ungodly and soulful who pulled the childish prank. As only Charlie knows, it isn't New York out every dinner. After some feasts comes famine. On March 18, however, it will be feasting time—in a deserved tribute to "Mr. Basketball" in our town!

HOLD THE PHONE! Times blinked in amazement when their clocks showed Bill Perry of East Los Angeles J. C. winning the 100-yard dash in 8.7, recently at Glendora against Citrus J. C.

They huddled, checked and re-checked, but 8.7 was the correct time. Then somebody measured the distance. It was only 85 yards. And another world record went out the window!

QUICK SEASON. University of San Diego is the border town's newest athletic institution. As such, USD is learning that it takes time to mature in collegiate sports.

Two weeks ago the call went out for a track team. Twenty candidates reported. Three days later when track coach Tom Rice went out to drill his squad, nobody showed up. All the hopefuls had quit, for one reason or another.

So USD's first track season will have to wait until 1938. Rice cancelled the 1937 schedule.

BIG DAY. Monday at Rudl's the Southern Cal. Basketball Writers Assn. will end its seasonal luncheons with presentation of certificates to "players of the week" by Bill Schroeder, director of the Helms Athletic Foundation.

Two Helms "athletes of the month" also will receive trophies. They are Dick Banton, UCLA guard, and Danny Rogers, SC guard.

The players of the week to be feted will be Monty Gonzales, SC; Ren Rogers, UCLA; Garnet Brown, Loyola; Ted Tiffany, Oxy; Mack Taylor, Pepperdine; Jim Pugh, SC; and Connie Burke, UCLA.

Best of all, however, this

Ferrie in L.B. Masters Lead Pinky 1 Back; Finale Today

By JERRY WYNN

A PUSH AND A PRAYER BUT PUTT STAYED OUT

Jim Ferrie gives body English and hopeful glance after stroking 10-foot putt on 16th green at Virginia CC Saturday. Putt barely missed. (Staff photo by Bob Shumway)

Turning near disaster into a magnificent par three on the 15th hole, Jim Ferrie of Virginia CC played his home course in one under par 70 Saturday to gain a one stroke lead over Pinky Stevenson of Recreation Park after the third round of the first annual Long Beach Masters golf tournament.

Ferrie's sub-par effort, more outstanding because of the heavy rain which attacked the four-hole from the eighth hole on, earned him a 54-hole total of 214.

Stevenson, who led Ferrie by a stroke going into the round, putted sensationally for a 72 and 12-foot try to save par on the home green. . . . CARMODY WAS two under par after the first four holes but couldn't keep the pace. He birdied the first on a 7-iron and 12-foot putt and the fourth on a wedge and 18-footer and made an excellent recovery from a trap for a par on the third.

It wasn't Olson's day. He had eight bogies and a double slip on the 11th (sinking a six-footer for that) and visited the sand traps six times. A lone birdie came on the 14th hole on a 9-iron and 12-foot putt.

A gallery of more than 100 braved the weather. Looking ahead to today's finale, Ferrie shook his head and grinned:

"I sure would have liked more than a one-stroke lead. That Pinky will be out to get me at Recreation!"

Box score: Stevenson 70, Olson 72, Carmody 72, Ferrie 70.

Today's final 18 holes in this battle of club champions will be held at Recreation Park. Tee-off time is 11 a.m.

"I've played this course constantly for 18 years but never before saw that place," said Ferrie referring to the out-of-the-way terrain where he mis-hit his tee shot on the 15th.

THE VETERAN six-time Virginia champion shanked a 6-iron on the 139-yard uphill hole which crosses a yawning cavern and is tightly guarded on the right by a row of trees. The ball traveled about 30 degrees off line into the trees and for all who watched it—except Ferrie—it looked irrefragable.

Refusing to play a provisional ball, Ferrie located the original in a hollow on a hill some 70 yards from the green. Then followed the shot of the day and "one of the greatest of my career."

With the green completely hidden from view, he hit a wedge off of hard ground that cleared a pepper tree and sailed on to the green four feet from the pin. The putt was true . . . a par instead of a double-bogey.

FERRIE PLAYED the front nine in even par 35 with a birdie on the par-three seventh on an 8-iron and 10-foot putt and a bogey on the ninth when he came up short with a 9-iron. After sinking a 15-foot putt to par the 10th, he put an approach into a trap to bogey the 11th.

Birdies on two of the next three holes turned the tide in his favor. On the par-five 12th, he pitched up with an 8-iron and sank an eight-foot putt and on the short par-four 14th, it was a tough 9-iron hit from an uphill lie and a four-foot putt. He parred in from there.

Stevenson played the first eight holes flawlessly with seven easy pars and a birdie on the par-five 11th when after a poor second wood, he lofted a beautiful 8-iron directly over a trap to within 18 inches of the pin.

BUT THEN THE rains came and Pinky's game collapsed—with the great exception of a putter which connected on taps of 8, 10, 8 and 5 feet on the next four holes. The first two salvaged pars. The next followed an uphill chip from deep rough which came shortly after a wild tee shot into the rough and produced his first bogey.

The five-footer was what was left from an estimated 80-foot putt from the front edge of the long, winding 12th green. Pinky had hit the green with a 4-iron slashed through the trees from the rough after another poor fairway wood.

The putter didn't work on a 30-footer on the 13th which he bogied via a bad chip but after a string of pars, it clicked on a 12-foot putt to save par on the home green.

Stevenson's final score was 70, Olson 72, Carmody 72, Ferrie 70.

Today's final 18 holes in this battle of club champions will be held at Recreation Park. Tee-off time is 11 a.m.

"I've played this course constantly for 18 years but never before saw that place," said Ferrie referring to the out-of-the-way terrain where he mis-hit his tee shot on the 15th.

THE VETERAN six-time Virginia champion shanked a 6-iron on the 139-yard uphill hole which crosses a yawning cavern and is tightly guarded on the right by a row of trees. The ball traveled about 30 degrees off line into the trees and for all who watched it—except Ferrie—it looked irrefragable.

Refusing to play a provisional ball, Ferrie located the original in a hollow on a hill some 70 yards from the green. Then followed the shot of the day and "one of the greatest of my career."

ATTENDANCE LIMITED TO 250

Testimonial Dinner for Church Slated March 18

The testimonial dinner for Charley Church, basketball coach at Long Beach City College, has been set for Monday, night, March 18, at The Hawaiian.

The dinner grew out of the recent regrettable incident in which Church was hung in effigy. Friends, former players and fellow coaches, all shocked at the action, rallied to the support of Charley, who is recognized as one of the nation's outstanding authorities on the game.

Attendance at the dinner, which is open to both men and women, is limited to 250. Tickets and reservations can be obtained at Proctor's Sporting Goods Store.

Many of the game's outstanding figures will attend the dinner honoring the most successful basketball coach in Long Beach history.

3 Trojans to Join Lockyer's Five

Three stars from the University of Southern California will join Long Beach Lockyer's AAU team tonight when the grocery quintet continues its bid for a spot in the national playoffs at Denver.

Captain Danny Rogers and centers Jim Sterkel and Ken Pearson will be in Lockyer's lineup at Los Angeles City College tonight against Wickland-O'Neil in a second-round playoff game.

Tippoff is slated for 8 p.m. Rogers was a second team all-Coast selection and sparked the Trojans' upset of UCLA two weeks ago. He was the team's leading scorer, averaging 15 points a game.

Rogers needed only nine points against Cal Saturday night to become all-time, single season SC scoring champion.

Sterkel possesses a deadly hook shot and was Troy's leading rebounder. Pearson compiled the leading free throw percentage on the squad, an excellent .757.

The combination of Sterkel, Pearson, Cal Garvin, Ed Nichols and Duane Baptiste gives Lockyer's tremendous rebounding strength.

Another ex-Trojan, Dick Hammer, has been Lockyer's leading scorer all season. Other standouts for the Grocerymen are Jack Samske, James Smith, Bill Fraser, Bill Barnes and Jack Kirkpatrick.

The fourth-seeded team of Bob Perry and Noel Brown of Los Angeles defeated John Leach and Bill Cranston of UCLA, 6-3, 6-4, 6-1.

Seixas Rallies to Whip Moylan, Meets Rose

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP)—Vic Seixas of Philadelphia, defending champion in the Master's Invitational tennis tournament, rallied to gain the finals Saturday by defeating Eddie Moylan of Trenton, N. J., 4-6, 8-6, 6-4.

Mervyn Rose, the Australian who scored an easy, 6-3, 6-4 victory over Herb Flam of Beverly Hills, Calif., in the other semi-final, will play Seixas for the title today.

Moylan had Seixas at match point in the second set and led him, 4-1 in the third before the defending champion was able to steady himself. Seixas took five games in a row in the third set, mainly on the strength of his fine backcourt play.

"I was just plain lucky to get out of that one," Seixas said.

Corner relinquishes the gavel to Dan Haffner, incoming proxy. Lunch without a gavel will taste much better!

Bob Kelley Says—

Now don't shy away from this column just because I mention the IBC's troubles with the federal government over running a monopoly in violation of anti-trust laws. Believe me, that technical stuff is just as dull to Ole Kell as it is to you. But you might be surprised to hear from a guy who's sticking up for the IBC—that's me.

Sure, they run a monopoly. But why pick on the IBC? Let's go after the telephone company and the gas company and the bus lines and hundreds of other businesses in this country. They're monopolies, aren't they?

All of big business is a monopoly in some sense. And where would this country be without big business? So the IBC locks up all the big TV times and locks up the titles—so what? They'll use your fighter if you play ball with them. And are there any of us who don't have to play ball with romance, NONEONE to make a living?

Well, I just thought I'd bring this out. And believe me, I'm not working for the IBC . . . never met Jim Norris . . . and never expect to call one of their fights.

I THINK I'M making progress in getting a local fight for our new idol, Ewart Potgeter. (Read that last name out loud to yourself, it's got to be immortal.) This is the South African giant who stands 7' 2" and weighs 335 pounds.

On the air the other night, more as a gag than anything else, I implored Jackie Leonard to bring Potgeter into the Legion. The first thing I knew, I was a matchmaker. Suey Welch, who manages football star Charlie Powell, called me Saturday and said:

"I've got Powell; you get Potgeter. We'd love to fight the guy. Charlie is tall enough and heavy enough so it won't look like a David and Goliath match. If they bring that one into the Legion, it'll sell out."

Having to throw cold water on one of my own promotions, I nonetheless cautioned Suey: "Maybe Sid Flaherty won't put Potgeter in with your boy. Might figure he's too tough. They've spent a lot of money keeping the big man in this country, even laid him off for six months for a neck operation. I think they want to move slowly."

"Don't be too sure Flaherty will mix the fight," Welch replied. "He doesn't think Powell can fight a lick. So we're ready to show him."

The next step is up to you.

You're Safe from Tidal Waves!

By Vera Williams

FRIDAY EVENING, Sept. 7, 1900, Galveston, Tex., lay serene on its sandbar seven miles from the mainland, its hard-packed, white sandy beach glistening just beyond the quiet waves.

By Saturday midnight, one-seventh of its population was dead, drowned in raging waters or crushed by collapsing walls. One-third of the city was swept clean, the wreckage piled high for four miles parallel with the beach.

The Galveston hurricane-driven tidal wave with its 6,000 dead and property damage of 30 million dollars stands as one of America's most tragic disasters. Its heavy loss of life was due in great part to the fact that there was no warning of the storm that came in from the Gulf as a tropical hurricane. Citizens were wholly unprepared for it.

BUT THAT COULD NOT HAPPEN to you here in Long Beach.

The reason it could not is that, ringing the Pacific Ocean, is a network called the Seismic Sea Wave Warning System, with stations at key points on both sides of the ocean and dotted on tiny islands throughout the vast body of water.

Through this system is transmitted rapidly information of storms—volcanic eruptions or earthquakes which may cause tidal waves.

One of the key points in the network is the Long Beach-Los Angeles Harbor lighthouse at the tip of the breakwater. The seismic sea wave recording graph is under the United States Coast and Geodetic Survey and in charge of Coast Guardsmen lighthouse keepers.

"Boss" of the warning system in this area is Cmdr. Roswell C. Bolstad, Los Angeles district officer of the Coast and Geodetic Survey (U. S. Department of Commerce), on the 14th floor of the federal building in Los Angeles.

DISASTROUS LOSS of life and property in the Hawaiian Islands which resulted from the seismic sea wave ("tidal wave" to the layman) following the April 1, 1946, earthquake off the Aleutians pointed up the need for a system for warning the Hawaiian Islands and other Pacific islands and coasts in case another such wave should occur, according to Cmdr. Bolstad.

The Coast and Geodetic Survey began developing detection instruments needed in such a warning system and enlisted the cooperation of the Army, Navy, Air Force and Civil Aeronautics Administration in using government-controlled communication facilities to handle warning messages.

In that April 1, 1946, tidal wave, 173 lives were lost in the Hawaiian Islands and property damage there was estimated at 25 million dollars.

ON NOV. 4, 1952, when a seismic wave broke from an undersea earthquake off Siberia and lashed the Hawaiian Islands, no lives were lost, property damage was low. Thanks to the Seismic Sea Wave Warning System, all knew the tidal wave was coming, and were prepared for it.

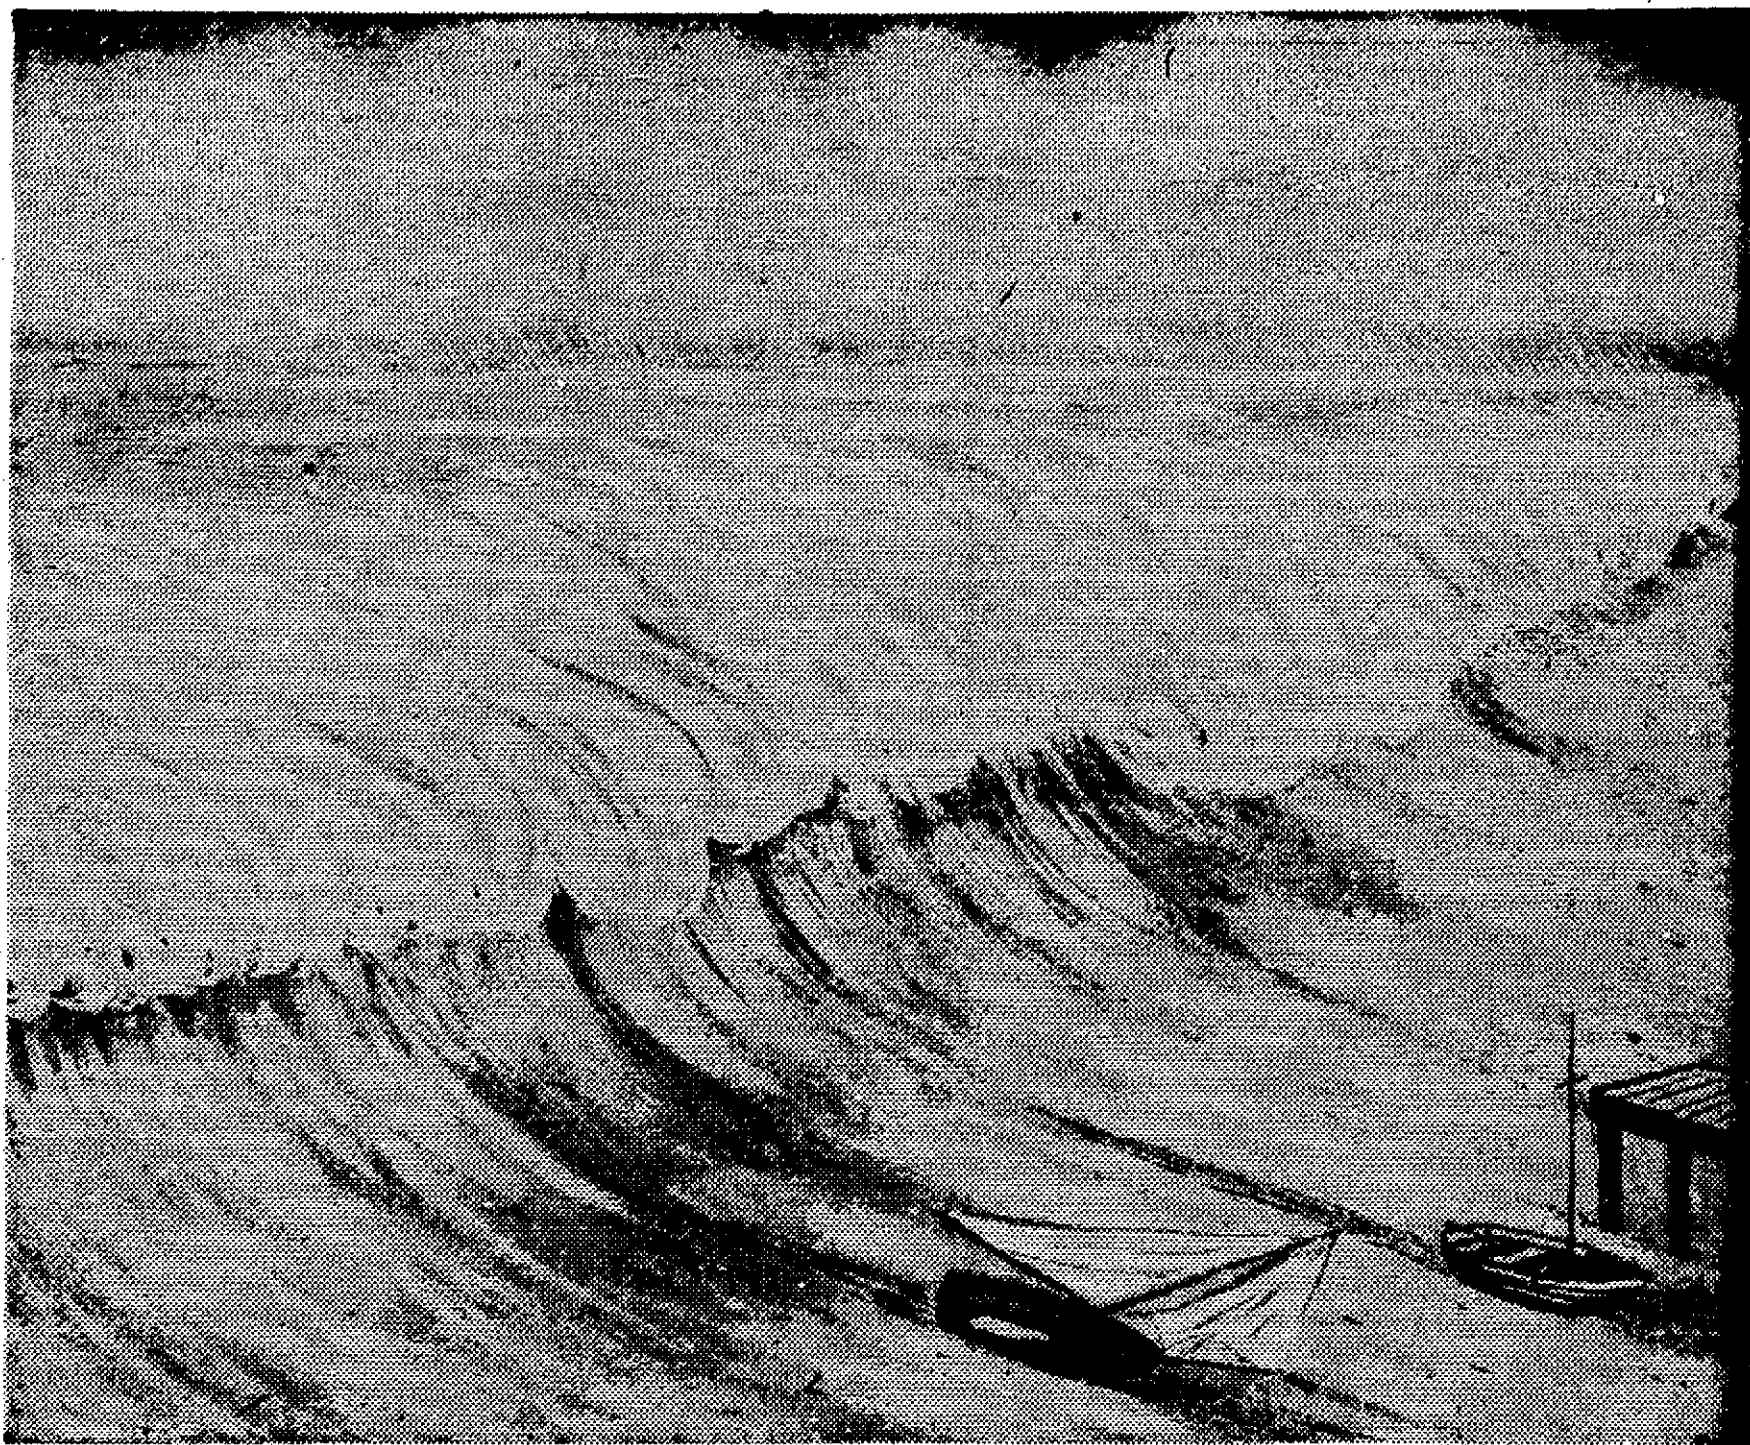

Seismic sea waves are generated by earthquakes in the floor of the ocean (seaquakes), or by volcanic eruptions, explains the commander. They travel in all directions from the epicenter of the earthquake or eruption.

Fortunately, these disturbances do not always produce seismic sea waves. There is no known characteristic on a seismogram of an earthquake which will show whether or not a seismic sea wave has been generated.

Many seismic sea waves cause no damage at all; but such a wave may leave one place undamaged and yet go on to a more distant place and cause enormous destruction. Thus all disturbances are relayed by the warning system.

A seismic sea wave usually consists of a long series of waves that will last for several hours, and in many cases more than a day. The first wave is seldom the largest, but the size and violence of the waves increase rapidly, and in general reach a maximum with the third to eighth wave.

The velocity of a seismic wave depends to a great degree on the depth of the ocean. In the deep waters of the Pacific the velocity is around 500 miles per hour. The distance between crests is well over 100 miles. The period of time between successive waves

—Drawing By H. Parker Markle

This is staff artist's conception of tidal wave similar to those that hit Texas coast and Hawaii. Experts say it can't happen on West Coast.

is around 15 minutes, as compared to 30 seconds for the highest storm waves.

As the seismic sea wave reaches shallow water, the wave length shortens and the height becomes greater until at the shore the water may pile up to heights of 30, 40, 50 or 60 feet in a destructive onslaught.

Often—but not always, say the observers—there is a dramatic withdrawal of the sea before a tidal wave hits. It is as if the oncoming wave creates a vacuum pulling the water into it before it thunders ashore.

FOR INSTANCE that was the first warning in the Hawaiian Islands of the 1946 tidal wave. Long accustomed to the sound of the breakers on the shore, residents suddenly were conscious of the stillness. The beach was bare far out—and then the first of the series of high walls of water crashed.

The entire perimeter of the North Pacific Ocean is an active seismic area, and seismic sea waves reach the Hawaiian Islands, for instance, from all points of the compass. Since 1819, seismic sea waves have been recorded on an average of one every 3½ years. Most of these waves did no damage.

On the Pacific Coast there is little danger that a tidal wave could cause extensive damage or take a high death toll, observers believe. Although the Pacific area is geologically active, the sub-surface continental shelf off this coast is steep and the shoreline high.

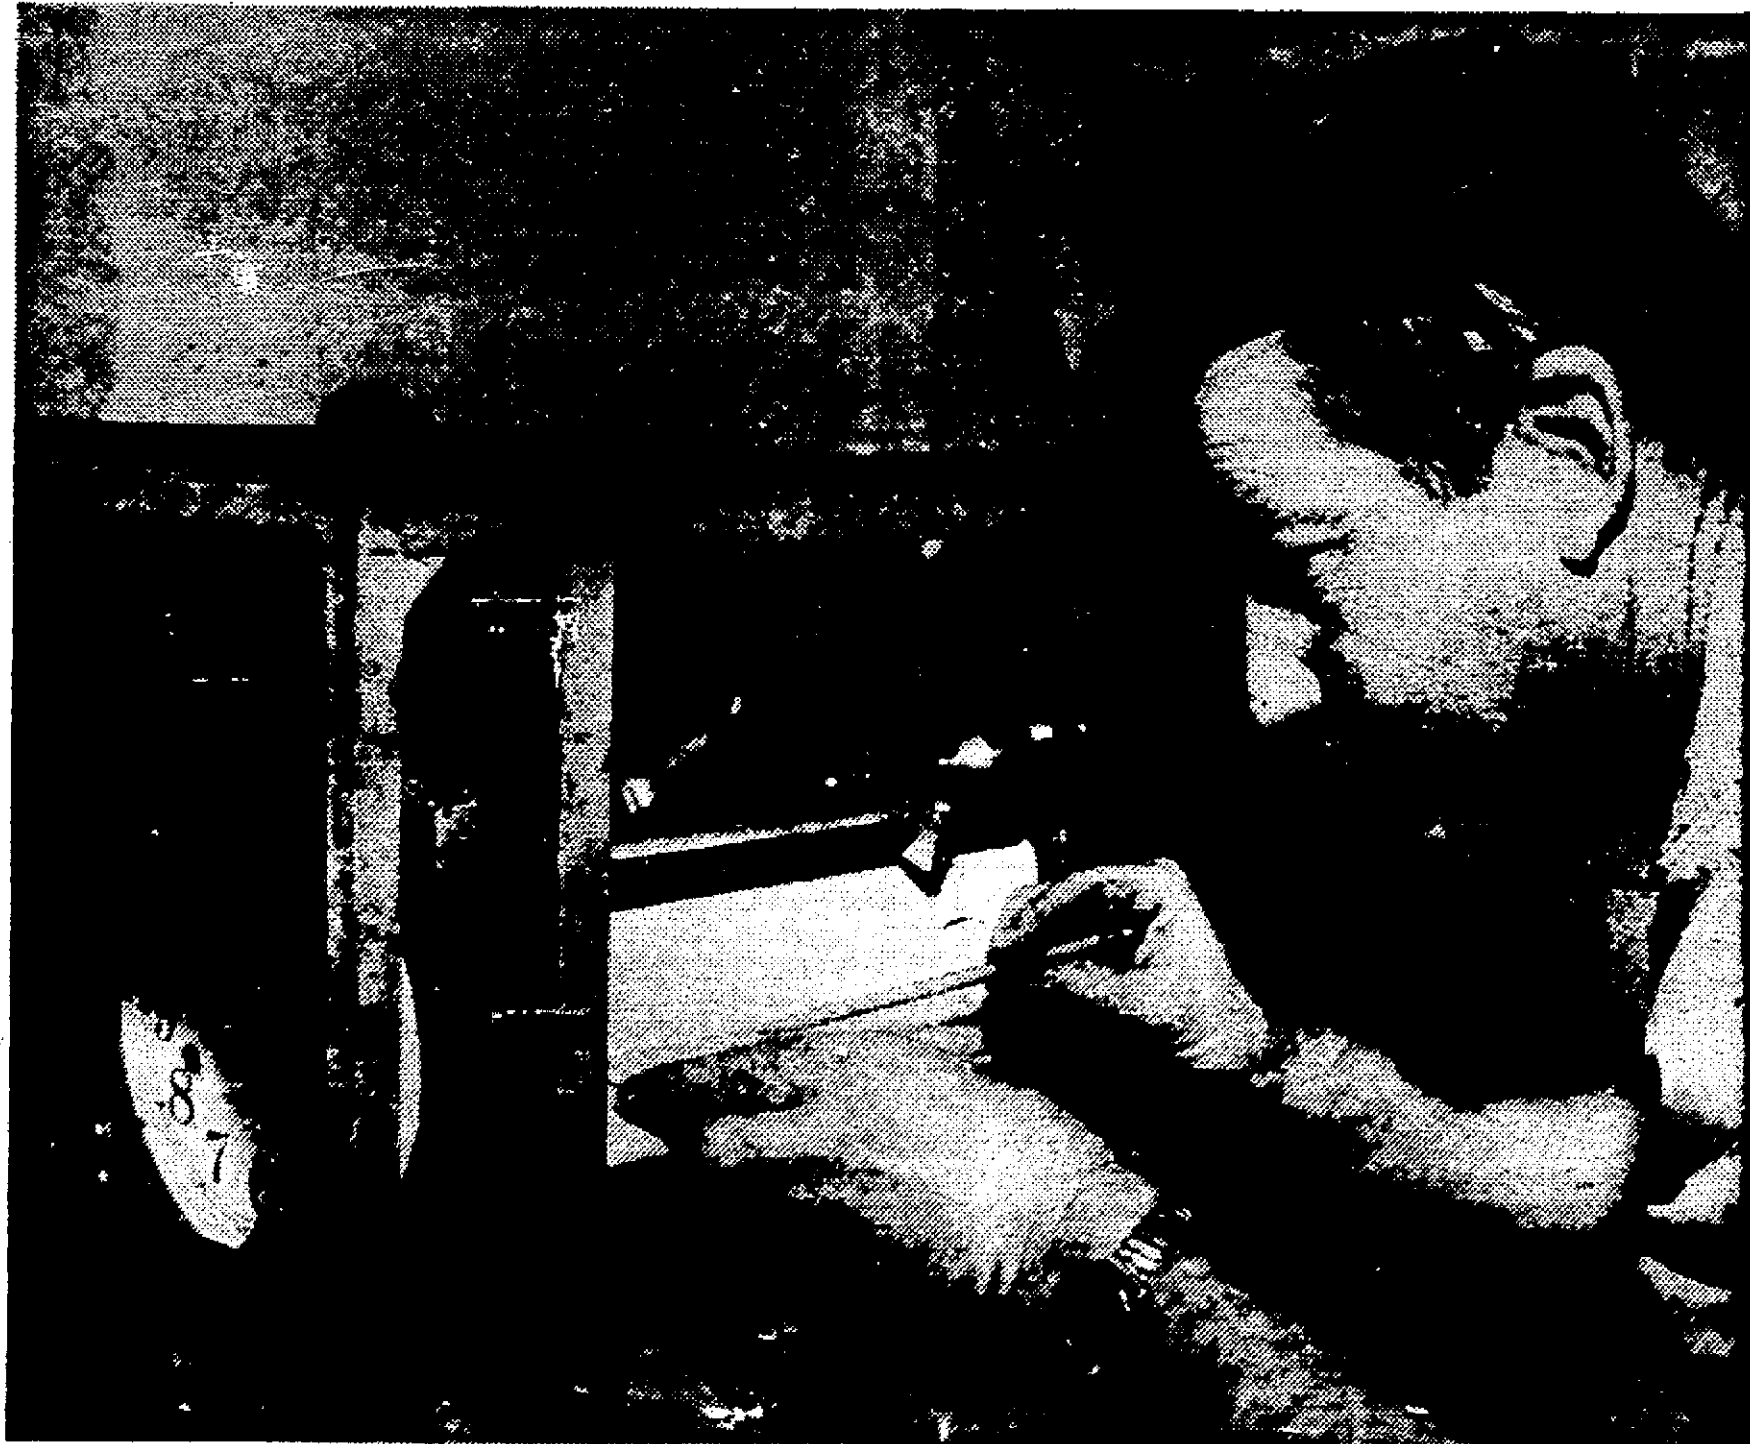

Along with the steep shelf, the Pacific bottom is filled with lateral and diagonal underwater canyons that go to fabulous depths, each one cutting the force of the seismic wave.

SEISMIC SEA WAVES are not to be confused with the regular tides, due to gravitational pull of the sun and moon and other celestial bodies, Cmdr. Bolstad emphasizes, even though considerable damage is done now and then by these tides. At the time of the new moon and the full moon, high tides are higher than usual, and low tides are lower than usual. Because an average lunar day is 24 hours and 50 minutes long, tides follow this time table. If there is a very high tide at noon one day, for example, the tide will be at approximately 12:50 p. m. the following day.

There are three kinds of tides: diurnal, one high and one low a day, as in the Gulf of Mexico; semi-diurnal, two highs and two lows a day, as on the Atlantic Coast, and mixed, as on the Pacific. The mixed tide is two highs and two lows a day, but one high is considerably higher than the other and one low is considerably lower than the other.

Tides are predicted by the Coast and Geodetic Survey. Roy M. Sylar, supervisor cartographer in Cmdr. Bolstad's office, says Long Beach can look for high tides this year on Jan. 16 (we already had that one, a 6.9 footer), and on June 27, July 26, Oct. 24, Nov. 21. These, all new moon tides, will range from 6.7 to 6.9 feet.

Earthquake—1933

Although Long Beach has never had a tidal wave, it will always be associated with the earthquake of March 10, 1933, which killed 100, including 51 in this city.

The temblor actually centered offshore at Newport Beach, but the Long Beach school system felt its full force and only in recent years has the city wiped out the last scar.

An accident of timing spared thousands of pupils, most of whom were safely home when the quake started.

The time was 5:54 p. m.

Poor Relations

By Veva Wilcox Van Valkenberg

Illustrated by H. Parker Markle

I HADN'T SEEN my kid sister for fifteen years, not since she was seven and I was fifteen, but I knew her the minute I saw her coming up the walk. Except for growing up, she hadn't changed much. Her eyes were still too big for her face and she was still slender and blonde.

At first I was excited about seeing her again, then I took a good look at her. She looked like a tramp. Oh I don't mean that kind of tramp; what I mean, she was wearing jeans and a shirt and she didn't have a perm. Her hair hung straight to her shoulders and tucked in at the ends. I figured she was broke and looking for a free meal ticket.

That changed things. Like I told my husband Joe, when his brother wanted to borrow money to move out here, "everybody wants to move to California. They got the idea they can get rich quick or get into the movies or something. If we start helping him we'll have to keep it up. We'll never get ahead with a lot of poor relations hanging on our necks."

THAT WENT FOR MY FOLKS, too. I had never let a one of my folks know where I was, yet one of them had found me, and here she was, all eager and happy about finding a soft touch.

I met her at the door.

"You're my big sister, Irene," she said in a glad, breathless sort of voice.

"Oh?"

"I'm Molly, the baby, remember?"

I didn't ask her in. Joe and I've got things fixed real nice with overstuffed and all, and I didn't want her seeing it and getting the notion we could afford handouts. I went out on the porch and sat in the swing. She sat on the porch railing.

"I've been looking for you for years," she almost sang, "but no one seemed to know anything about you."

I wondered how she'd found me now, but I didn't ask. "I've been around a lot," I said.

"I've missed you so much! Why did you run away from Aunt Kate's?"

"I didn't owe her anything. Why should I stick around?"

SHE GAVE AN EXCITED little bounce, like she was too happy to sit still. "Well, at least we've found each other now. I worried about you. After all, you were only fifteen. Was the going pretty rough?"

"I made out alright. Long ago I learned that you had to look out for number one first. I'm still doing alright. Joe, my husband, don't make no fortune with the garage, but we'll get along if we don't fall for every hard luck story that comes along."

I gave her a straight look to make sure that she got my meaning. She did, for she flushed and bit her lip.

She was quiet for a minute then she said, "I see the boys often."

I yawned and looked at my wristwatch.

"They're fine men, Irene. They were both in Korea, but neither was injured. You'd be proud of them, Irene." She sounded like she was begging for something.

I didn't answer, but started picking at my nail polish where it was beginning to peel.

THERE WAS ANOTHER SPELL of silence and I kept wishing she'd take the hint and go, but she just sat there.

The silence began getting on my nerves. "You still with those people who took you when the folks got killed?" I asked, just for something to say.

"The Hillyer's? Oh, yes. They are wonderful to me. They legally adopted me, you know?"

"Yeah? Well, if they've done so well by you, what do you want of me?"

"I'm wondering, Irene, if it is in your power to give me what I want," she answered soberly.

I knew then that I had been right about her. Everyone wants something.

She took a little box out of her shirt pocket and handed it to me. I brought you a little present," she smiled. "I remembered how blue your eyes were."

Inside the box was a pair of ear screws. Can you imagine a seven-year-old remembering all those years that my ears were pierced? She must have got pretty homesick back there in the hills away from all her folks. The folks who took her didn't have any kids of their own to make it easier for her.

FOR A MINUTE I WENT a little soft, then I caught onto her sly trick: she'd try to break me down with a present of junk jewelry, then ask could she stay awhile.

The ear screws weren't much, anyway not big and flashy like I like. There was a dinky blue stone about the size of a big pea with a circle of brilliants around it. The blue stone was kind of cute, though. It had star-shaped light rays in it that moved when the box was moved, cute and tricky.

But I wasn't buying. "You keep them, kid, your eyes are blue, too. You can get your ears pierced."

She looked like she was about to cry but she managed to smile. "Maybe you'll accept them when we're better acquainted," she said.

It made me sore for her to act so dumb, pretending she couldn't see she wasn't wanted. I stood up and let her have it straight.

"Look, Kid, I've never asked odds and I don't give any, if you see what I mean. Sure, we're sisters, but we had nothing to do with that. We're strangers now, let's keep it that way."

The soft look went out of her eyes and she really was a stranger, cool and indifferent. "It's your decision," she said, sliding the box back into her pocket. "Hereafter, whatever happens, I'll do everything in my power to 'keep it that way.'"

I DIDN'T GET A CHANCE to tell Joe about her for he was all excited when he came home for supper.

"Guess who was in the shop today," he said "James J. Hillyer, is who. I worked on his car. Man what a car!"

"I never heard of a movie star named Hillyer," I said, but the name sounded familiar.

"If you'd read something besides movie magazines once in awhile you'd know who James J. Hillyer is," snorted Joe. "He's from your old home town. He's just the guy who found all that uranium on his place. He's worth millions, is all."

My knees went so weak I had to sit down. I was the sister of a millionaire! Maybe certain women in town wouldn't be quite so starchy when they heard that. But I wouldn't be in any hurry to join their clubs, I'd be cool to them the way they had been with me. And now Joe could get the backing he needed to enlarge the garage and get a car agency.

I THOUGHT ABOUT the ear screws. "Joe," I said, "remember telling me how the guys in your outfit bought up diamonds and jewels and stuff when you were stationed in India?"

"Sure. So what?"

"Ever see a blue stone with star-shaped lines in it?" "Sure, they're star sapphires. Worth more than diamonds."

He laughed that nasty way he does when I want something he thinks we can't afford. "You ain't getting ideas, are you, Baby?"

"Oh I don't know," I smiled.

Then I remembered how the kid had looked and what she had said when she left.

Joe gave me a funny look. "What's the matter, Irene? You sick or something?"

"Sick?" I wanted to scream, "sure I'm sick. My sister's a millionaire and I'll never get a thing out of it, and what's worse, I can't tell anyone about it, ever."

I couldn't answer Joe. I just shook my head.

Overstocked!

Southland is overstocked with short short stories, and writers are asked not to submit them for possible publication until further notice. However, from those already accepted, short shorts will continue to appear in this magazine at regular intervals.

"I have been looking for you for years," she almost sang.

Hottest Freight on Earth

By Edward A. Herron

BY SIX O'CLOCK on a calm, sunlit morning, Conductor Bill Cantwell takes a last, approving glance at his white-painted home, ducks under an elm tree by the sidewalk, and starts for the "roundhouse."

The early morning hour, the brilliant sun, the complete absence of wind fit into a pattern. It forms a background for the fact that this morning Cantwell's train will carry the hottest freight on earth.

Every foot of ground in the seven miles he drives to meet his train is owned by the people of the United States. Every home that he passes is owned, not by the people who occupy them, but again by the people of the United States.

THE TREE-LINED town of Richland, marooned on a high desert plateau in the state of Washington, is owned by 169 million Americans and cared for by one of the most unusual landlords in the United States.

General Electric Co., agent for the people, maintains the town of 27,000 which only 12 hurried years ago was a village of 250 persons surrounded by sagebrush and sand.

Among other activities it operates a railroad, and each week General Electric hands to Conductor Bill Cantwell a paycheck for shepherding the most dangerous material ever manufactured by man.

Only a breath of wind away from Richland, behind a barricade wire and a barrier of secrecy, is another General Electric project, the Atomic Energy Commission's Hanford plant.

THE PRODUCT of the billion-dollar plant and its 9,000 employes is plutonium, the ingredient of the atomic bomb. One of the by-products of the mammoth plant hidden in the desert is the skill to be applied in the peaceful use of the atom.

A waste product of the atomic process is a deadly radioactive residue which must be disposed of safely and without hesitation.

While the rest of the industry talks about the coming of the atomic age, the 150-mile railroad within the barricades of Hanford is already deep into it.

In the railroad maintenance shop, liberally sprinkled with the purple shamrock insignia marked "Radiation Zone," Conductor Cantwell meets Engineer Bill Dye and Trainman A. H. Cox. They receive their orders for the day: burial detail.

In Hanford, when a piece of highly radioactive equipment becomes faulty, it must be buried.

A radiation monitor is assigned to accompany the crew on the mission.

A LITTLE KIT resembling an auxiliary lunch bucket is handed out, each kit containing two pen-sized dosimeters for spotting gamma radiation, and a film badge which responds to invisible rays. A card is prepared for each man on which will be entered a running total of the radiation to which each crewman is exposed. It's the job of the accompanying monitor to keep tabs on exposure, to tell the man if necessary: "You're burned out—no more radiation for the rest of the week."

Getting dressed for the burial detail is a ritual.

William Cantwell, conductor; William Dye, engineer, and A. H. Cox, trainman, get into these special costumes in preparation for handling world's hottest cargo.

Full length coveralls are pulled on, a surgeon's skull cap, then a wide hood which is tucked under the coveralls. White canvas shoe covers are donned, followed by heavy rubbers.

Finally, the trainmen pull on surgeon's gloves, topping them off with canvas gloves whose edges are bound with masking tape. If the job is extremely "hot," assault masks are included, and the man-from-Mars look is complete.

Crewmen and radiation monitor go to the 1,500-horsepower diesel waiting on the track and climb aboard.

The crew, cleared through security at a barricade, picks up a string of 10 empty flatcars and rolls smoothly over the desert to the tall stacks silhouetted against the horizon. The stacks mark the chemical separations plant where plutonium is separated from irradiated uranium fuel elements.

Engineer Dye takes the diesel onto a spur that leads directly to one of the buildings. With Cantwell directing the operation, he pushes his empties toward the windowless building.

WAITING FOR THEM is a burial box mounted on a flatcar. Dye has 10 cars between him and the box. Cox and Cantwell necessarily are closer when they make the coupling. When they move back to the locomotive, the radiation monitor runs his counter over them in a preliminary check.

Before the train arrived, the wornout and contaminated objects had been dropped into the box, inside of which was a 12-inch layer of sawdust to soak up any moisture. Steel clamps were snapped shut when the lid was dropped in place on the sponge-rubber gasket surrounding the lip of the box. These precautions were necessary to prevent a stray gust of wind from lifting radioactive dust from the box and scattering it over the desert.

Dye keeps the "funeral train" at a 10-mile-per-hour pace on the run to the burial ground far out in the desert wastes of the 640-square-mile Hanford project.

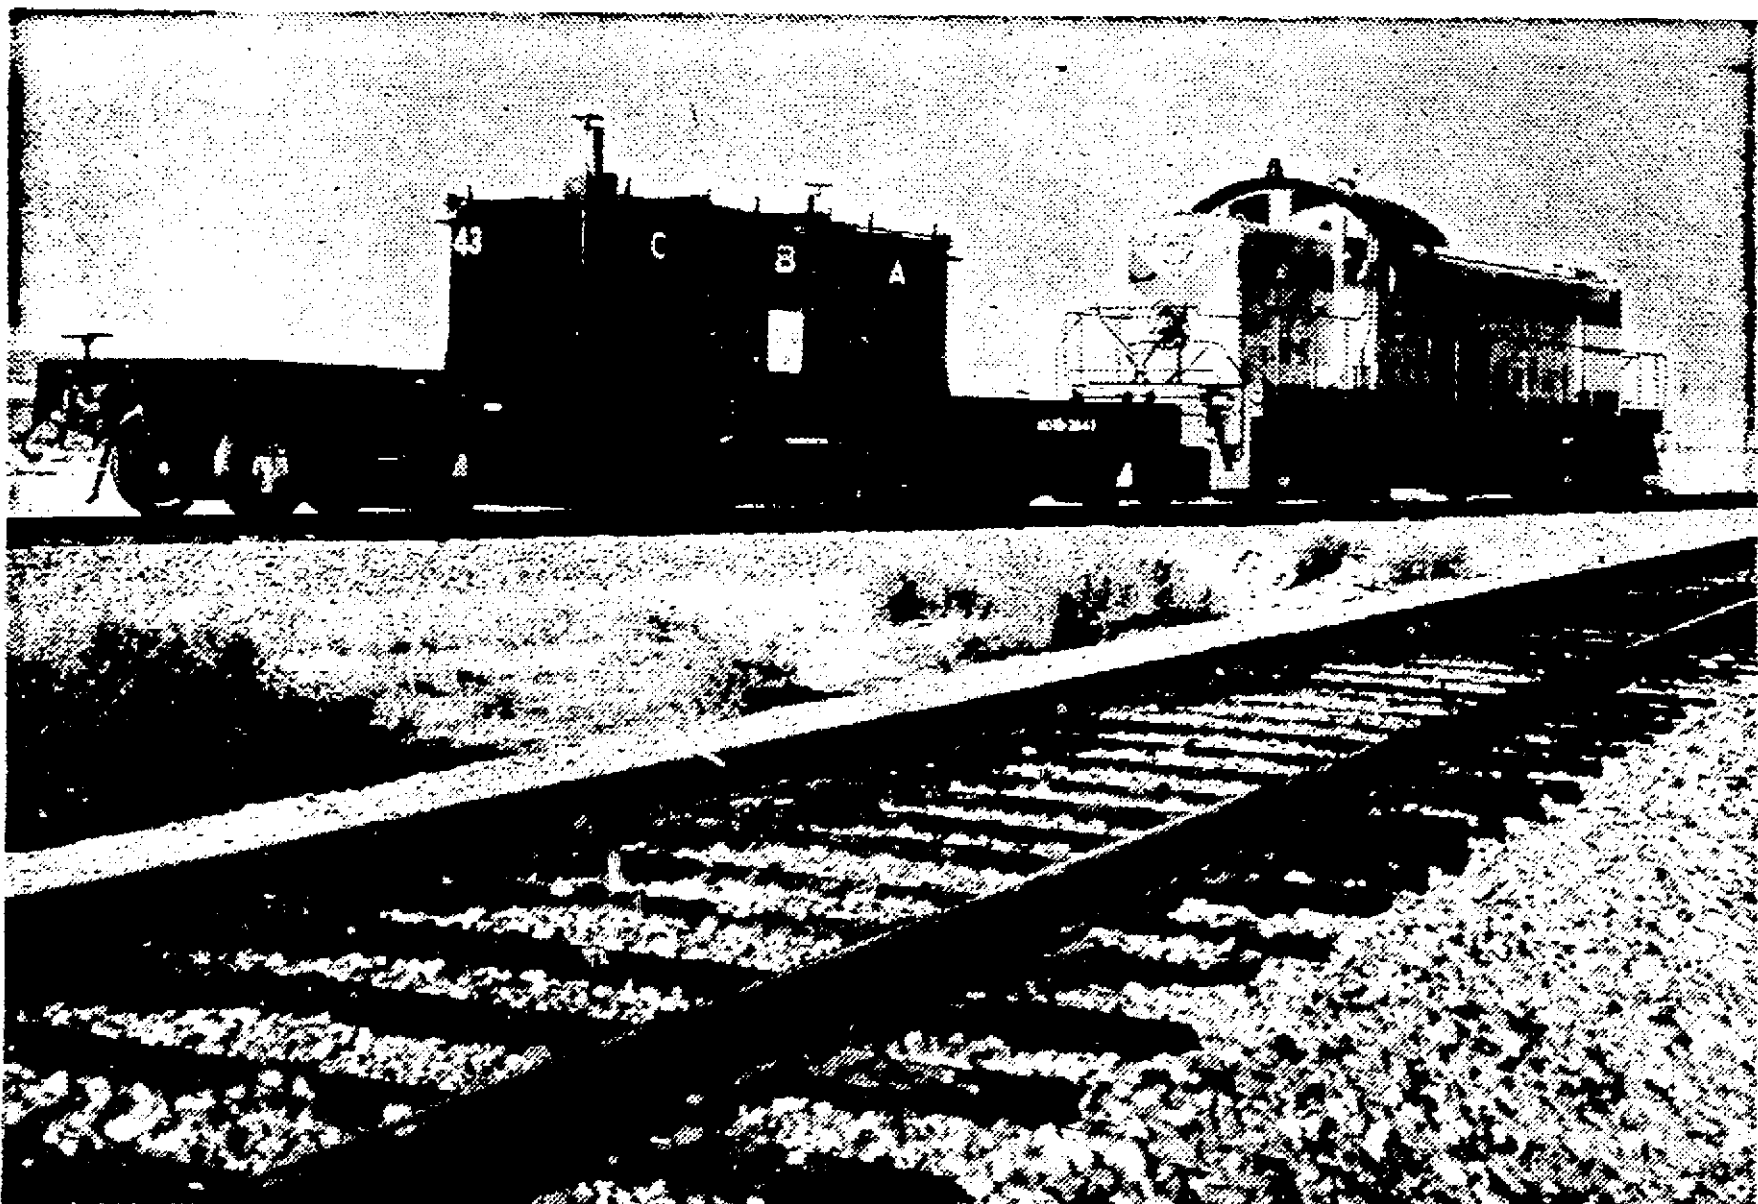

He glides the train to a stop beside a huge hole dug in the desert. A long cable, threaded through loops along the spacer cars, is peeled loose and attached to a tractor 500 feet away. At a signal from Cantwell, the box is skidded down from the flatcar, down a ramp and into the hole.

A SIGNALMAN, standing high on a crane boom, directs the burial. Bulldozers push earth over the crated equipment.

Burial of extremely heavy equipment, too unwieldy to be boxed, is handled in an even more bizarre fashion.

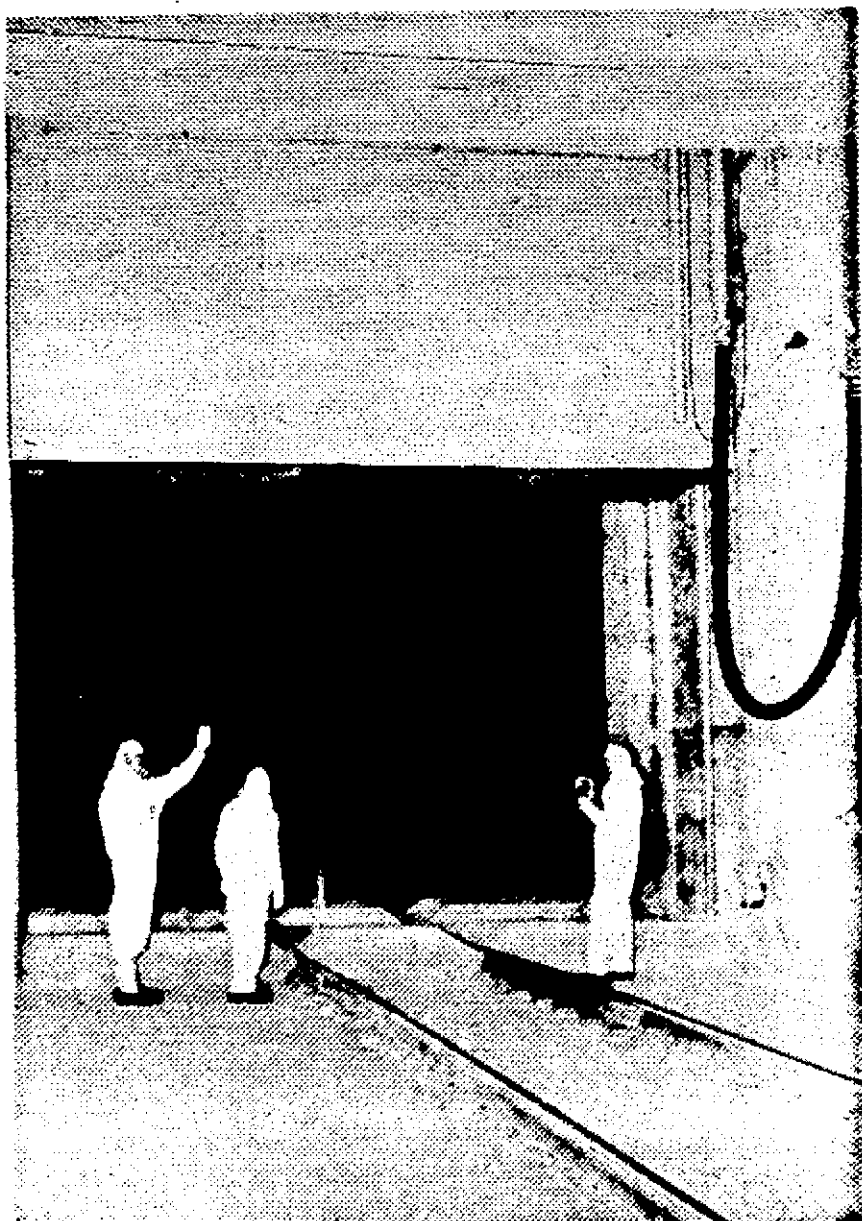

When a giant concentrator must be disposed of, it is lashed securely on a flatcar. A tunnel, 500 feet long has been dug beneath the desert. A spur leads back into the tunnel, where Dye rolls the flatcar with its somber load. Cox uncouples the car. The train pulls out into the sunshine. A huge, water-filled concrete barrier drops down, sealing off forever the flatcar and its burden.

The tunnel can swallow 12 flatcars. When it is filled, the spur will be shifted to a new cavern.

Uranium fuel elements which have been irradiated in Hanford atomic reactors are moved by rail crew to chemical separations plants in black cask cars like this.

Examples of the craft of Mrs. Ira Timson of Downey are shown here. Mrs. Timson has only her left arm.

Handicaps Don't Count

By Jane Ann Witte

DOWNEY
HOOKED RUGS in beautiful floral patterns grow under the flying fingers of 79-year-old Mrs. Ira Timson, 10835 S. Cord St.

To date, she has made 13 rugs 36x64 inches; has hooked an 11x14 foot rug to cover the floor of the den, carefully fitting it around a corner fireplace, and she has hooked a rug "picture" that hangs on the wall.

Nothing very unusual about that—except that Mrs. Timson has only one hand and arm—the left. Her right arm was blown off by a gun that "wasn't loaded" when she was 16 years old. Her left hand was injured at the same time, so that she has only a thumb and two good fingers with which to work.

"I've never considered myself handicapped," she says, "... A person isn't handicapped unless he thinks he is."

THE TIMSONS have been married 55 years; they have two daughters, both teachers. Mrs. Timson, originally a Nebraska farm woman, sews beautifully and still makes her own clothes; she used to bake bread and she still bakes pies, cakes, cookies, rolls. She has done much gardening and she has raised many chickens.

"I can't crochet, knit or quilt—those things take two hands," she says, "but I can make buttonholes, I can get a meal and I can diaper a baby as fast as anyone else can."

She makes some of her rugs from yarn and some from wool which she cuts herself with scissors. Some of her designs are original. She keeps her frame set up in the den so that she can work any time she likes, and as short or as long a time as she likes. She makes the rugs with a single loop stitch, working with a needle from the back. She prefers the floral rugs, each of which has a border and a scroll. The wall-to-wall den rug is of squares in a gay, hit-and-miss pattern. The rug "picture" is of a trim white cottage with trees, flowers and clouds.

MRS. TIMSON was born in a sod house on her father's homestead near Aurora, Neb. She was a promising young pianist when, in grouse-hunting season, a shotgun loaded with buckshot and in her brother's hands, went off tearing off her arm just below the shoulder. She threw up her left arm to protect her face and her left hand also caught the buckshot. The two smallest fingers were permanently crippled.

"It was very hard on my brother," she says.

The accident occurred in the days before telephones and automobiles, and she was eight miles from the village doctor, which gives some idea of the danger and suffering she endured.

She attended Lincoln Normal University and taught in Hamilton and Nance counties. After their marriage, she and her husband lived on a farm in Nance County.

"I've cooked for threshers—hungry threshers, a dozen at a time," she recalls. "We used to do our own butchering and make our own soap."

SHE MADE THE family's clothes, including clothes for the children. Ready-made garments were not plentiful in those days. But she found two things she could not do: she could not feed wet wash into the wringer and turn the handle at the same time, and she could not braid her children's hair. Mr. Timson had to braid the girls' hair until they were old enough to do it themselves.

The Timsons moved to Downey in 1939 when that area was orange groves. They had a four-acre chicken ranch, and until 1947 raised upwards of 6,000 chickens a year.

Their daughters are Dr. Gladys Stevenson, who heads the economic department at Whittier College, and Dr. Iris Marie Timson, who teaches in Los Angeles State College. The former received her Ph.D. from Iowa State College at Ames, Iowa, and the latter her Doctor in Education from Stanford.

La Purisima: Symbol of Courage

Restored in 1930s under the CCC program, La Purisima Mission, near Lompoc, is now a state park. This is a view of the padres' residence after restoration.

By Merilyn Goslaw Feller

THE MORALE of Long Beach was unshaken by disaster on March 10, 1933. Homes and schools fell but courage rose again as it did at La Purisima, 11th California mission, when a great earthquake struck in 1812.

For a beautiful, never-to-be-forgotten trip, travel north about 150 miles from Long Beach, on Highway 101, then turn left on Highway 1 for 20 miles to the scenic valley of Lompoc. La Purisima Mission is nestled among the rolling hills. Today it is a state park and has been restored to its true setting when the mission centered a flourishing community in 1787.

Thirteen days after the mission's 25th anniversary celebration in 1812, Father Mariano Payeras had no reason to feel this would be a day any different from days gone by.

THE MISSION Indians had gathered for atole, a gruel of ground barley. Each family dipped out its portion from a large pot of gruel that boiled all day over an open fire. A mother in her full, coarse muslin skirt and red sash brushed back her reboza, a black headpiece and shawl combined, as she finished her laundry at the mission washing pool. She felt at peace as her children were happily playing near the pear trees in the mission garden. Father was working at the one job he knew — hewing timber. Nature struck about 10:30 a.m. and terror gripped all the mothers as they ran for their children. The earth shook and swayed for a full four minutes.

Before the eyes of Father Payeras, his beloved mission crumbled to dust. Nearly all the adobe mission buildings and 100 native homes were laid low. Even today a huge crack is still evident as the earth was ripped asunder by the quake.

WITH THE SAME vigorous courage shown by Long Beach 24 years ago in rebuilding the city, the padre and his natives labored earnestly to complete the second Mission La Purisima some four miles from the original location.

In three years the community was completely restored. The residence building of the priests is an outstanding example of mission architecture. Housing was completed for more than a thousand Indians. By growing their own food and by their marvelous "do-it-yourself" ability, this mission's communicants became self-supporting.

The present curator, Frank

L. Gutierrez, reminiscing of days gone by, said, "The CCC boys in 1935 showed this same courage in the remarkable job of restoration of this mission. All the work was done by hand, in the same way that the Indians did after the earthquake of 1812."

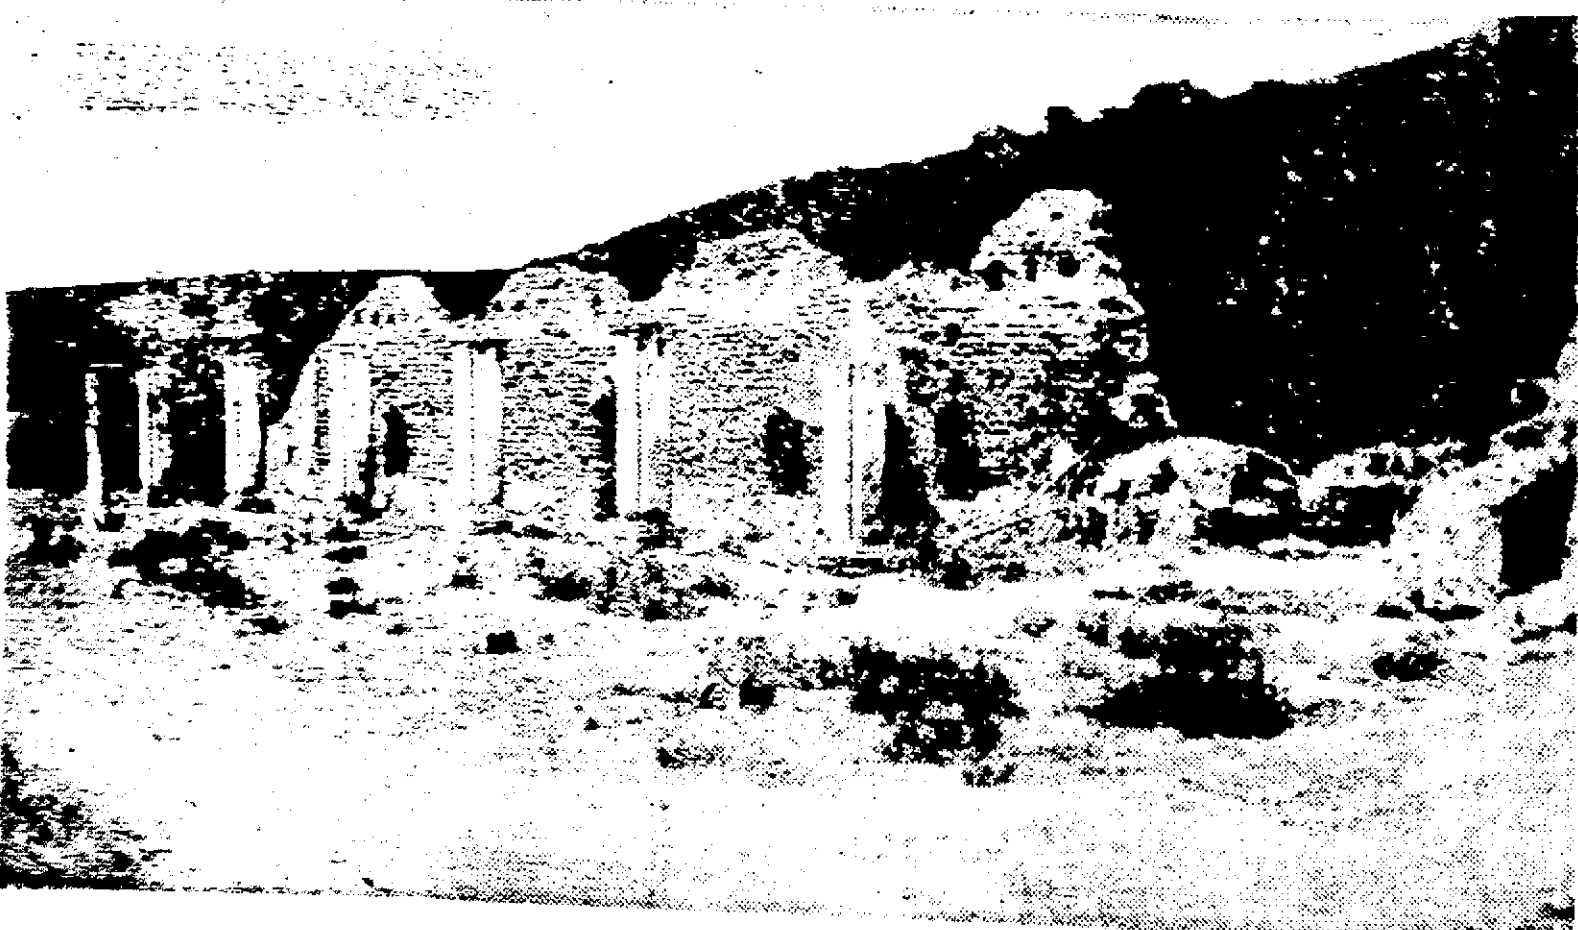

Gutierrez pointed out that the destruction of Father Payeras' mission was man-made. "After the secularization (1834) by the Mexican government, the mission was sold at auction to Pio Pico. Later he, in turn, sold the mission. It changed hands several times and the dust of time settled. Even the tiles from the roofs were sold; thus rains dissolved most of the walls."

Since 1903, the Union Oil Co. has owned the property and has deeded six parcels of land to the State of California.

In 1935, the state and Santa Barbara County purchased the rest of the grounds and all 980 acres became a state park.

TODAY LA PURISIMA Mission is not hemmed in by modern buildings.

Erected on a foundation built by Father Payeras and the natives are rumades to offer shade for picnics. No fee is charged. Hours on any day of the week are from 9 a. m. to 5 p. m.

La Purisima was knocked down by earthquake in 1812 and was rebuilt. Secularization again resulted in ruin (above), before 1935 restoration work began.

Square dancing is becoming increasingly popular among Long Beach youngsters. With boys' hands clasped, this octet of grade school dancers does Texas Star.

Balance and Swing, Little Doll

Susan Wentworth and Philip Brothers, both 11, promenade. Soon they will do ballroom dancing.

IN JEANS and sport shirts and bright cotton dresses that start out ankle length and soon are ballerina length—the girls grow so fast!—several thousand youngsters are learning to square dance at 3720 Long Beach Blvd.

They learn the Texas Star, My Pretty Girl, Glory Hallelujah, Oh Johnny—which really is a mixer—and the Bunny Hop, even though the Bunny Hop isn't a square dance.

Most of them are in the fifth and sixth grades.

THEY HAVE CUTE NAMES for their square dance groups: Dude Ranchers, Dudes and Dolls, Jeans and Janes, Levis and Lace, Silks and Spurs.

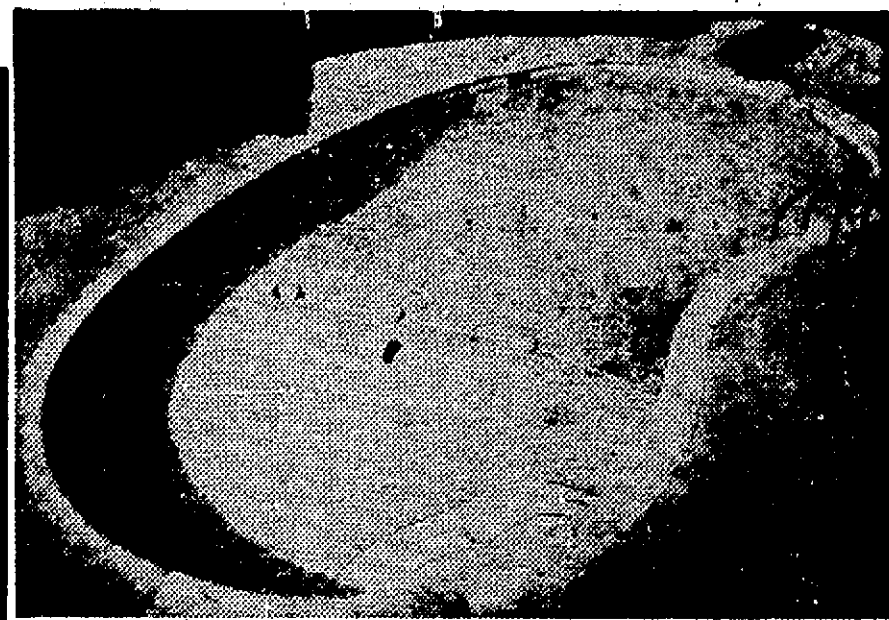

From square dancing, they naturally go to the Black Hawk waltz, three step, Varsovienné and soon they are doing the basic ballroom dances — waltz, foxtrot, tango, rumba, samba and mambo—under the direction of Derrall and Chloe Call.

The children are taught proper ballroom etiquette — a man NEVER leaves a woman stranded on the floor; he asks her nicely to dance, he doesn't just jerk his thumb at her; he seats her at his right when he serves her party refreshments. And both learn to stay off each other's feet, if possible.

OUR COVER

"May I have the next dance?" asks Steven Spurling, 11, of Marjorie Ann Green (center), 10. On Marjorie Ann's right is Betty Jo Fluke, 11; on her left, Trudy Winkler, 10.

He Carved His Boyhood Scenes

COSTA MESA
LUDWIG ORT, 840 Victoria St., Costa Mesa, loved the early scenes of his boyhood America.

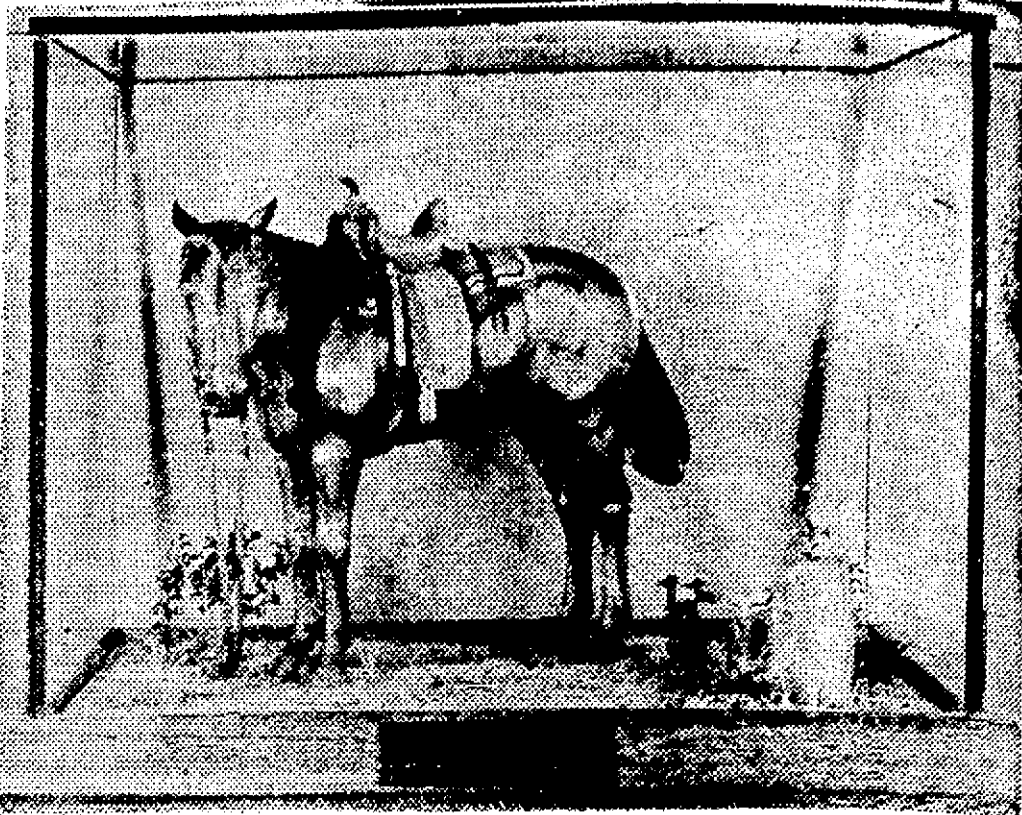

He loved them so much that he wants the generations that have come since to know about them.

Therefore, with painstaking skill, Ort has carved from many kinds of wood the people, animals, scenes of his youth.

Realizing that his work would take patience, he first carved his pony named "Patience," and then he called his story "The Trail of Patience."

THE CARVING OF "Patience" is made up of 18 different kinds of hard wood, the work scaled an inch to the foot. Shown beside the horse is a miniature of the natural stump on which the boy Ludwig used to sit and dream, and near them a little gopher carved in different woods.

As Patience used to carry Ludwig over the western trails, he started Ludwig on the carvings of his childhood.

Fond memory of the horse, Patience, he rode in boyhood led Ort to carve figure of the faithful animal.

Frontier scenes came to Ort as he sat by his horse carved in wood. He remembered when his family settled in the west.

So he carved "The Settlers," which brings to life the hardships of the early settlers. The settlers were on their way to a home deep in Oklahoma Territory.

He carved the campsite beside a spring, the scene made with maple burl. The covered wagon built to scale is constructed with 600 pieces of pecan wood. Each bolt and nut is carved and assembled separately.

WHAT YOUR NAME MEANS

DEAR MISS RULE: Would appreciate your analysis of McFARLAND.—G. B. M., Long Beach.

My maiden name was McFARLAIN. I came from England as a girl. Please tell about it.—MRS. E. H. G., Long Beach.

G. B. M. and E. H. G.: The ancestor of the Scotch Clan McFarlane was Gilchrist, brother of the third Earl of Lennox. His son was baptized Pharlán, the Gaelic equivalent of "Bartholomew," a Biblical name meaning "son of the furrows." The lineage descended from Pharlán took the clan-title MacPharlán. Part of the family changed the name to MacFarland, and one branch used MacFarlain. The family lands were on the west bank of the celebrated Loch Lomond. Near the end of the 1500s the men of Clan MacFarlane were defeated in battle by the English. In the early 1600s, the last descendant of the clan chiefs migrated to Virginia. The ancient coat-of-arms of the clan had a red St. Andrew's cross between four red roses on a silver shield. Their motto was "This I'll Defend."

DEAR MISS RULE: I would like the analysis the name COLLINS. P. T., Wilmington.

I would appreciate your brief genealogy of COLLINS.—F. D. C., Long Beach.

P. T. and F. D. C.: COLLINS is taken from the early English phrase "Son of Nicholas" by way of the diminutive Collin, meaning "little Nick." The Greeks originated Nicholas, meaning "soldier of the victorious army." The Collins coat-of-arms had three black birds on a blue shield. Many of this lineage in America are descended from Thomas Collins of Massachusetts, born about 1630.

DEAR MISS RULE: What do you know about my maiden name VAUGHAN. I was born in Ireland.—M.H., Long Beach.

I would like information on the name VAUGHN. — W.V.J., Long Beach.

M. H. and W. V. J.: The Welsh family named VAUGHAN are descended from princes of Wales who lived prior to the 10th century. In the ancient Cymric (Welsh) language, "vaughan" meant "short in stature." The Irish surname Vaughan comes from O'Maughane, meaning "descendants of the great one." This family lived in Munster. Both Welsh and Irish descendants in America have in some cases shortened the name to Vaughn. The family coat-of-arms had a rampant red lion on an ermine covered shield. Several descendants of the Welsh family settled in Virginia in the 1600s. Their grandchildren fought in the Revolutionary War.

DEAR MISS RULE: I would like the meaning of SCHOWALTER, often spelled Showalter.—D. E. S., Long Beach.

D. E. S.: SCHOWALTER immortalizes the physical characteristics of a sovereign who ruled a kingdom later incorporated into the nation of Germany. The root-source of this name was the courtly title "Schon-Waltener" or "handsome ruler." Schon-Waltener was handed down through the centuries in the short form "Scho-Walter." The descendants first settled in America in the 1700's, among the Mennonites in Pennsylvania.

DEAR MISS RULE: Would you give information on the surname HAYES.—O. V. H. and J. H., Long Beach.

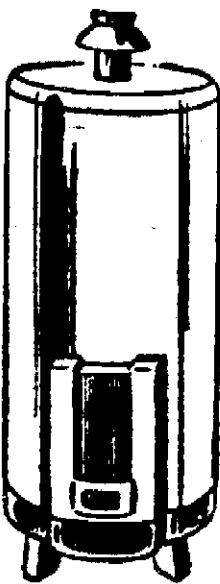

O. V. H. and J. H.: In old England "Hayes" meant a hedge enclosing a group of fields. From this environmental description developed the surnames Hayes, Hays, Hawes, Haigh and Haugh. In the 14th century Chaucer wrote in his Troilus, "But right so as these holtes and these hayes, that have in winter dead beene and dry, revesten them in greene when May is; when every lusty beast lusteth to pley." The Hayes coat-of-arms had three black tiger heads on a silver shield. Many members of this family settled in Maryland in the 1700s.

Send your names to La Reina Rule in care of Southland Magazine, Independent, Press-Telegram, 6th and Pine, Long Beach 12, Calif., for analysis and brief genealogy, for publication in this column.

HORIZONTAL REDWOOD siding faces the building on the exterior, presenting a rustic appearance, a look that best suits the interior mood. Opening off a small shed-type porch to the jingle of sleighbells is the front door that leads directly into the front room.

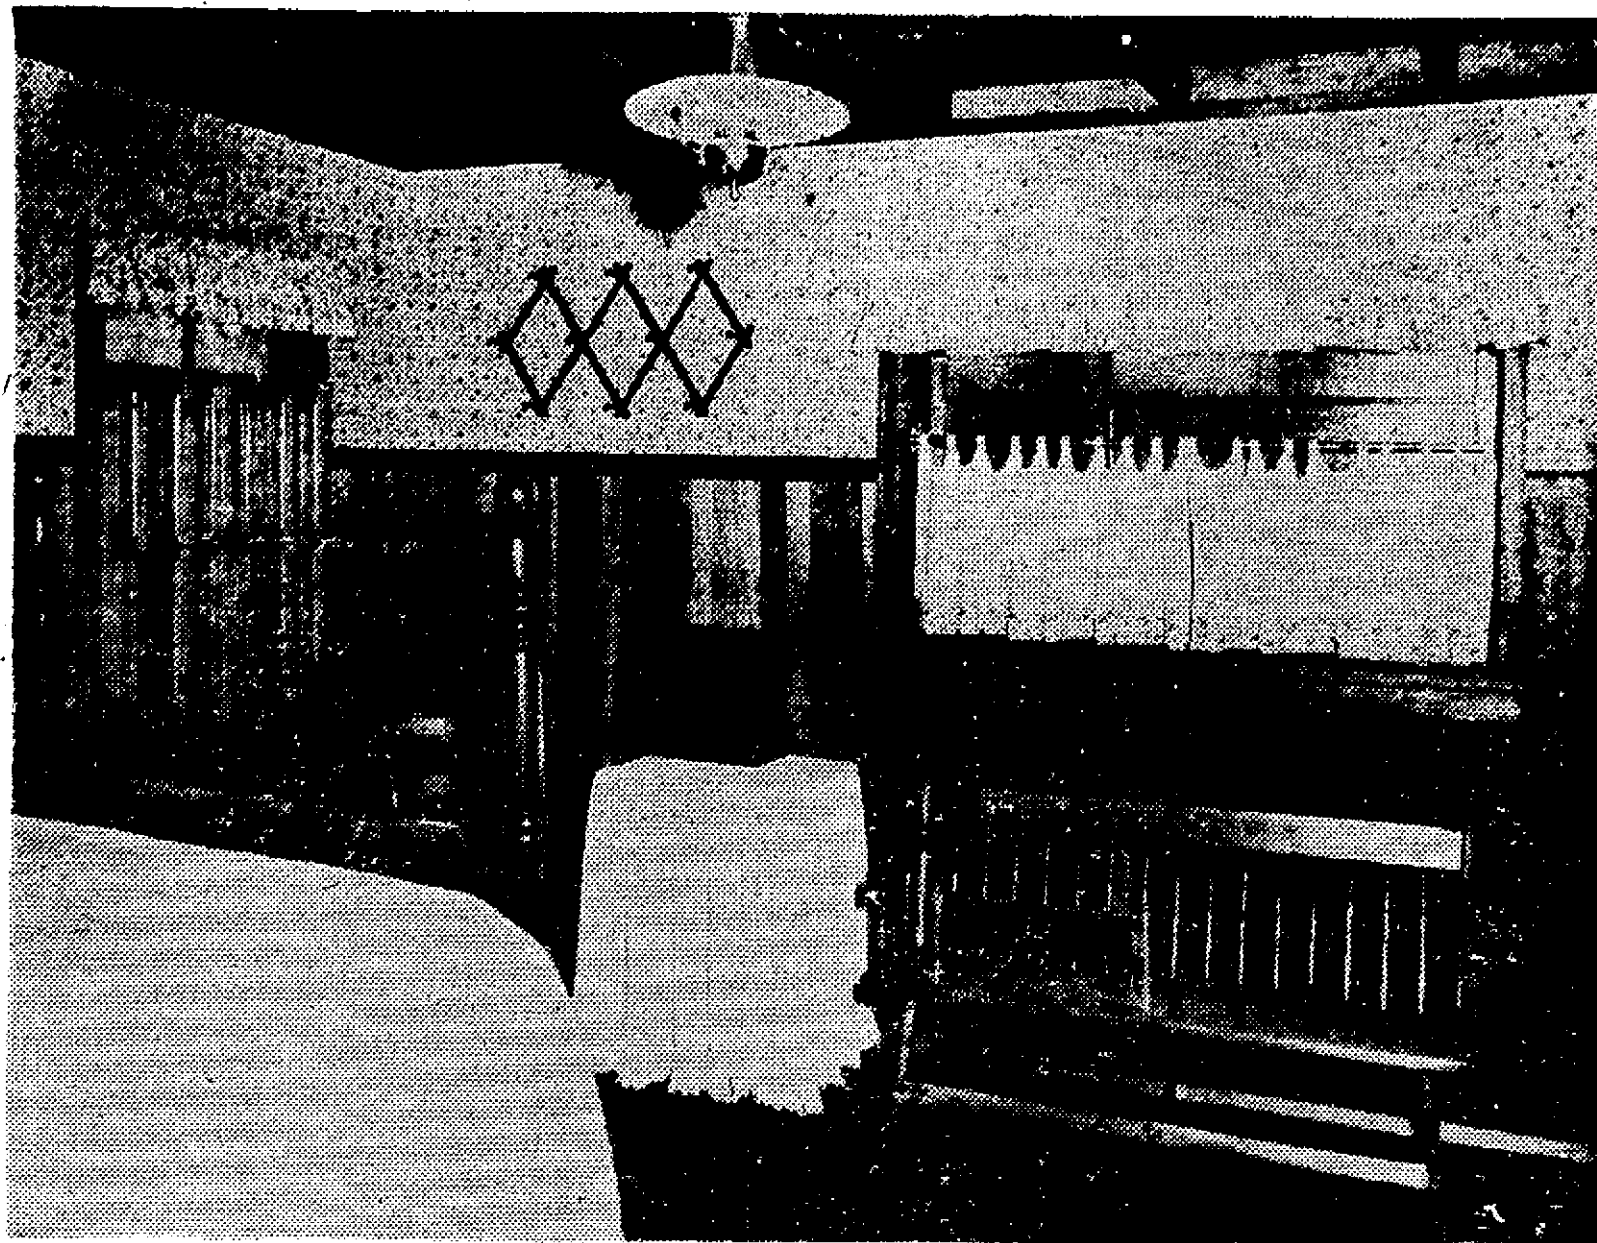

At a first glance it is obvious that virtually everything in the house is antique—livable, practical and attractive old items that, in addition to their charm, offer a great deal of downright function.

Oval rugs of braided wool and in riotous color cover the floor. Tiny, cocoa-like floral, provincial-patterned wallpaper gives more a feeling of texture than of pattern. The wall just inside the front door is paneled in mahogany. Against it stands a provincial television console upon which is an arrangement of antiques—an old apothecary scale and bottle and small bric-a-brac. On the wall hang two old brass sconces that flank an attractive arrangement composed of a maple rack and small, hand-painted china dishes.

Standing before a picturesque window is a provincial, modified wing sofa upholstered in pale beige tweed. The multi-paned window behind it has been installed with antique pine side shutters and fitted with shallow shelves that display, against the

You Can Fly-Fish Off the Pier!

IF YOU are looking for a different type of winter sport, try fly-fishing right in the city's front yard — off a pier, the breakwaters or a dock in the inner harbor.

Several Long Beach anglers have discovered that this type of fishing provides the ultimate in sport at any season of the year. Right now, you can catch mackerel, bonito — even halibut — without getting your feet wet.

If you don't know how to handle a fly rod, then try a weighted fly on a spinning outfit. It works the same, sometimes even better.

PAUL HARMON, who owns Tommy's Tackle Store in Seal Beach, introduced me to this different type of fishing last fall.

Paul has been using streamer-type flies for two or three years. He doesn't even change from business clothes when he wants to go fishing. He even takes a part of his lunch hour, makes a few casts off a mole or dock and usually goes back to work with a few fish for the deep-freeze.

Paul, as far as can be determined, was the first person to start fly-fishing for halibut. And he learned about that in an accidental sort of way.

He was fishing the surface for bonito, got a back-lash and, while untangling that, the fly sank to the bottom. He retrieved in the usual manner and wham! a three-pound halibut hit.

PAUL'S METHOD of fly-fishing for bonito is simple. He prefers a tiny spinning outfit with six- or eight-pound-test monofilament, perhaps a couple of split-shot sinkers — just enough to make a good cast into a channel.

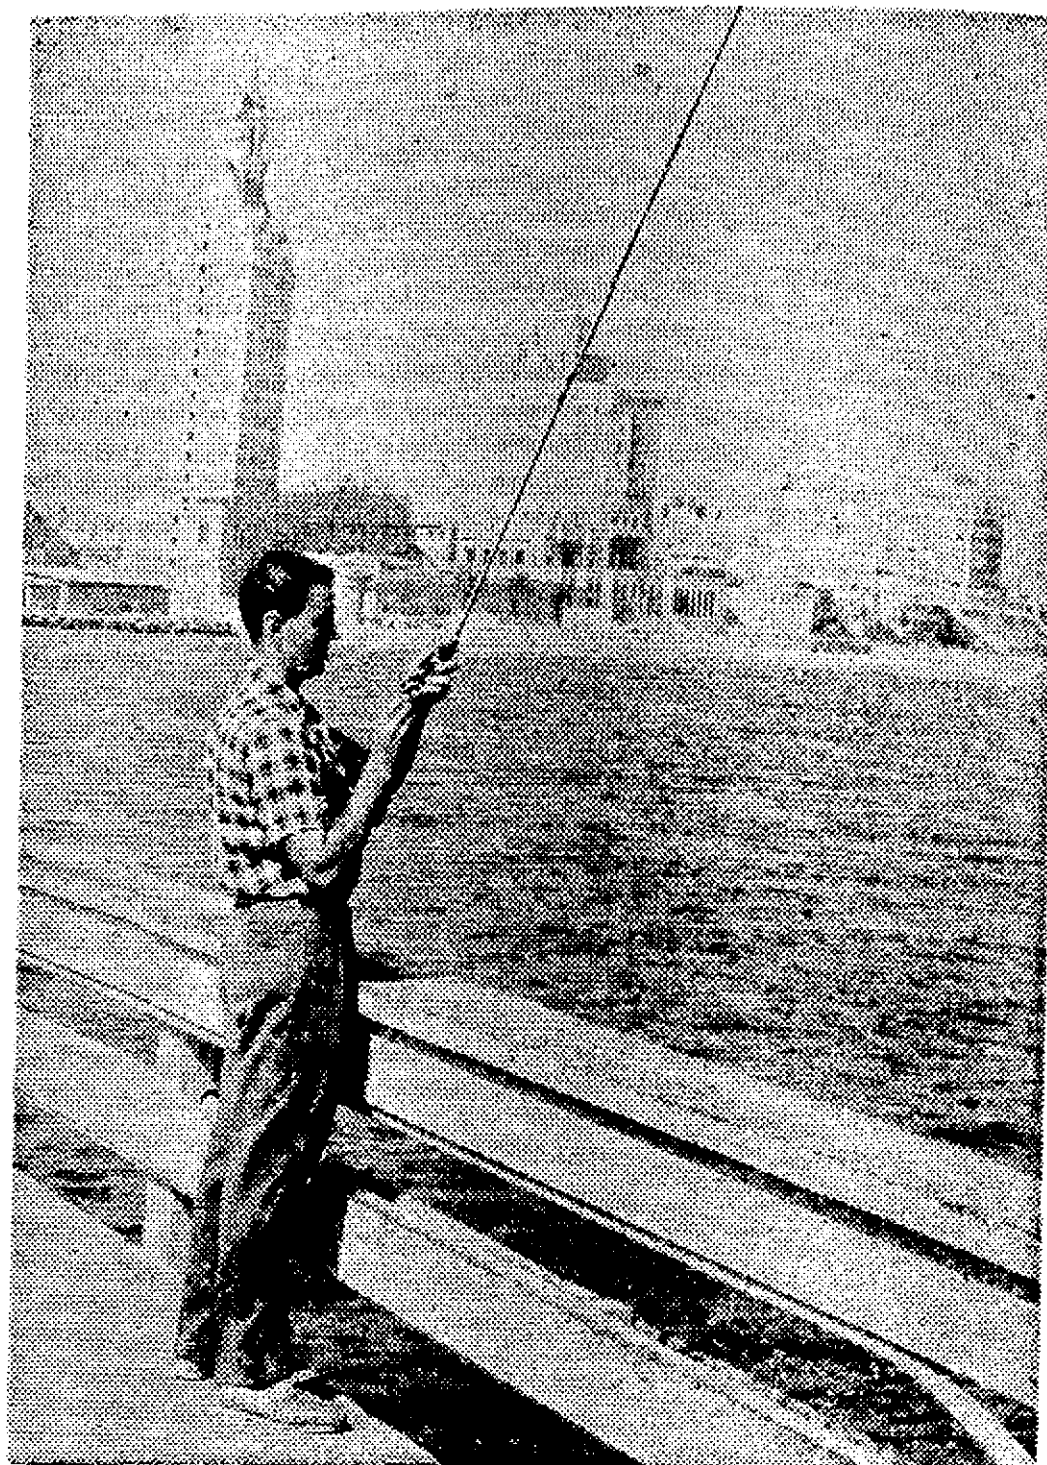

Paul drives up to a dock, parks, takes outfit in hand and then scans the water. If the water is glassy, a run of fish is easy to spot because of the gentle ruffle that moves along the surface. He casts into the middle of such a ruffle, counts the equivalent of a slow 10, then starts retrieving with short, quick jerks. Therein lies the secret. An ordinary spin-fisherman might work the water all afternoon without a single strike. Paul works the rod tip constantly with quick jerks, reeling rapidly all the while.

I watched Paul with envy the first time we went fishing together. He caught and released a half-dozen mackerel and two bonito in a matter of minutes while I got nothing except a lot of fresh air and sunshine. We were fishing on a dock where steamships normally tie up. On that day the wharf was clear of ships and workmen.

THIS TYPE of fishing may be done anywhere in the Long Beach and Los Angeles Harbor area, but it is well to observe "NO FISHING" signs. Certainly no sportsman wants to interfere with the loading of a ship or the routine operations on a dock.

One of the best spots for bonito is the entrance channel to the Long Beach inner harbor, near the Pontoon Bridge that connects this city and Terminal Island. Inasmuch as the shoreline is the property of the Southern California Edison Co., it is best to use an outboard to reach the channel.

As for flies, Paul has tried many of them. There is one, however, that seems to work like a charm. It is a large fly, a copy of the famous Vee-Bee used in fresh water for bass, crappie and bluegill. Incidentally, Paul started using Vee-Bees, then asked the manufacturer, Bill Equitz, of Long Beach, to make larger copies on

Photos by the Author

Without even changing from business clothes, anglers can catch fish by fly-fishing off Long Beach piers.

By Donnell Culpepper

No. 4 and 6 hooks. Bill now makes the flies and they carry the Vee-Bee name, although larger than the fresh-water variety. They come in several colors, but the white and yellow combinations are hard to beat.

IN CASE YOU are not familiar with the Vee-Bee, it is a fly that has two brilliant eyes at the top of the hook.

These flies can be used successfully around the breakwaters. Perch of all kinds, bass, mackerel and other fish often strike at the flies if they are fished properly.

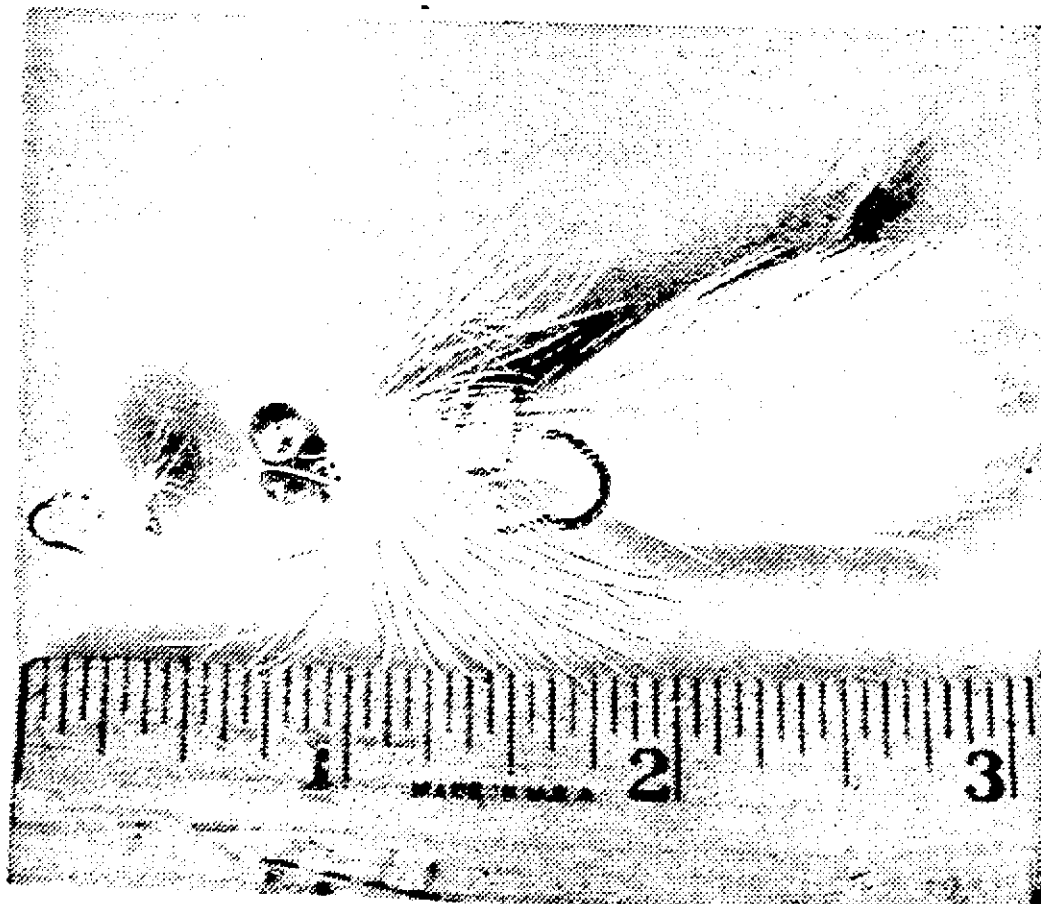

The same kind of a retrieve is used when fishing for halibut, but the outfit must be rigged differently. Tie a shiny sinker about three feet from the hook on a dropper piece of monofilament. The sinker should not be more than one ounce, preferably about half of that. The shiny sinker has two purposes: it gets the fly down to the bottom in a hurry and it also serves as an attraction for the flatties that lie half-submerged in the sand.

ONE OF THE BEST areas for halibut in the winter and early spring is the comparatively calm water between Rainbow and Belmont Piers. While some surf fishermen wade out in boots to try their luck, boat anglers seem to have the best luck. Often the halibut lie just beyond the best cast a surf fisherman can make.

Halibut are everywhere when the runs start and you can do just as well from most of the piers and moles in the harbor. Paul counted more than 200 halibut catches on flies last spring. Most of those were caught on his lunch-hour periods.

Halibut are not too plentiful at this writing, but the mackerel and bonito have been providing excellent sport through the winter. Get a 5-pound bonito on the other end of a spinning outfit and you'll have one of the sportiest fish in the ocean.

You'll be lucky to land one, especially if you are fishing from the top of a mole, 20 feet above the surface of the water.

Fly used for fly-fishing close-in waters of Long Beach is "Stony's Special." Smaller, No. 12 fly shown at left.

Vanishing Rancho

By Jo Hindman

MALIBU means bad road, rough going. Indians first loved the mountainous strip of surf-land lying downcoast from the point they called Mu-gu, mimicking by dialect the sob and moan of waves washing in and out of the caves beneath the frowning cliff.

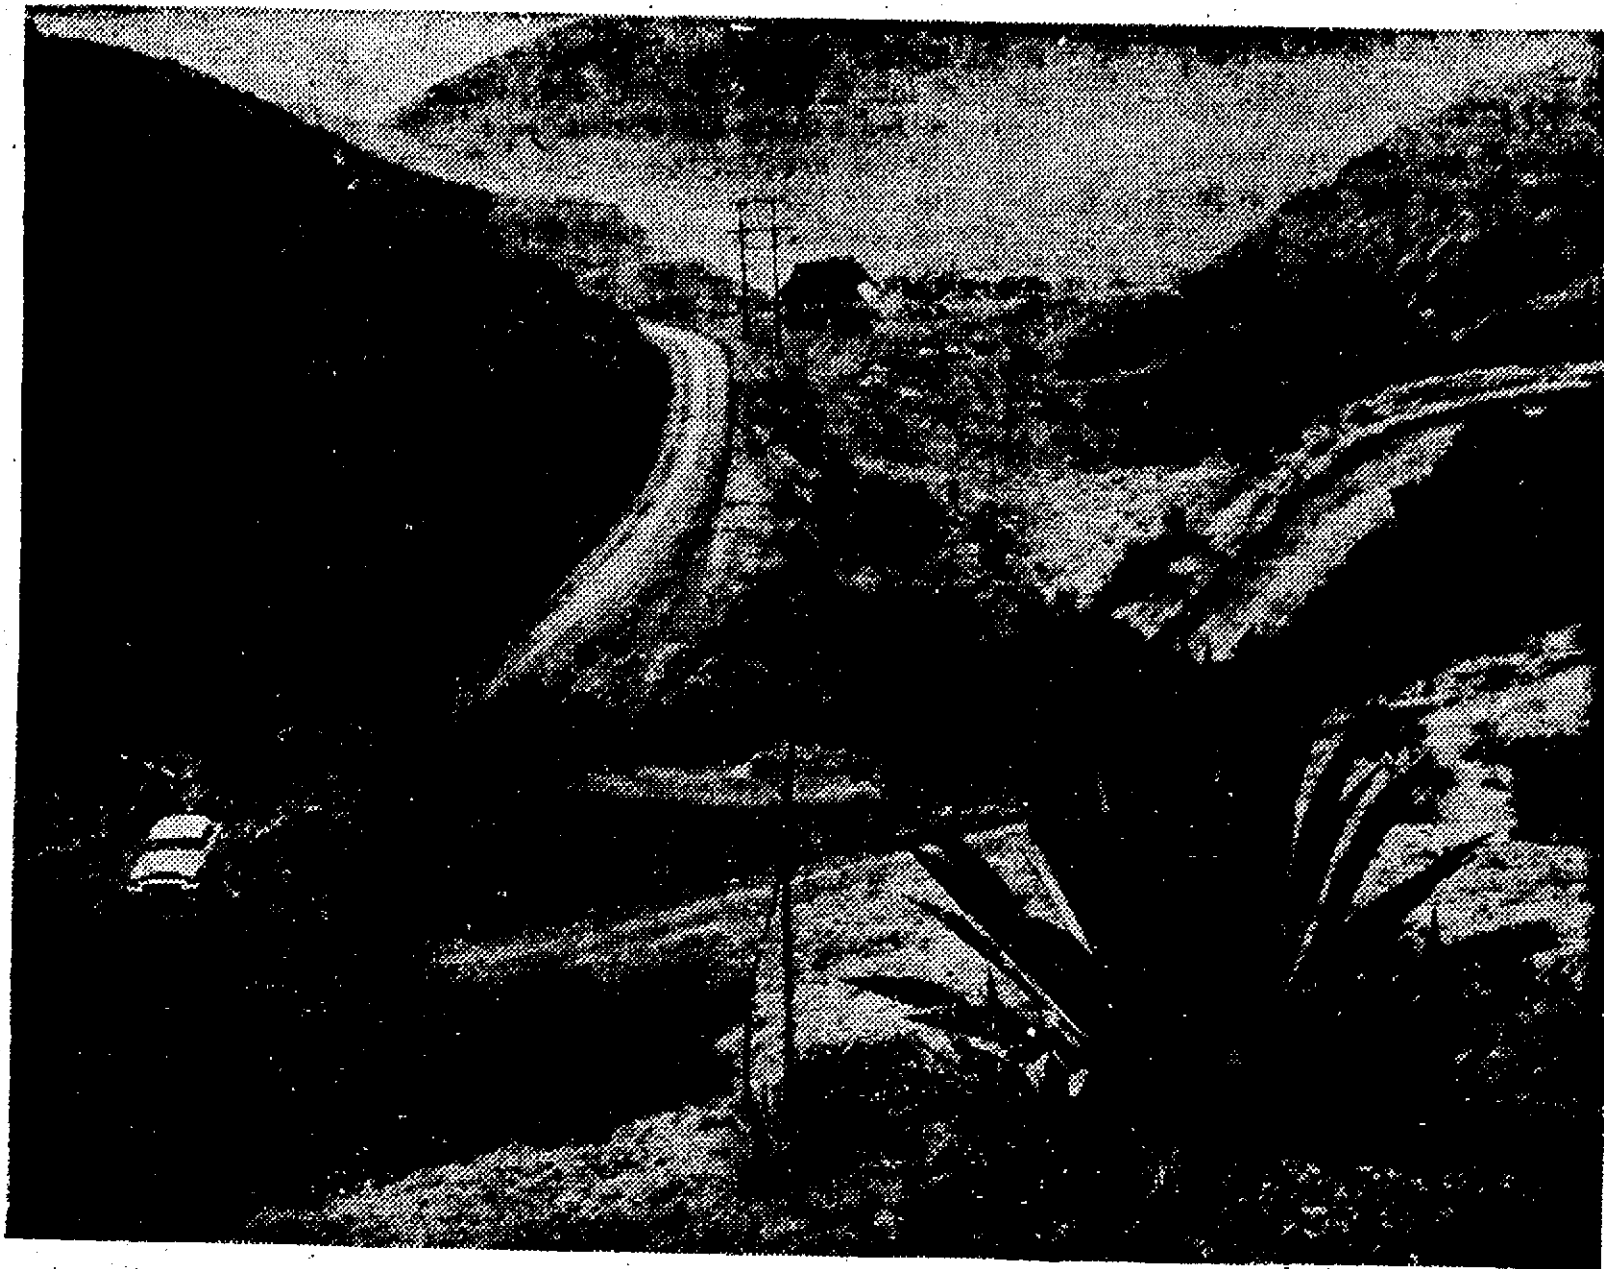

The King of Spain claimed the land and surrounding territory, based on the discovery of Santa Monica Bay by Juan Rodriguez Cabrillo in 1542. The parcel known as Rancho Malibu Sequit, 13,315 acres, was granted to the Tapia family in 1804 by the military governor of the Californias, acting for the King of Spain.

Boundaries of the old ranch, in relation to present landmarks extend from Las Flores Canyon (east boundary), then 26 miles "upcoast" to Little Sycamore Canyon (northwest boundary) where two modern roadside cafes flank the canyon mouth. The fringe of peaks visible from the shoreline (south boundary) marks the limits of the old ranch to the north.

LATEST MALIBU troubles were wind-whipped flames that crisscrossed the old ranch between Christmas 1956 and New Year's Day. Now, like battle-stripes earned from the conflagration, bands of wild flowers are showing color. Shooting stars, blue lupine, filaree, daisies, stately yucca, sea dahlia, sand verbena and others will continue to appear, in sea-carved in cherry, each busy with his or her task in the day's travel.

Day after day the settlers traveled on until they found the land of opportunity in a new and fertile country. They cleared away trees, plowed the soil and built stout log cabins.

The artist creates this scene in "Frontier Farmer."

The cabin has a large rock fireplace; a kettle hangs on a crane; on the hearth are Dutch oven, tea kettle and coffee pot; hanging from the mantel is a long-handled skillet and poker. All are carved from ebony. On the mantel stands an antique clock and a candle mold. In the corner stands an old-fashioned safe, the shelves stacked with tiny dishes.

THE HOME-MADE slab table holds a caster, spoon holder and jar of knives and forks, made of lemon wood. The bearskin rug lying before the hearth is of gum and bethabaro. The muzzle loader was made of three woods; the powder horn hanging on a prong was carved from walnut. The quilt covering the bed is made from 101 tiny hexagons of 77 kinds of wood.

A Sister from Naga

THE MURPHY SISTERS of North Long Beach attract attention wherever they go. Annette, 18, a Jordan High School senior and journalism enthusiast, has reddish hair and brown eyes. Grace, 11, a sixth-grader in the Grant Elementary School, has olive skin, thick jet-black braids and deep brown eyes.

Annette is the daughter of the Rev. and Mrs. Hubert E. Murphy, long-time missionaries in India. Grace is their adopted daughter, loved as their own child. She is half Naga and half Scotch. Her mother, a member of a Naga tribe, and her father, a Scotch officer in the British army, and her other close relatives were killed in World War II when the Japanese invaded the Naga Hills, a low range of mountains stretching for 200 miles along the Assam-Burma border.

When she was 3 years old, the Murphys obtained her from a Church of Scotland orphanage at Kalampong, high in the Himalayan Mountains near the Tibetan border.

SHE WILL become an American citizen next year.

"Our Annette, who was born in India, prayed for a sister," says Mrs. Murphy. "... We saw a picture of Grace in the orphanage, and knew that we had to have her."

The Naga Hills, explains Mrs. Murphy, are part of the Hump over which United States airmen flew supplies, equipment and men to our allies in China in World War II. A dozen or so tribes make up the Nagas. Some tribes are head-hunters.

Grace was born in Kohima, Assam, according to the Murphys. Her grandparents were converted in the Presbyterian mission in Kohima, which makes her a "third generation Christian."

EFFORTS to bring Grace to the United States failed for years because she had to enter in the Indian quota, which is small. The Murphys are former Oklahomans and finally Rep. John Jarman of Oklahoma entered a special bill in Congress granting Grace permission to enter.

The four Murphys arrived last October. The Rev. Murphy returned in January to his mission at Bangalore, in the central part of southern India. Mrs. Murphy and Annette probably will join him soon, but Grace will remain until she gets her citizenship.

The Murphys are "faith missionaries," which means that they are supported by contributions. They are not medical missionaries, but they have had much first aid training, so they help natives who are injured or ill.

"IN INDIA," says Mrs. Murphy, "you do what you have to do."

In addition to their regular services, they have a special Sunday School and church service for lepers. It is conducted on the roadside, outside the mission gate.

The Murphys have many art objects from India, including an embroidered and painted pictures of a yak and rider from Kalampong; rosewood elephant with ivory tusks, rosewood lion, copper and brass bowls and plaques. Their television seats are camel saddles from Egypt.

THIS LONG BEACH HOME IS SHORT IN FOOTAGE, LONG IN CHARM

east light, a sparkling array of old colored glass.

FACING THE SOFA is a very old tavern table cut down to coffee-table height. It still proudly retains its original white china drawer pulls. More than 100 years old, its mellowed old top seems virtually impervious to any new signs of wear.

Opposite the front door stands a quaint, conversation-provoking arrangement that presents such a pretty picture from the doorway that it makes up for the lack of an entry. Against the dainty, sprigged wallpaper is an old pine washstand on which a double hurricane lamp in yellow and white milk glass casts a cheery light. Over this are four colorful old rooster prints from an English poultry catalogue. Framed in distressed pine, they tie in nicely with the pine stand.

At the far end of the living room is a huge wing chair upholstered in coral-colored fabric patterned with brown carriage motifs. A second antique washstand, this one quite differently styled from the other, acts as an occasional table near the chair. Before the chair is a Victorian footstool—a squat, amusing object that still retains its original upholstery. Oval needlepoint pictures and an ornately carved cuckoo clock complete the grouping.

THE KITCHEN, opening off the living room, is one with the dinette. Even in this room the furnishings, except for appliances, are antique. At the windows are pine shutters that filter the north and east sunlight. Wallpaper in provincial pattern features a ruddy, turkey-red background. The pale butter-yellow ceiling reflects light and matches the yellow cabinets and tile countertops.

Just inside the open arch from the living room is the dining area with its quaint old table and captain's chairs. On one wall hangs a pine shelf that displays Mrs. Stanley's antique pitcher collection. Between the dining area and the preparation area is a Dutch door that opens to the garden.

In the cooking center, even the cooking utensils are antique—with handsome old copper pans and pots presenting a homey look. The "everyday" dishes are pieces of old china that contribute much appeal to the table which is most often spread with a gay red-and-white checked cloth.

OF PARTICULAR interest in the kitchen is the plate-drying rack that is located over the sink between two flanking cupboards. This unique pine rack, a copy of the kind found regularly in English countryside cottages, holds an assortment of cups, saucers and small plates where they are placed within handy reach to dry by themselves.

Off the living room is the bedroom, a surprisingly spacious area. Sage green paper sprinkled with tiny red and white figures sets the scheme. A huge high bed of combined pine and fruitwood has given up its old rope bottom in favor of the more contemporary spring- and -mattress combination; otherwise it retains its authenticity. Overlying the bed is the handmade quilt of multi-colors in the traditional sunbonnet pattern.

THE NEW BEDROOM opens off the original bedroom. It, too, has an old, but beautiful bed. A high wainscot of natural mahogany runs around the room above which is a calico-print wallpaper that has predominantly pink and rose figures. A fabric-ruffled valance over the pine-shuttered windows matches, exactly, the pattern of the paper. The west window is a bay and has been dressed with scalloped, unbleached muslin cafe curtains suspended on rings from a brass rod. Before the window is an interesting old "mammy bench"—a long pine bench on rockers, complete with small rail that creates a sort of cradle at one end.

The most unusual feature of the whole house is the new all-purpose room that does more than its share to relieve the rest of the house of living pressures. It provides adequate space for the laundry appliances, a large marble-topped storage unit (which doubles as a convenient dressing table) and capacious storage closets. Color scheme and shutters make this a pretty room.

A small bath opens to the service area. Like the latter, it, too, has quaint old lighting fixtures and a pink and white color scheme. In keeping with the old-fashioned aspects of the house, even the built-in mirror is flanked by storage chests with old pine shutters for doors.

The Vanishing Rancho at Malibu

son, through May into early June. Wildflowers usually bloom more vividly after fires, some say because of carbon added to the soil.

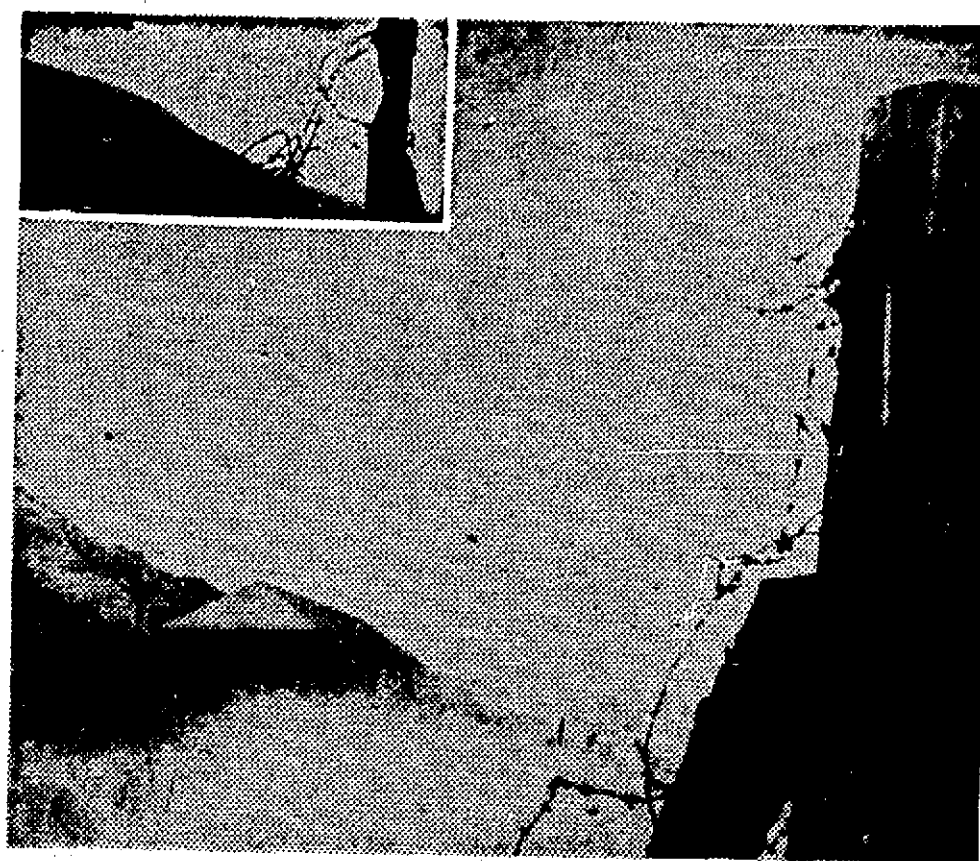

Tapia, Prudhomme, Keller, and Rindge were names that appeared on titles and deeds as the beautiful property passed from hand to hand during Spanish, Mexican and then U. S. rule. The Rindge ranch home, a fabulous mansion of Spanish archways, tiled roofs, and now known as Serra Retreat under supervision of Franciscan monks, is closed to visitors, but can be seen from a distance at the highway bridge (Alternate U. S. 101) over the estuary of Malibu Creek. This section has not burned.

A FRAGMENT of the old land grant, known as Tapia Park on the Malibu Canyon road, is open to the public as a picnic site operated by the Los Angeles County Park and Recreation Department. The old Tapia barn is still standing on the grounds. Malibu Canyon road crosses from the coast to Ventura Blvd., inland. (Turn north toward the mountains at the signals, the only traffic lights between Oxnard and Santa Monica.) Tapia Park lies near the summit opposite the junction of Pioma Road at a bridge spanning the upper waters of Malibu Creek. The creek was center of bitter litigation involving early day water rights.

Although Malibu remained intact longer than most Spanish land grants, its character as a ranch is yielding to the demands of population and recreation seekers in Southern California. Private homes, public parks, including Zuma Beach near historic Point Dume, motels, cafes, schools and churches and other hallmarks of civilization now occupy the former domain of the Indian, puma and mule deer.

Broken fence, deteriorating line rider's cabin spelled end of Rindge cowboys era. Now this old landmark is no more, destroyed (inset) by Malibu fire of 1956.

Corned beef, with parsley potatoes, soda biscuits and asparagus with a mustard-horseradish cream sauce, is tasty for St. Patrick's Day dinner.

FOOD

By Mildred K. Flanary

Independent Press-Telegram Home Economics Editor

MARCH 17, a four-leaf clover day for all of us who are Irish by heart if not by descent, is a day for the wearin' of the green, parades and dining on Irish favorite dishes.

And, synonymous with St. Patrick's Day is corned beef, so celebrate in true Irish fashion with a corned beef dinner for family and friends. Cabbage, of course, is the first thought for an accompaniment, but for a variation, try fresh asparagus, which is abundant right now. Try asparagus served with a mustard and horseradish cream sauce that accents both the asparagus and corned beef flavors. To complete this Irish dinner, serve parsley potatoes and shamrock-shaped soda biscuits.

Following is the recipe for mustard cream sauce . . . and just in case you've forgotten

Corned Beef

TO KEEP it in shape: a 5-lb. piece of corned beef. It is wise to ask your butcher whether or not the beef requires previous soaking in water to keep from being too salty. Soak it if advised to do so. Discard the water. Place beef in cold water to cover. Add 6 pepper corns and one-half clove garlic.

Bring it to the boiling point, remove the scum, reduce the heat, cover the pot and simmer the meat for about 5 hours, or until it is tender. You may have to add boiling water to keep the beef covered. Leave the meat in the water in which it was cooked until it is lukewarm. Remove it and press it with a weight, or serve it warm and unpressed with horseradish sauce.

SERVE WITH: Corn on the cob, tomato-onion salad, rye bread, butter or margarine, peach betty, beverage.

NEW ENGLAND BOILED DINNER

Place corned beef in water to cover. Cover and simmer slowly 4 to 5 hours or until tender, depending on size. About 45 minutes before meat is done, add 8 small onions, 6 medium sliced potatoes and 6 turnips. Last 10 to 15 minutes of cooking time, add 1 large head of cabbage cut into wedges. Serve meat on platter surrounded by the vegetables, garnish with parsley. It is a New England custom to cook 10 or 12 small or medium beets separately, then skin and serve with the dinner. It usually takes 1 pound of corned beef to serve 2 to 3 people.

Beautiful Bottleful of Light

By M. D. Logan

DO YOU HAVE an interesting bottle sitting around doing nothing? Put it to work. Convert it into a lamp. If you are fortunate enough to have a colored or textured bottle, so much the better. Such unusual qualities are enhanced when the lamp is turned on.

By using a rubber expansion adapter kit, this is a simple, inexpensive but satisfying project. All electrical parts needed can be purchased for less than $2.

The lamp socket and harp (shade support) attach to the adapter kit, which in turn fits into the bottle like a cork. The two sizes of adapters available can easily be made smaller to fit in-between sized bottles.

THE CORD leaves the lamp through a small hole, fitted with a grommet, in the bottom part of the two-piece socket. When plugged into an outlet, the cord drops in back of the lamp and is hidden. This not only eliminates the need for the cord to run down through the inside of the bottle, but also the tedious task of drilling a hole in the bottom of the bottle.

If a suitable drill is not available to make the hole in the socket, the electrical supply shop where you purchase the rest of the parts can do this for you, and also insert the grommet, which keeps the cord from fraying on the sharp edges of this hole.

THE SATISFACTORY overall height for a table lamp is 25 to 30 inches, with 15 to 17 inches from table top to the bottom of the shade. A simple wooden base can be made if more height is required for the bottle, or about 2 inches can be added at the top of the harp with a threaded brass riser.

The shade should be in keeping with the type of bottle base. The lamp shown is of a rather crude, bubbled, Mexican glass, hence a simple shade with a slight nubby texture was used.

The parts needed to complete this project are shown on the accompanying diagram.

Bottle of bubbled, Mexican glass, found lurking in a dusty corner of a junk shop, is basis for this lamp.

Flameless electric cooking
keeps more juice in the meat

In roasting, juice is the secret of flavor—and flame is the enemy of juice.

Here's why:

LIVE BETTER—ELECTRICALLY

❖ Flame needs air to breathe. A flame-heated oven constantly inhales dry air, exhales moist air—literally cooks meat in a hot draft that evaporates good juices. And what is more disappointing than a fine roast without all its flavorful juice?

❖ But when you cook it electrically, there's no draft of constantly changing air. Because there's no flame. You cook in moist, not dry heat. Result? More juice stays in the meat . . . and it tastes better.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA  COMPANY

Did you know? Flameless electric cooking costs about $1.30 to $1.50 a month for a family of 4

A Landmark's Legend

By John Ronson

LOVER'S LEAP, a towering rock on the west bank of the Russian River about 99 miles north of San Francisco, is the newest historical landmark in the Redwood Empire of northwest California and southwest Oregon.

The high rock in Mendocino County, near the town of Pieta, also has been known, more prosaically, as Squaw Rock. Many travelers, particularly those with a romantic bent, stop here to marvel at the ways of love.

Legends differ about which Indian maiden plunged to her death from the rock, but they agree that a perfidious male inspired the lethal leap.

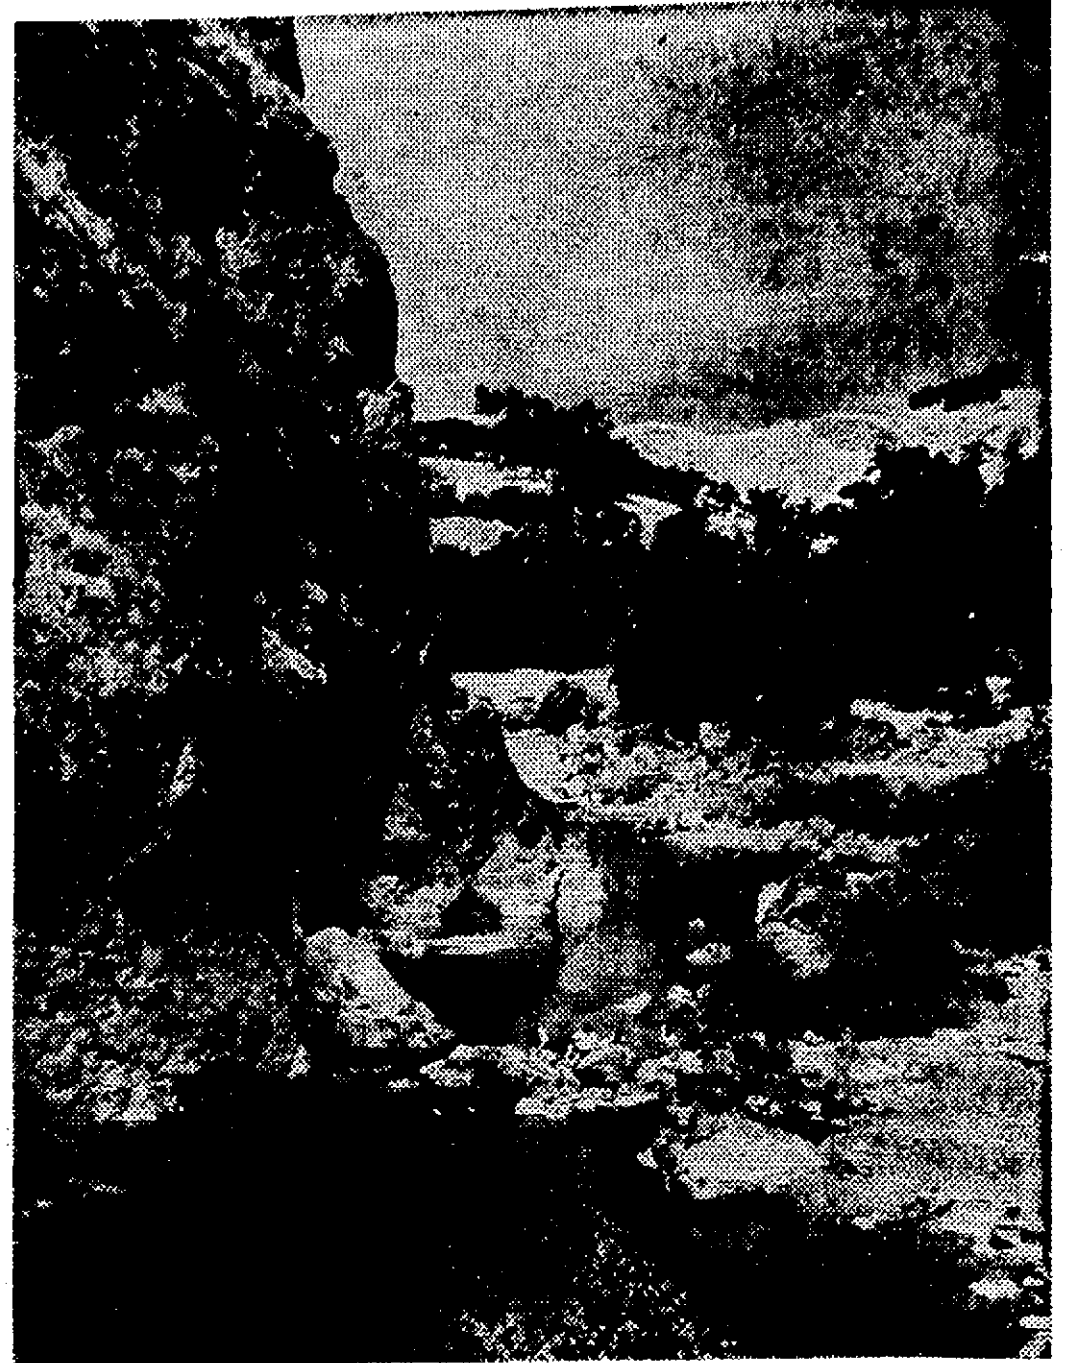

One version had Satuka, jilted by Cachow, jumping from the rock and smack on top of Cachow who was honeymooning at the base of the rock with his bride. All three were killed, according to the legend.

On pioneer historian skeptically observed, after looking over the terrain at the base of the rock, that Cachow selected an exceptionally lumpy honeymoon bower.

WAKOONA WAS the heroine of a second version of the legend. Her betrothed, Tokumwa, it seems, had a tryst with another Indian maiden, whereupon Wakoona attempted to stab the interloper with a dagger fashioned from the leg of a black bear.

Pinked when he threw up a protective arm, Tokumwa chased after the fleeing Wakoona, but the Indian maiden, fleet as a fawn, outran her pursuer and plunged to her death from the towering pinnacle.

Active but "pushing 60," Mark Feinberg, shown with some of his fine equipment and recordings, finds an interest in hi-fi keeps him young in spirit.

He Stays Young With His Hi Fi

By Clarence Bernard Propes

THERE IS HI FI and hi fi but in the hands of an expert and a connoisseur it becomes very high hi fi.

Such is the case of Mark and Harriet Feinberg. In the red-walled living room of their immaculate three-room apartment at 1011 Ximeno Ave. is one giant tropical plant, some very comfortable furniture, a darkened television set and a hi-fi system that consists of a pre-amplifier, an amplifier, a tuner, a record changer, a tape recorder and 14 loud speakers.

"An outfit like this belongs in a great hall," said Feinberg, "but this is where we live and listen."

FEINBERG IS an advertising man while Harriet Feinberg is a nurse at Community Hospital. Both show the same great pride in their home and the hi-fi system.

"We share interests," said Mark, and Harriet smiled in agreement. Her small kitchen is her domain, completely and efficiently equipped with everything a chef might dream of. The center of life is the front room with the golden sounds from the hi fi system.

The 14 speakers are distributed about the room with caniness and care. One set of three is in an immense cabinet under the tuner and amplifiers. Another set of three is in a corner cabinet while a third set is over an artificial fireplace that was once a murphy bed cabinet. Two wall speakers complete the ensemble.

FEINBERG engineered his own system, for, as he said, "I wanted the finest to give me the living presence of music."

He finds each set of speakers has its own sound and tone. He adapts the speaker characteristics to individual recordings. While he was there, he demonstrated his theories by sending an ancient chant through one set of speakers; a fandango through another set. For Gershwin's "Rhapsody In Blue" he used all the speakers, controlling the sound like a conductor. He threw the music from one set of speakers to another, with the notes almost visible as they flowed and leaped about the red-walled room.

His hi fi system is the result of a lifelong interest in music. It began three years ago when he became interested in hi fi. "I studied a year before I bought a single piece of equipment," he said. "We had to get rid of our nine tanks of tropical fish first."

"We had several thousand fish. We even had red, white and blue guppies. We had to clear out our tropical plants, too, to make room."

FEINBERG ADMITS that he is "pushing 60" and, as the result of an active and busy career, he feels that he must either keep up his interests and "stay alive, while I am alive," or let himself go and age rapidly. His career includes service with the Fifth Marines in World War I (he's proud of being the first American soldier to set foot in Germany after the war) and many years of travel to and from Europe as a cheese expert for the government and later as an importer. He has been with Golden State, a dairy products firm, for about 10 years.

A perfectionist, he has labored hard to achieve the realism he is constantly seeking and he finds hi fi an adequate outlet for his interests. His recordings bring listeners as close to the subjects as the original recording microphones. The soft breathing of a singer is audible and the swirl of notes from the brasses can seem inches away. A recording of a railway train brings the sound booming into the room.

The sounds are capably controlled. In spite of their power and depth a passerby on the street outside would not suspect the presence of such power and volume.

FOREVER SEEKING the ideal of the "living presence of music," Feinberg still is not satisfied. He has ordered a stereophonic or binaural set that will bring new horizons of sound into the small room. This set will require special recordings which will take two needles to play, each needle for a different section of an orchestra. With the proper placing of two sets of speakers the listener is surrounded by music the way a concert goer is surrounded by the musicians.

This may be what Feinberg is looking for but it is doubtful. He will listen and then he'll search for new wonders in sound.

JAMES A. MICHENER

After writing about the Pacific war in his best-selling "The Bridges of Toko-Ri," James A. Michener turns to last fall's Hungarian revolt in "The Bridge at Andau" (Random House, $3.50). When the spark of war ignited in Budapest, Michener hurried to Europe, interviewed hundreds of liberty-loving Hungarians, and actually helped many of the 20,000 refugees who poured over the wooden Andau bridge to freedom. He gives an on-the-spot account of what really happened—the incredible barbarism of the Russians and the agony and suffering that resulted, but with a people, though defeated, still holding up their heads in haughty contempt of their oppressors.

BOOK REVIEWS

Not for the Squeamish

WHEN THE reader lays down Stephen Longstreet's "The Promoters" (Simon and Schuster, $3.95) he is amazed to find that the world he lives in isn't brawling Texas but Hollywoodish California. For 373 close-packed pages, the reader has lived in Texas and been dominated by two unforgettable men, "Judge" Alex Cantlin, part Mexican Indian and part Irish-American, and Joel Tropp, a promotion man who has come up the hard way from his share-cropper ancestry, fighting compulsive alcoholism all the way, and losing most of the time.

Almost as well as the reader knows Cantlin and Tropp he knows a succession of lesser folk—Celeste, Cantlin's daughter, uncannily like him; Blossom Ganzil, drum majorette who knows more about sex than her letters, and gets to be a Hollywood star; Dr. Hurwitz who figures in a hilarious satire on psychoanalysis; and Moira Novak, a $50 prostitute who disapproves of the way E. E. Cummings punctuates his writing.

On the delightful side is Esme Potter, who loves Joel Tropp.

Joel, with realistic hard sense does not let her go overboard, which proves his basic integrity.

"Hard-hitting" describes Longstreet's writing better than any other term that comes to mind. And "The Promoters" is strictly for the adults, and not squeamish ones, either.

Longstreet, a resident of Los Angeles, is an author, critic, artist and playwright. He has received awards for his paintings. He received the Billboard Award for "High Button Shoes" and the Photoplay Award for "The Jokson Story." His novels to date have included "The Pedlocks" and "The Lion at Morning." His travel book "The World Revisited" is on best seller lists.

A STRANGE STORY of terror is "The Nightwalkers" (Les Noctambules in French) by Beverly Cross (Little, Brown, $3). Horrible vengeance is meted out to a wartime collaborator by a group which waited and planned for years after the war for its special kind of atonement. And innocently involved in the plans is a young English student at the Sorbonne. This novel of Paris is so stark in its realism that the reader often shudders but continues to read on.

IN THE FALL of 1847 a man with long blond hair, wearing the clothes of a mountaineer, appeared in the great interior valley of California. He was James D. Savage, the place was the Tulare Valley, now known as the San Joaquin. In six short years he became ruler over hundreds of Tulareno Indians who called him "El Rey Tulareno." Savage exploited the Indians in his trading posts and mining activities. He led the Mariposa Battalion in the War of 1851-52 and on one of his forays discovered Yosemite. His story is told, documented, in "Jim Savage and the Tulareno Indians" by Annie R. Mitchell (Westernlore Press, $5.50). The author was born in the old mining camp of Tailholt in Tulare County and she knows her material, much of which has appeared in the Quarterly of the California Historical Society.

A DISQUIETING but thoughtful book is "A Watcher on the Rhine" (Morrow, $4), an appraisal of present-day Germany by Brian Connell, British journalist considered one of the best informed contemporary observers of Germany. Connell believes that hope for the new Germany lies in its youth, but he is doubtful about the youth and he believes that the basic German character does not change. "The youth of university age were born too late to remember the downfall of the Weimar Republic," he writes. "They grew up with the brass bands, banners and victory parades of the Nazis, which merged, as they became teenagers, into the horror of mass bombings, the dislocation of destruction and the hunger of the years of defeat. . . . They would probably pay any political price necessary to sustain financial security."

VAUGHAN WILKINS, author of "And So—Victoria," returns to his forte as a historical novelist in "Lady of Paris" (St. Martin's Press, $3.95). The lady is Theresia Cabarrus, Princess de Chimay, whose exciting life was connected intimately with great events of revolutionary and imperial France. Known as the "consort of a nation," she inspired the fall of Robespierre. After the Reign of Terror, she received the adulation of Paris as "Our Lady of Mercy." In passing, it should be told that she refused the offer of marriage of the young Napoleon. "I believe, General, that I could do better for myself," she pertly told him.

'BOTTOMS UP'

That's the cover illustration and title of a hilarious new paperback (Dell, 25c) which the publishers call, appropriately, "a good-to-the-last drop, guide through the mazes and hazes of Whiskeyland." In addition to scores of cartoons, there are anecdotes and wise-cracks on drinkers — beginners and veterans.

WHEN JUDGE Jacob M. Braude of Chicago started making speeches 40 years ago he began paying close attention to other speakers. He discovered that most of them bored their audiences with talks that were too long, that they digressed too widely, they included too many dreary passages of statistics, and that too few used illustrative anecdotes. He began collecting little gems of this kind until today, calling upon a collection of more than 40,000 of them, he can illustrate any point he wishes in a way that's pleasing to an audience. Of these, he has included almost 3,000 into "Braude's Second Encyclopedia of Stores, Quotations and Anecdotes" (Prentice-Hall, $4.95). Not even an occasional speaker should overlook Judge Braude's book.

FOR MUSIC LOVERS, there is "Olin Downes on Music: A Selection from His Writings During the Half-Century, 1906-1955" (Simon and Schuster, $5). Edited by the widow of the veteran music critic of The New York Times, this is largely a re-issue of articles about music matters. Mr. Downes' copy is often rich in satire, or devastating with its fire, but always fresh in its approach and warmly human in content.

"I CAN JUMP PUDDLES" (World, $3.50) is Alan Marshall's eighth published book in his native Australia, and it marks his first appearance to an American audience. It is a happy story about a boy who grew up in the bush country of Australia a half-century ago—and it is happy despite the fact that the lad, an infantile paralysis victim, spent his childhood and youth on crutches.

What critics say about

"THE BRIDGE AT ANDAU" by James Michener

"It would be a good thing for this country and for the world if 'The Bridge at Andau' were read by everyone over 21 in America . . ."

ORVILLE PRESCOTT, The New York Times

"The year will not—it could not—bring a more important or a more profoundly moving book than James A. Michener's chronicle of the Hungarian revolt . . . With the narrative skill to be expected of the author of 'Tales of the South Pacific,' with a journalist's eye for the telling detail, Mr. Michener restores it all: boys and girls in their teens destroying Soviet tanks with homemade gasoline bombs, the A. V. O. (Hungarian secret police) mowing down Red Cross workers, the slaughter of A. V. O. men by their countrymen who had endured torture unequalled in modern times . . ."

VERNIE LOOKS BACK ON

19 Years in Majors

By George Lederer

tomers. Soundproof partitioning was the answer and the start of our corporation."

VERN PLAYS a versatile role in the corporation, just as he did in the majors as a shortstop, third baseman and, on occasion, as an outfielder.

"I do most anything. Sell, lay panels and help in the company's supervision."

"Would you be tempted to go back into baseball as a coach or manager?"

"Nobody wants to be a manager or coach these days. You never know from month to month whether you'll have a job. I haven't had any offers along that line and I'm not looking for any now. But, I suppose if the right thing came along I might change my mind."

THE "RIGHT THING," Stephens indicated, would be a major or Coast League offer, but not lower than triple-A classification.

Until that opportunity presents itself Stephens plans to remain active in baseball by helping in Long Beach's immense junior program.

He has been engaged by Ned Brown, a Long Beach oilman, as an adviser to Little League, PONY League and Babe Ruth League teams sponsored by Brown.

"I'll meet with the managers and teach kids not only to play ball, but to be good sports and good competitors at the same time."

The Brown Drilling Co. includes interests in New Zealand, Venezuela, Trinidad and Turkey, where Brown has organized kid baseball programs.

"AFTER WE GET things set around here," Stephens said, "I may get to travel to those countries as a sort of kid baseball 'ambassador'."

As a baseball diplomat Stephens is well qualified. He played in 1,695 major league games and was never ejected by the umpires. It's an enviable record, one that compares with spending 15 years in the Army and never growling at the top sergeant.

Stephens carries into retirement a lifetime major league batting average of .287, 244 home runs, 1,844 hits and 1,167 runs-batted-in. He performed on six American League All-Star teams, led the league in runs-batted-in with 109 in 1944 and twice tied for the lead in that department with 159 and 144 in 1949 and 1950, respectively. He also topped the league in home runs with 24 in 1945.

DESPITE THIS impressive record Stephens found it difficult to pinpoint his top performances.

"My biggest thrill was just being able to play in the majors. But I remember one good day I had with the Browns against the Yankees in 1945. Spud Chandler was pitching for New York and I hit two homers, a double and a single, but we lost in the ninth, 5-4.

"Another game with the Red Sox made me feel a lot better, though. It was August of '46, the year we lost the pennant to Cleveland in a playoff game. We were playing the Indians for first place that night and we trailed by two runs going into the last of the ninth. I hit a home run to win the game that put us in first place."

STEPHENS PICKED Allie Reynolds, the Yankee Super Chief, as the pitcher who gave him the most trouble.

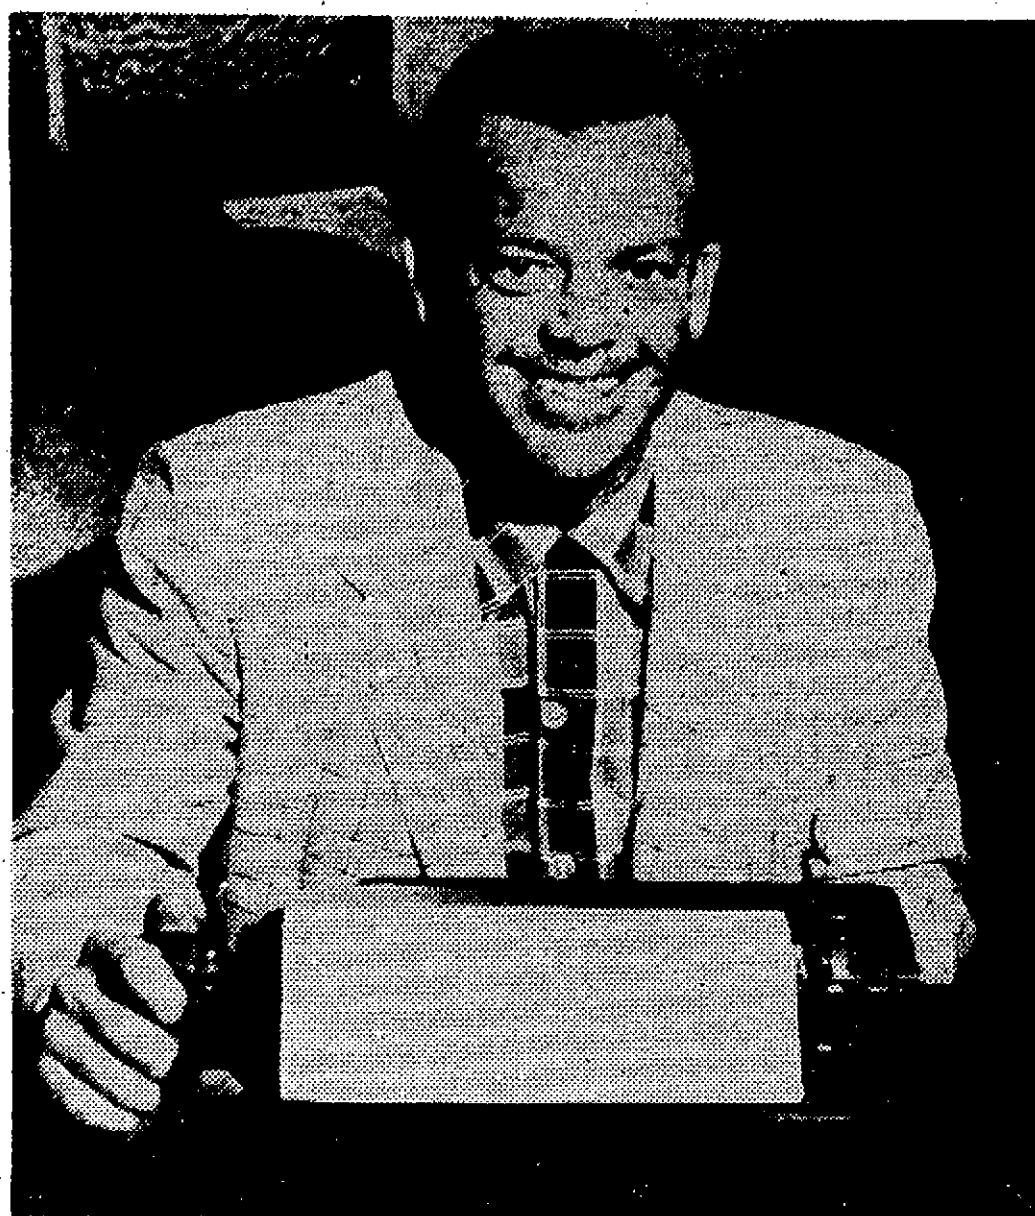

Stephens placed Lemon and Reynolds on his "all-star" team as right-handed pitchers and named Hal Newhouser of the Tigers as the outstanding southpaw of his time.

"My outfield would have to be Ted Williams, Joe DiMaggio and Stan Musial. I don't see how you can improve on that. (Musial was the only National Leaguer mentioned by Stephens because he faced Stan several times in St. Louis city series and also in the 1944 World Series.)

"I'D HAVE TO PICK Yogi Berra as my catcher and Mickey Vernon at first base. It's tough to choose between Bobby Doerr and Joe Gordon at second. Shortstop? Phil Rizzuto without a doubt. Put George Kell on third. That's it."

To manage the mythical club Stephens picked Joe McCarthy, who guided the Red Sox from 1948 to 1950 and was elected to the Hall of Fame last month.

"McCarthy had the ability to watch everyone on the field at the same time. He was a great manager."

After 19 years in the majors, Vernie Stephens has quit baseball to enter panel manufacturing.

Vern laughed off his oft-publicized feuds with Ted Williams.

"WE CREATED THAT ourselves," Stephens said.

"There were 14 writers covering the Red Sox in spring training in 1949. And, of course, they couldn't all be writing about baseball. One day after batting practice Ted was clowning in the shower room like he always did. We got to sparring around in fun when one of the Boston writers happened to stick his nose through the door and saw us. The next day he broke the story that we were 'feuding.'

"Ted said, 'Okay, we'll really give 'em something to write about.'"

"So Ted and I agreed not to shake hands at home plate if one of us hit a homer with the other on base. We would wait until we got to the dugout. That's how it started."

Pitchers dreaded to see Vernie come up to bat.

SPRING ISN'T quite the same this year for Vernon Decatur Stephens Jr.

For the first time in 19 years the former Poly High and Long Beach City College star has not signed a baseball contract. He has, in effect, hung up his flannels and is now hanging panels.

Stephens, for 15 years one of the American League's most dangerous hitters and leading shortstops, announced his retirement recently to become part owner of a partition and paneling manufacturing business in Fullerton.

"I HAD TO QUIT some time and I just decided that now was the best time," said the 36-year-old Stephens, who spent six frustrating years with the old St. Louis Browns before one of the biggest trades in baseball history sent him to the Boston Red Sox in 1947.

"Baseball has been wonderful. I couldn't have been in anything else that could have been one-tenth as good to me.

"From a physical standpoint I suppose I could have played another year or two. But now, at last, I'll get to spend some time with my family. I don't know what it's like to be home in the summer."

VERN WILL HAVE a chance to find out soon. He recently bought some land in the fast-growing resort of Hesperia where he plans to build a vacation home for his wife, Bernice, and children Vern III, 14; Ronnie, 9½, and Wendy, 4½.

"I'll be a lot of fun for the kids with swimming and horseback riding. And I've already joined the country club. Now, between paneling, maybe I can get in some golf."

Stephens' venture into Fiber Comb Unlimited, Inc., started by accident.

Around the World With DEPLANE

FROM MEXICO

We intend to eat Mexican food in Mexico but are kind of worried about breakfast. Where in Mexico City can we get American breakfasts...

I STILL PREFER Sanborn's—the old Sanborn's on Madero street. Just for the atmosphere of the antique building and, probably, nostalgia. The two new Sanborn's are drug-store fountains.

If the weather is good, the Bamer Hotel roof is beautiful. The breakfasts are just fair but it is pretty and you can't hurt ham and eggs much.

...and should we wait until we get to Taxco to buy gifts in silver?

I hear from all sides that Taxco silver is less expensive in Mexico City than in the monument town of Taxco. They say it's due to the competition and the fact that NO tourist leaves Taxco without buying some silver anyway.

There are a lot of good shops around the Hotel Monte Cassino and Hotel Geneve area. And Mexican silver, I think, is becoming the best designed and best priced anywhere in the world.

I recall that you once explained the peculiar laws on drinking in Ireland. Would you mind going over them again for me?

THE PUBS of Ireland close abruptly at 10 o'clock at night. In the country they are closed all day Sunday.

This has led to a curious subterfuge of the "bona fide traveler."

Taking the English common law, Ireland has decided that a traveler must be served food and drink at any time of the day.

After 10 o'clock at night, the people of Dublin get in their cars and drive like mad five miles out of town to the "bona fides."

In the country on Sunday the farmer mounts his bicycle and pedals to the next village. Passing en route the people of that village pedaling to HIS village.

The Garda, the blue-uniformed Irish police, wander in from time to time and check names and addresses. However, if you are caught lying about your distance from home, the fine runs about 28 cents.

Austria is on our European itinerary next winter. We would like to do some skiing. Where is the best place?

IN ALL THE Austrian Tyrol, Kitzbuehl is probably the most popular. It is a little town of two blocks of main street. The Arlberg-Paris express peanut whistles around it to avoid running through the Middle Age walls.

The prices are extremely reasonable. The ski clothes are a fourth to one-half U. S. prices and a great selection.

TRAVEL AND RESORTS

They Hate Signs

Sign haters and outdoor lovers everywhere will rejoice in a recent ruling of the Fourth District Court of Appeals that the deed restriction against "FOR SALE" and other signs on property in Apple Valley are reasonable and enforceable.

These restrictions were placed of record at the time of subdivision to insure the comfortable use and enjoyment of the land by present and future owners. These restrictions are contained in all of the deeds executed by Apple Valley Building and Development Company and cover the entire subdivided area of Apple Valley.

The decision was given in a case brought by the Apple Valley Building and Development Company against Gordon Snider to enforce the deed restriction which prohibits signs on residences, except one showing the name of the occupant. The Appellate Court reversed a ruling of the San Bernardino Superior Court that the restriction was not enforceable.

The unanimous decision by Presiding Justice Stanley Mussell, in which Justices Banard and Griffin concurred, insures that property in Apple Valley will be used only for the purpose for which it was originally purchased, and that no person will be permitted to disregard the restrictions.

The ruling establishes a precedent that the restrictions are reasonable and enforceable and that all property owners can enforce any breach of the restrictions that might interfere with the comfortable enjoyment of their property.

Living It Up

For only $17.50 each, a couple can enjoy a big week end in famous Las Vegas under the terms of a new "package" offered by Trans World Airlines through travel agents. The price includes room and bath for three days and two nights at the Dunes Hotel on "The Strip," breakfast both mornings, a buffet banquet and a dinner, afternoon cocktails, and admission to the spectacular stage show. TWA serves Las Vegas with 10 flights daily, including low-fare Sky Tourist service.

Taxis for Real

Haggling with the driver over the cab fare in Mexico City is no more. According to a report received by the American Society of Travel Agents, the Mexican government stepped in and now requires local cabbies to paint their hacks yellow and to place meters therein. Results are easy on the eyes and easier on the pocketbook. Passengers now pay the pesos registered on the meter plus, of course, a reasonable tip.

HOW TO Take Off Old Finish With Paint Remover for a Smooth Surface

1. TAKE OFF old finish with paint remover. Spread it on surfaces evenly—as if you were painting them. When finish becomes soft, it's ready to scrape off. If you're going to re-ename! the piece, you may not have to remove old finish. In this case, sand surfaces and wash them with steel wool soaked in turpentine.

2. WIDE SCRAPER digs softened finish down to bare wood. Make one run with it down surface, then wipe blade. You may have to recoat surface several times to get off all paint or varnish. For best results, follow the manufacturer's directions on the container. Room should be well ventilated when remover is used.

3. STEEL WOOL dipped in paint remover rubs off stubborn paint spots—let's you get into cracks and crevices. Before you use it, scrape off all the paint you can, and recoat surface with paint remover. Follow direction of wood grain with steel wool pad. When it is caked with softened paint, resoak new one in paint remover.

4. CLEAN WOOD with piece of burlap soaked in turpentine—or according to clean-up directions on paint remover container. Hint: Sawdust sprinkled freely on surfaces, then wiped with burlap pad, speeds cleaning job. Sawdust absorbs the excess paint remover while the burlap acts as "abrasive" and absorbent agent. Finish job by smoothing surface with sandpaper.

Oriental gardens of Huntington Library and Art Gallery are considered to be top example of Japanese garden art in America. Many varieties of flowers bloom there.

Camellias in all their glory may now be seen in San Marino's Huntington Gardens.

Heavenly Garden of Flowers

FLOWER LOVERS whether they are tourists or long-time Southern California residents, experience a real thrill when they visit the five-acre camellia garden, now in full bloom, at the Huntington Library and Art Gallery, San Marino.

The garden is at its best right now, for there are more than a thousand named varieties of Camellia Japonica in full flower. Camellias have been known in

By Walter Finch

California for more than 100 years. On Feb. 3, 1852, a shipment of plants arrived in Sacramento, sent across the Isthmus of Panama, by steamer to San Francisco, and thence by river boat to its destination. These were the first camellias to enter California.

The Huntington camellia garden, begun as a test garden, has been open to the public during the blooming season every year since 1952. On both sides of winding paths where oaks form a canopy of shade and filtering light, the plants brighten the hill with their clear symmetrical blossoms.

But the camellias are only one of the many beautiful sights in the botanical gardens at the Huntington Library. Few visitors explore the entire 50 acres open to visitors. A series of trips the year around would take in each flowering cranny in the more remote corners as well as the better-known expanses of lawn, rose garden, Oriental garden and camellia garden.

The desert plant garden lies to the left as the visitor enters the grounds. Spring and summer find its 10 acres filled with bright blooms. The desert plant garden constitutes the largest collections of mature specimens of cacti and other succulents growing out of doors in the world. Begun in 1907 as a half-acre garden, the collection now numbers more than 25,000 plants, representing 2,500 species and varieties.

THE ORIENTAL garden, considered to be the finest example of Japanese garden art in America, delights with spring-blooming wistaria, azaleas and flowering fruit trees.

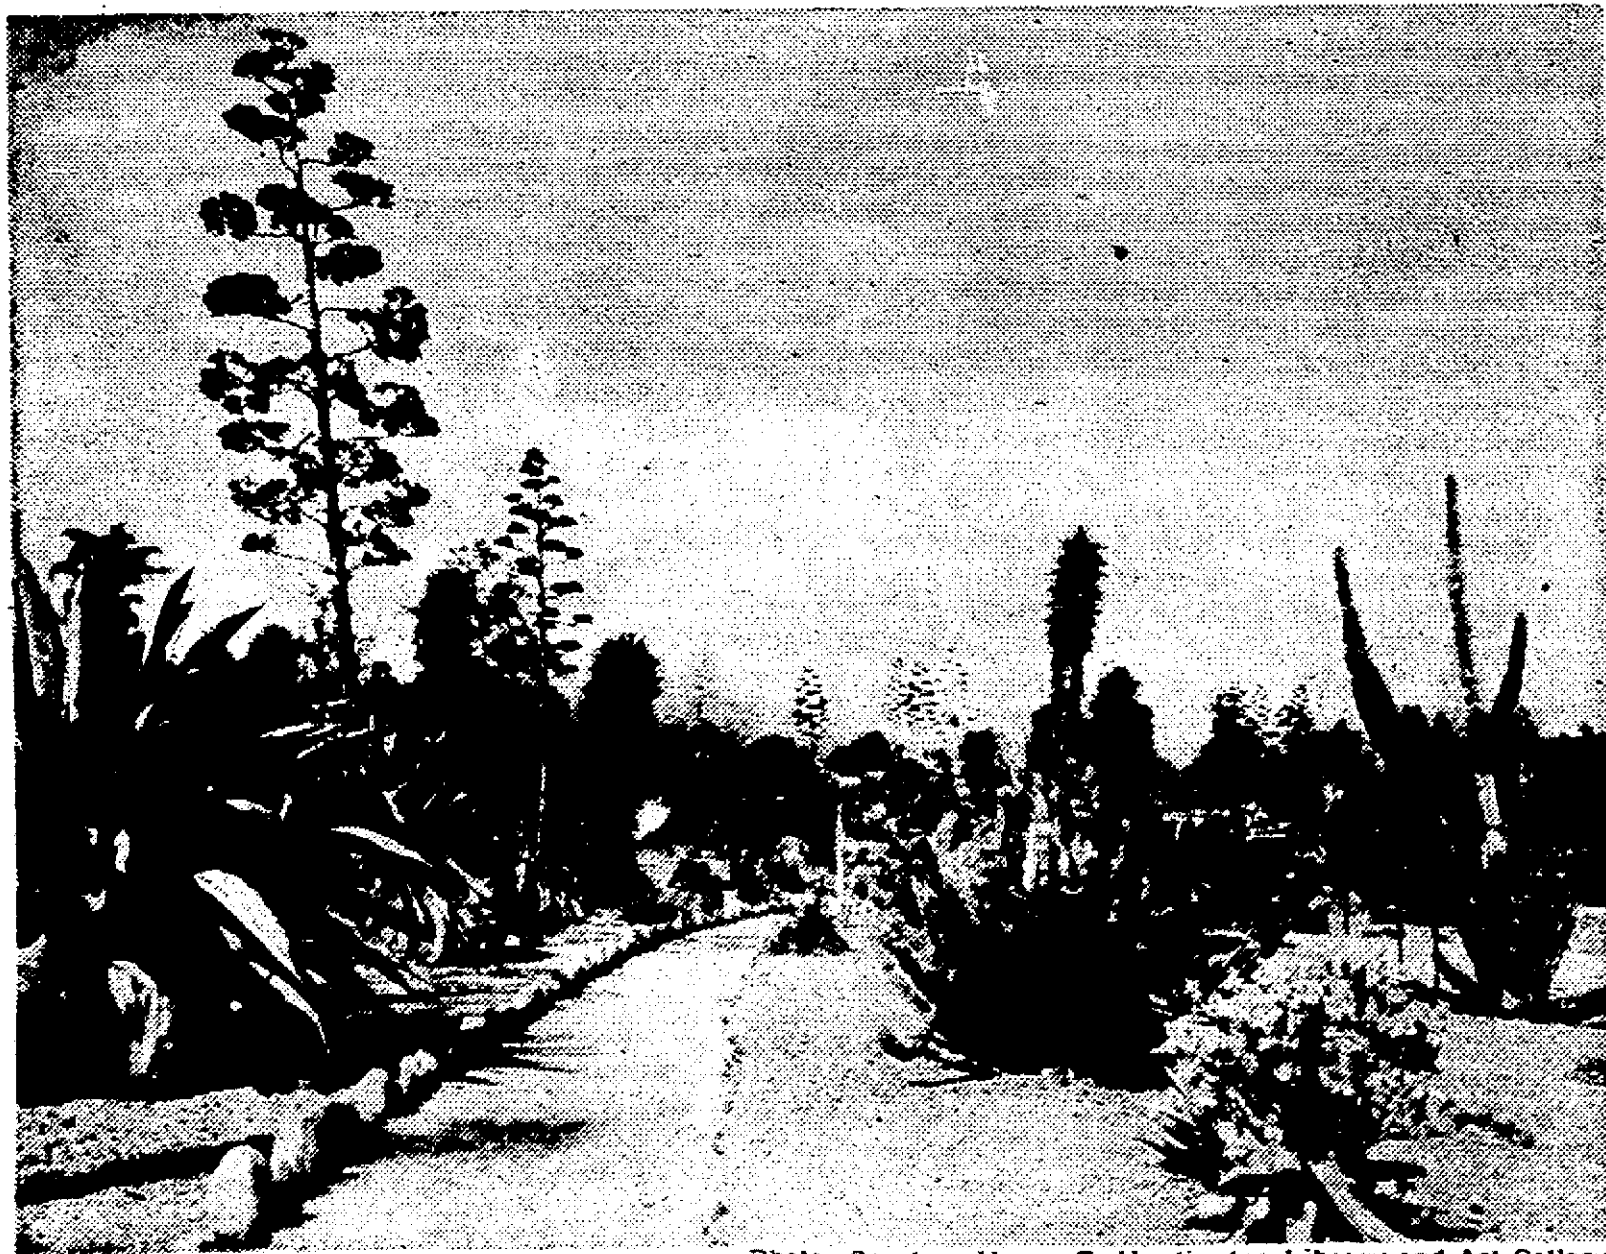

Nine hundred plants representing nearly 50 varieties make the rose garden a joy in the spring and summer. Deciduous Chinese magnolia, juniper, New Zealand silk oak and cape chestnut trees from South Africa fringe the grass slope.

Other trees and shrubs from all continents and a variety of climes provide background — a monkey puzzle tree, Australian bottle brush, cinnamon tree from India, the Mexican hand tree, and down at the base of the garden over-arching the lily ponds the great clumps of edible bamboo from southern China.

Near the Art Gallery are the cycads—the great palm-like plants whose botanical interest lies in the fact that they are the intermediate step in the evolution from fern to flowering plant.

The Huntington Botanical Gardens and the exhibitions in the Library and Art Gallery are open to visitors from 1 to 4:30 p.m. every day except Mondays and certain holidays. Reservations are not necessary except for large groups.

HUNTINGTON LIBRARY and Art Gallery is at 1151 Oxford Rd., San Marino. To get there from Long Beach drive north on Lakewood Blvd. which becomes Rosemead; turn left on Huntington Dr., then turn right on Oxford Rd.

The 10-acre garden of desert plants at the San Marino institution constitutes the world's largest cacti and succulent collection growing outdoors.

We All Can Have Beautiful Mums

Beautiful mums may be grown by all. This is author's prize-winning display at the So. Calif. Flower Show.

By David I. Gillfillan

TODAY I WOULD like to discuss the propagation and culture of what I believe to be our finest fall-flowering perennial—the chrysanthemum. In Long Beach area we are indeed a privileged people in that we can grow all types of this favorite, from the small buttons to the large-flowering exhibition types right in our own backyard.

In addition to the many different types and colors, we find that by selecting the proper varieties we can have mums in bloom from September right into the month of January—many of prizewinning quality if the cultural rules are followed.

There are three methods by which the chrysanthemum may be propagated: by seed, cuttings and root divisions. The last two are most generally used by private growers and home gardeners. We find the commercial growers propagating thousands of plants from seed each year with the hope of introducing some new outstanding varieties.

CUTTINGS ARE BEST taken about mid-March, but they can be started earlier or later. The main reason we start the plants from cuttings is to be sure that we are starting out with strong, healthy plants, free from nematodes or disease. With this in mind, be sure, if you are using root divisions, that the plants are clean.

In selecting the cuttings, use the new growth coming from the old roots and take the cuttings from the outside. In other words, use the new shoots farthest away from the center of the old plant. Cuttings should not be taken from new growth coming from the old stems of last year's plants as they very often go blind; that is, there is a possibility that the plants will not bloom.

The cuttings should be about four inches long and are cut with a sharp knife just below a leaf. The lower leaves are removed and the cutting is inserted in a mixture of clean sharp sand. This is placed in the propagating bench or a regular nursery flat, tamped down firmly with a brick or block of wood, and given a thorough soaking before the cuttings are set.

NEVER FORCE the cuttings into the sand. This procedure will bruise the rooting structure or "heel." Take a piece of wood about the size of a lead pencil, make the hole in the sand about one inch deep, place the cutting in the hole and tamp the sand firmly around the base of the cutting. This is very important. It is here that many home gardeners make the mistake of having the sand too loose around the cutting. When this happens, the cutting will not root. Just a word of caution: Be sure that you tamp around the base of the cutting, not around the neck at the surface of the sand.

The propagating flat or bench should be in some shady location such as a lath house. The sand should never be allowed to dry out. The cuttings should be rooted in about three weeks, at which time they are taken from the flat and placed in three-inch pots, being transplanted to the garden about three weeks later.

After you have taken your cuttings from the old plants, dig them up and heel them in, in some corner of the garden. This is what we call a safety measure.

THE BEST SOIL for growing chrysanthemums is one that contains an abundance of humus and organic matter. The soil, incidentally, should be slightly on the acid side, and because soils in this area are largely alkaline, dusting the bed with soil sulphur, using three pounds to 100 sq. ft. and applying one-half inch of peat moss over the entire bed will be of tremendous help. Over the peat moss apply a two-inch layer of steer manure, bonemeal at the rate of six pounds to 100 sq. ft. and organic fertilizer at the rate of four pounds to 100 sq. ft. This is turned under the depth of the spade, left in a rough condition and given a thorough soaking. When you are ready to plant, rake the bed smoothly.

The plants are set out in rows. The rows should be two feet apart and the plants spaced 12 or 14 inches apart.

When the plants are six inches tall, snip out the centers. When the new shoots are six inches long, they, too, should have their centers pinched out. This procedure is carried out until about the middle of August, according to the variety, but in most cases the ordinary garden variety is pinched or "stopped," as we call it, at least three times during the season.

The plants should be staked when they are 10 inches tall and proper tying should be carried out until the flowers are cut.

DON'T FORGET DEPT: — Don't forget that this is an excellent time to plant balled citrus—Don't forget that this is also a good time to start dichondra lawns. For a good stand of dichondra, use one pound of seed to 1,000 sq. ft.—Don't forget to plant two or three dozen gladiolus every two weeks for a long season of bloom—Don't forget to tell your nurseryman you saw his ad in the Independent, Press-Telegram—Don't forget the big special garden section next Sunday and don't forget that the man who goes to church on Sunday will enjoy his garden better on Monday.

Time to Think of Shade

By Bob Gilmore

IT IS NOT too early for planting shade trees for your late spring and summer garden. Warm weather frequently comes early in the year and ornamental trees started now will make your garden more enjoyable later on. Some of the old favorites for providing shade in this area are sycamores, acacias, elms, olive and pepper trees.

Olive trees thrive throughout California, dotting the landscape all the way from Sacramento in the north to San Diego in the south. The trees are cultivated commercially to a large extent in the southern half of the state and as an ornamental the olive has much in its favor.

THE TREES reach an approximate height of 25 feet and thus fit admirably into the average-sized garden. The foliage has a distinctive color, being a delicate shade of gray-green. The fruits, which are purple in color, are quite attractive but should be cured before being eaten. A fresh olive has an extremely bitter flavor.

The evergreen elm, which attains the same height as the olive, is another splendid shade tree for this area. The tree has a well-rounded contour. During the cooler parts of the year this so-called evergreen may lose some of its foliage. The branches bend over backwards, often reaching almost to the ground. Because of its wide-spreading character the evergreen elm provides an abundance of shade.

THE CHINESE ELM is comparable to the evergreen elm except it is a deciduous plant, the trees losing their foliage

Speaks Tuesday

One of the west's foremost garden authorities, Dorothy Jonson (Dorothy Digs), will lecture before the Stratford Square Garden Club at 8 p.m. Tuesday, March 12. Mrs. Lorraine Kudick, 2824 Charlemagne, garden club program chairman, is in charge of the arrangements for the meeting, to be held at the home of Mrs. John Russell, 5251 E. 28th St., Long Beach. Mrs. Jonson's topic will be "The Most Important Thing in Your Garden."

during winter. It is the speed burner of the shade-giving trees, growing to 50 or 60 feet in a relatively short time. It should not be squeezed into a small-sized landscape. Once established, it thrives on neglect, neither heat, cold, floods or drought causing it any undue hardship.

The California sycamore, if you want a 100-foot tree is one of the best for Southern California growing conditions. It is deciduous but during the dormant state the mottled bark and white markings give it real distinction. These characteristics will provide an accent mark in your winter garden.

THE EUROPEAN sycamore, also used for shade, performs beautifully during the summer season. It may be shaped as desired, severe pruning causing little harm. It is a fast grower.

The white birch is exceedingly attractive in lawn areas where the trees should always be planted in threes. As the trees develop the bark turns white, a sight of much beauty in winter when the trees are devoid of any foliage. White birches are often used near pools where their attractive shape casts a delightful reflection. Other possibilities for shade trees during the summer are: pepper trees, acacia floribunda, eucalyptus ficifolia and the "camphor tree."

Fatsias for Foliage

Fatshedera lizei lends itself to being trained, as here on a pillar of porch.

By Gladys Diesing

THE BIG BOLD leaves of the fatsias can be used to create striking foliage effects particularly effective with the broad structural lines of modern homes.

The largest is Fatsia papyrifera or rice paper plant, so called because the stem pith is the source of the delicate rice paper made by the Chinese. Slender grey trunks terminate

Camellia Display

Flower lovers revel in the beauty of 50,000 blooming camellia bushes in the 25-acre camellia forest in the Descanso Gardens, 1418 Descanso Dr., La Canada.

The third annual Descanso Gardens Camellia Show opened March 2 and will continue through March 10, sponsored by the Los Angeles Camellia Council, Ltd. and the Los Angeles County Department of Parks and Recreation. Special features are slated daily.

in clusters of great foot-wide, deep-fingered leaves, green above and whitish beneath which are especially attractive when viewed from below. Against a plain expanse of wall, the plant will cast interesting shadow patterns. December brings the large wooly panicles of creamy-white flowers carried above the leaf cluster. This, however, results in the only bad feature of the plant — self-sown seeds which often bring a horde of little plants, even invading the neighbor's premises.

Fatsia japonica is a smaller-growing plant forming a shrub 4 to 6 feet high and about as broad. It, too, has large, deeply lobed leaves but they are dark green and glossy instead of dull. Its amenability to container confinement and tolerance of full shade make it a good plant for the patio where its lush foliage may be enjoyed at close quarters. It will grow in the sun but the foliage tends to take on a yellow tone. Flowers appear in the fall followed by clusters of shiny black seeds. Thinning will often result in forming an even more interesting pattern than results from massed effects.

A PLANT EVEN MORE interesting to work with in forming pattern and structural effects is the hybrid, Fatshedera. This is a cross between Fatsia japonica moseri and Hedera helix hibernica (Irish ivy) and takes on characteristics of both plants, being shrubby like the fatsia but sending out long vine-like stems like the ivy. The leaves are shiny green with three to five lobes. Pruning and training will form it into almost any shape desired. Although it vines, it requires support. Some means of attachment must be used.

Both Fatsia japonica and Fatshedera are susceptible to aphids and mealybugs so a spray for sucking and chewing insects like oil-nicotine should be used. None of the fatsias are particular as to soil, but of course like best a rich, well-drained loam. All are susceptible to low temperatures but will make rapid recovery even when temperatures drop as low as 25°.

By Dorothy Jonson

When the aphid army invades your rose garden, the easiest thing to do is turn to a two-purpose spray that will combat mildew, rust and blackspot at the same time that you destroy aphid, thrip and other destructive insects. Thus, one material does an all-around job as far as roses are concerned. It shouldn't be necessary to spray very often.

You cannot possibly prevent aphid from reinfesting your garden at the height of the migratory period. You can wash them down with the water hose between sprayings and, if you do a very thorough job when you do spray, you can thus "nurse" your roses through this trying period without the necessity of over-spraying . . . and without permitting them to become broken down in health and vitality by the infestation. The advent of hot weather will help to get rid of the aphid by natural process of elimination.

Garden Tips

GARDENING TIPS for the week . . . Dahlias should be staked at the time of planting. Set the "eye" end adjacent to the stake but not quite touching it. If the stakes are driven into the ground at a later date they may injure the roots.

Newly planted deciduous stock such as roses or fruit trees must have lots of water to get established. Let the water soak into the soil as any drying out may seriously injure the plants.

As the weather warms up you should become more vigilant in your fight against bugs and plant diseases. These varmints thrive in warm weather . . . just like the plants they attack. Consult with your nurseryman regarding the type of control most necessary at this time in your particular locality.

CAMERA ANGLES

Doing What Comes Naturally

A scrabble game provides a fine "activity" center of interest for this family group in an informal snap.

By the Shutterbug

ARE YOU looking for an easy way to get better pictures of your family and friends? Well, you'll have a superior snapshot of a person every time if you just try catching him in the midst of some activity he enjoys—or if you give him something to do that's natural and typical for him to be doing.

In that way, you can be sure even the most self-conscious or reluctant subject will relax and be himself. Although your camera's aimed right at him, his attention remains on the task he's performing—and you'll be spared a stiff-necked pose or a glassy-eyed stare in your viewfinder.

BY LETTING ACTIVITIES keynote your snapshots of people, your reputation as a picture-taker is bound to grow. Your prints will show more than just what your subjects look like. Rather, they'll reveal what each person is like — what he likes to do — what it's like to be with him.

Of course, there are other points to remember, too, when you snap your friends and family. Check the background carefully before you shoot. Make sure it's not so cluttered and confusing that your subject will be lost in a welter of detail.

CAMERA VIEWPOINT can also make a world of difference in your pictures of people. In general, you'll do well to snap your subject on his own level or from slightly below. Naturally, your choice of camera angle will depend on the particular elements you want to emphasize in your picture.

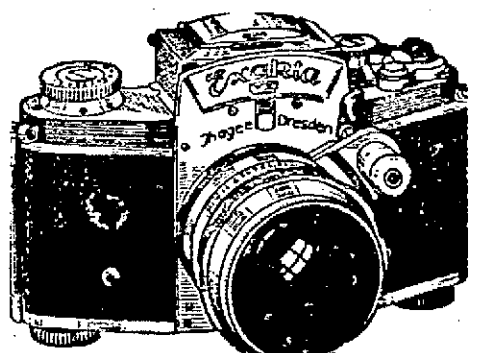

When you're picturing people, study and select background, viewpoint and lighting carefully. But most important of all, catch your subjects "in action."

ARE YOU CONFUSED by f-numbers, film speeds, guide

numbers, shutter settings—and their relation to light and distance? The Pic-Kwick Photo-Dial, a neat new camera aid, will help you. It is "direct-reading"; can be used for any film, in any light, day or night, and requires no calculations. Comes in a plastic case containing latest data on films, flashbulbs and photofloods. Includes a leaflet called Pic-Kwick PhotoNotes which gives a basic lesson in photography, and even tells how to take pictures by moonlight, or of city lights, or from the TV tube. Costs only $2 post-paid including tax. Available by mail from Russell J. Love, 24 California St., San Francisco 11, Calif.

PET PARADE

Keys to a New Life

By Eleanor Avery Price

TO GIVE sightless persons the simple dignity of freedom and independence is the aim of the Cherry Valley Eye Dog Foundation at Beaumont, according to Mrs. Virginia Strahan, general manager of the foundation.

The pleasure given those persons who are students of or owners of dogs from the foundation justifies the endeavors of those who strive to continue the operation, Mrs. Strahan said, pointing out that the enterprise is one of only three licensed guide dog schools west of the Mississippi.

The Eye Dog Foundation (founded by the Hazel Hurst Foundation for the Blind) was previously located in Azusa but suspended operations when it lost its state-licensed trainer. When another state-licensed trainer, Everett L. Espy, was obtained, the location was changed to Beaumont, and, according to Andrew Marrin, executive secretary of the State Guide Dog Board, the school is rendering top service to blind persons from California and other states.

ONLY A SHORT time ago, Harry G. Klingbiel, rehabilitation counselor for the State Bureau of Vocational Rehabilitation, inspected the foundation and reported that the most discriminating judge would be pleased with the requirements that have been met.

The Eye Dog Foundation is located on a four-acre ranch at 3876 Vineland Ave., Beaumont. The fenced kennels will accommodate a number of dogs. An obstacle course has been erected where dogs and, later, both dogs and students can be adequately trained. Housing for students has been accomplished with the volunteer help of the San Geronio local of the carpenters' union. There is also a garden where fruits, vegetables, chickens and rabbits are raised to save expense. Ronald M. Soutar, apprentice trainer, is caretaker and gardener, and he has had 22 years of experience in soil conservation and similar activities.

APPLICANTS ARE carefully screened for this school because, although there are around 25,000 blind persons in California and approximately 350,000 in the country, only a moderate percentage of blind persons are able to use guide dogs.

Since the cost of providing one blind person with a guide dog is $1,000 or more, including living accommodations during the one-month period of training, the foundation can continue only through donations (tax-deductible). The blind do not pay for the dog or its training, and the organization is strictly non-profit. Even the board of directors is composed of volunteers.

AN ANNUAL CAMPAIGN is inaugurated to solicit public donations, but donations of any amount are welcome at any time. There is never any door-to-door solicitation. Assistance is given by the Lions Club.

As there are approximately only nine guide dog schools in the United States, each one operating independently, there is always a waiting list for dogs. The Eye Dog Foundation is shown in statements of students like that of Mrs. Daisy Fleming of Santee: "To be able to walk out my front door and down the street all by myself will be very close to heaven to me."

VIVIAN LAIRD HILL
A Party Every Night

EVERY NIGHT is an informal party night at Vivian Laird's supper club, Alamitos at 1st St., with gay groups dining and dancing, strolling from the Jungle Room to the Garden Room and Terrace Room—and in general having a bang-up good time.

The way people enjoy themselves at the supper club constantly amazes Vivian Laird Hill, its gracious owner and hostess.

"Many times as they leave," comments Mrs. Hill, "they thank me for a lovely evening. They thank me as thoughtfully and sincerely as if they hadn't had to pay out a cent during the entire evening!"

Perhaps one reason the guests depart so cheerfully is because there's never a cover or minimum charge at Vivian Laird's and dinner prices start as low as $2.25. Reed Williams and his orchestra, featured at the supper club for most of the last four years, play for dancing from 8:30 on. From 9 o'clock on, comic musician Pee Wee Markley goes great guns on the organ, piano and celeste in the Jungle Room. One of three cocktail lounges at Vivian Laird's, the Jungle Room is decorated with brilliant murals of jungle dancing scenes.

Prepared with care by expert chefs, the supper club's cuisine features prime eastern beef, chicken and sea foods. All entrees are accompanied by a large salad, with choice of dressing, baked potato with melted cheese sauce and choice of beverage. Among the many entrees are the 14-ounce charcoal broiled New York steak, $4.50; 10-ounce charcoal broiled top sirloin, $3.50; delectable, tender prime rib au jus, $3.50; broiled whole lobster with drawn butter, $2.50, and tender jumbo shrimp, $2.25.

Opened by Mrs. Hill in December 1947, the spacious supper club has facilities enough to accommodate 450 persons at one time. It is open every night.

WORLD OF WHEELS

Higher Horsepower Can Mean Economy

By ART STEPHAN
Independent Press-Telegram
Auto Editor

Most motorists are under the impression that their higher-horsepower automobile engines are costing them more money at the gas pumps.

This isn't necessarily so, according to Max Epps, automotive engineer who analyzes the annual Mobilgas Economy Run results. While the automotive industry has been adding more and more horsepower to new cars each year, Epps said, it has been proven that higher horsepower need not mean lower gasoline mileage.

This has come as a pleasant surprise to motorists who believe that a more powerful engine requires more gasoline.

Just six years ago power equipment was a rarity. Automatic transmissions were available on medium and high priced automobiles, but power windows, lifts, power steering, power brakes and automatic seat controls were not in volume production.

TODAY ALL THESE accessories are available on even the lowest priced vehicles. This calls for additional demands from a car's electrical system and this, in turn, results in lowering gasoline mileage.

While today's cars are required to power more accessories, they are also required to provide much higher cruising speeds as the nation's freeways, parkways and inter-city throughways are completed. A decade or two ago, 60 to 70 miles per hour—if the road permitted such speeds—meant that the engine was producing almost all-out performance.

TODAY'S CARS, due to higher horsepower engines, can cruise comfortably and without extending their engines at 60 miles per hour—and without loss of fuel efficiency or mileage. Older cars consumed much more fuel at 60 miles per hour than at lower speeds—or than modern cars do at realistic parkway speeds.

Yet, year after year, optimum mileage continues to increase, Epps said. Results of tests over the past 20 years show that there has been an average improvement of nearly 30 per cent in fuel economy in the nation's cars.

If all automobiles now on the road were 1930 models, Epps said, we would be consuming 10 billion more gallons of fuel yearly, at a cost of an additional $2½ billion.

Income Tax Deductions Outlined for Motorists

If you bought a car on the installment plan and the interest is not separately stated in the contract, but is included in the carrying charge, it is possible to deduct the interest when preparing federal income tax returns, the Automobile Club of Southern California pointed out.

By using a formula in the 1954 Internal Revenue Code, the motorist can deduct, as interest, 6 per cent of the contract's average unpaid balance during the taxable year, not to exceed the carrying charge for that year, the club said.

(The carrying charge is the amount added to the unpaid balance of the cash price for the privilege of making installment payments, and in California is usually called the "time price differential.")

EASY TO READ Reflector Licenses Approved

BISMARCK—North Dakota's reflectorized license plate bill was hailed as an important step in improving traffic safety and a major aid to law enforcement officers by Gov. John E. Davis and State Motor Vehicle Registrar A. N. Lavik.

Gov. Davis praised the Legislature for passing the measure, which calls for front and rear reflectorized license plates beginning in 1958. "I feel this law places North Dakota among the leading states in the movement to modernize and improve license plates," he said.

Lavik said experience in other states has demonstrated the value of reflectorized license plates in reducing traffic deaths and injuries, and in making it easier for law enforcement officers to detect and apprehend traffic offenders and other law violators.

"REFLECTORIZED PLATES tend to reduce the number of night-time accidents due to rear end collisions by greatly increasing the distance at which another vehicle approaching from the rear can detect the vehicle ahead," Lavik declared.

He said law enforcement agencies in North Dakota supported reflectorized plates because of the ease with which the reflectorized plates of an oncoming vehicle can be read, despite the glare of the vehicle's headlights.

Lavik noted that Minnesota, South Dakota, Maine, and Delaware already have reflectorized license plates and that several other states employ reflectorized license plate tabs.

Makes License but Pays Plenty

FORREST CITY, Ark. (AP)—Joe Williams, a junkyard employee, found a 1937 Kansas auto tag and a 1936 Arkansas truck tag and by clever cutting and patching came up with a pretty convincing version of a 1937 Arkansas truck tag.

Things went well until he carelessly parked the truck in a no-parking area. When the officer bent close to read the license plate in uncertain light the fake was discovered. It cost Williams $125 for using a fictitious license.

Costly Turnpike Left Off Map

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP)—The Oklahoma Turnpike Authority is a little more than unhappy with the state Highway Department.

As a promotion for this year's 50th anniversary of Oklahoma statehood, the Highway Department published a golden anniversary highway map. It left out one thing—the new 88-mile Will Rogers Turnpike from Tulsa to the Missouri line, which has been under construction 18 months and opens in May.

Bare Facts Shown by Truck Driver

LOCK HAVEN, Pa. (AP)—A driver's plea for help ended in a police cover-up.

A policeman was called to the truck and the trucker displayed his dilemma. He had ripped the seat from his pants climbing into the cab.

With $5 from the trucker, the policeman went to a store and bought a new pair of pants. They were badly needed. The trucker wasn't wearing shorts.

LITTLE MAN'S DREAM CAR?

Just for comparison, the plush Mercedes-Benz 300 SL (right) pulled up beside the tiny German Spatz (Sparrow) for the photographer. The Spatz is a new entrant into the scooter-car field. It is made by Bayerische Auto-Werke of Nuremberg, is powered by a two-stroke 10.2-horsepower engine of 200 cc. displacement and will go about 50 mph.

Peek-Hole Driving Dangerous

Peek hole driving in cold, foggy weather is illegal as well as dangerous, warns the California Highway Patrol.

Drivers who scrape "peek holes" through the dew, ice or frost on their windshields and then operate their cars on the public roads are asking for accident trouble, declared Superintendent Russ Fuson, Commander of the Patrol's operation in the six Southern California Counties.

"Peek holes may become death traps due to lack of adequate sight area and can easily lead a driver into an accident because he couldn't see another car," Inspector Fuson suggested.

stated. "Clear the entire windshield, front, side, and rear windows before you drive."

"For those cars that must be left out in the weather, a cardboard, blanket or newspaper over the glass will help prevent ice or frost from forming," he suggested.

Porsche Adds New Lightweight Model With Carrera 110 Power

By PAUL WALLACE

A new competition model is being added to the Porsche line. The car has been named Carrera Gran Turismo and will have the standard coupe body—but built of aluminum instead of steel.

It will be powered with the Carrera engine—the 110 horsepower quad overhead cam model.

A super light racing coupe, the machine will be pretty much stripped inside and equipped with racing bucket seats similar to the Speedster.

KEN MILES, who plans to take delivery of the first one to hit here, says the car should be several hundred pounds lighter than the present Carrera.

With Miles at the wheel, the machine could be a threat in virtually any class racing locally—although it will be a production under 1600 cc car.

This information was one of several bits of fact and opinion we picked up along with a thundering morning after last week when the California Sports Car Club held a little dinner for the motor sports press at a Hollywood restaurant.

MILES INDICATED the Porsche factory has reacted rather violently to his—and presumably his boss, John von Neumann's—Porsche Spyder-engineered Cooper special. (The factory strongly disapproves of its engines being used in other automobiles.)

"The very light and potent car is virtually unbeatable in its class and a great threat to even such open class stuff as the big Ferraris."

It, of course, has cleaned up on the Porsche Spyders including those in the racing stable of von Neumann who also happens to be west coast Porsche distributor.

It has placed von Neumann in the peculiar situation of bending the cars he sells and promotes with his own "special."

Fate of the Porsche Cooper is doubtful but it seems likely it will not be raced any more in competition with the Spyders. Miles says he may use the machine in Formula Libre racing.

MEANWHILE, the hawk-nosed British driver will team with Jean Kunzle for the Sebring, Fla., International race. They will handle Kunzle's ex-Edgar, RS Spyder.

Miles, incidentally, calls Kunzle the most underrated sports car driver on the coast.

A temperamental pilot, Kunzle is brilliant when he is running right.

Starting at the rear of the field at the last Paramount Ranch race, he chased through the mob to tail Miles the latter part of the run.

Miles, acknowledged master of the under 1500s, said he was driving as well as ever had and, even in the faster Porsche-Cooper, just managed to hold Kunzle off.

We were also interested in the opinion of another CSCC executive committee member and a former top sports car racer himself, Dick Van Laanen.

Dick claims a good stock Chevrolet Corvette is a match for any Mercedes Benz 300 SL—not just in speed but also in handling. If that is true, this new modified Corvette may put America back into international sports car racing.

SAN PEDRO'S NAIL FLATS will be site of a motorcycle scrambles next Sunday. The affair will run all day, starting at 9 a.m. It is sponsored by the Compton Rough Riders.

Speaks A Language All Its Own!

Take a good look at this gentleman as he strides out into the early morning to his waiting car.

In all probability you feel—as we do—that you know a goodly number of things about him.

First of all, we would be willing to venture that he is a man who holds to high standards of achievement.

We would guess that he is held in high personal esteem by his friends and associates.

And we would suppose that he is a practical man who is keenly aware of the basic value and worth of the things around him.

The reason for all this is not far to seek.

For the motor car that awaits him at the curbside bears the beautiful crest of Cadillac. And here, beyond conjecture, is the most eloquent spokesman in all the realm of possessions.

In fact, the Cadillac car has, over the years, been so closely associated with the leading citizenry of our land that the two have become all but inseparable in the public mind.

And just as these many distinguished motorists have placed their trust in Cadillac, so Cadillac has given them everything they could hope for in an automobile.

Cadillac has given them unduplicated beauty and luxury . . . unsurpassed performance and comfort and ease of handling . . . and extraordinary quality.

And Cadillac has given them value. With each passing year, it becomes increasingly apparent that Cadillac represents one of the wisest purchases in all motordom.

Have you driven a 1957 Cadillac? If not, we urge you to come in and let the car tell you its own thrilling story on the highway.

We think you will agree that this year, more than ever, Cadillac speaks a language all its own!

CHEVROLET FLEET DELIVERED

Schlumberger Well Surveying Corp., 3611 Long Beach Blvd., took delivery last week of a fleet of 26 new Chevrolets, some of them shown here parked on nearby property. At left is H. G. Anderson, general manager of Beach City Chevrolet; Pete Pierson, purchasing agent for Schlumberger, and Bob Robbins, Beach City salesman who handled the sale.

More Space Bought By Claude Bowling

By KEN SATHER

Claude Bowling, proprietor of B & B Motor Sales, 1544 American Ave., now has 120 feet of American Ave. front for his big sales lot. Claude, who had an interest in the recently opened West Coast Auto Auction, 6685 Atlantic Ave., has sold that interest to Art Hall. Hall's name is familiar to everyone along automobile flow for his previous holdings here.

Bowling purchased the lot at 1550 American Ave. to give him the extra footage to increase his American Ave. frontage for the B and B displays.

RAY VINES, bossman at Ray Vines Used Cars, 437 E. Anaheim St., believes he has a "green thumb" so he has added a greenhouse to his home "farm" in Garden Grove. There may be watermelons the year round on the vines at Vines.

Chalk up No. 8 at the household of Mr. and Mrs. John Osborn, the operator of John Osborn's Used Cars, 1940 Cherry Ave. The Osborns now have six sons and two daughters.

BOB COFFMAN, who left the Mel Burns shop to devote full-time to operating his S and C Outboard Rentals at Pacific Landing, was visiting his old haunts last week, hobbling with one leg in a cast. Seems he climbed to the top of his big boat hoist and forgot to use a sky hook, dropping 20 feet to the paving and fracturing an ankle.

The boys around Beach City Chevrolet are really sold on the new turboglide transmission with triple turbine takeoff which has just arrived. They are inviting everyone to drive a car with this new equipment which is designed for smooth power. Incidentally Beach City now has a full-time finance counselor on duty to help patrons.

Beach City salesman, Bob Robbins, has completed delivery of a fleet of 26 new Chevrolets to the Schlumberger Well Surveying Corp., 3611 Long Beach

Forms Auto Test Agency

LOS ANGELES (AP) — An organization that hopes to win recognition as an authoritative, unbiased testing agency for the automobile industry has been formed in Los Angeles.

Under the name National Automotive Testing Assn., the organization is contacting major auto manufacturers with an eye to conducting special performance trials and tests, the results to be advertised nationally.

Wally Parks, a automotive magazine editor, is the president of NATA, which claims a staff of 37 experts from nearly every automotive research and development field.

Parks says NATA will have no connection with auto racing but will operate strictly for the benefit of the automobile industry and the car buyer.

Headquarters will be in Los Angeles but the association will undertake testing activities wherever necessary, says Parks.

Foreign Service Exam Scheduled

WASHINGTON (AP) — The State Department says that its semi-annual examination for young men and women who wish to become foreign service officers will be given on June 24 at more than 65 centers throughout the country.

Foreign Service officers will visit many colleges and universities this spring to try to interest students in the opportunities offered in the foreign service.

Black-mart Price of Pistol Drops

TOKYO (AP) — The black-market price of a U. S. Army pistol has dropped from $41.66 to $13.68.

"This may indicate the underworld has plenty of pistols now," a police official said. Five U. S. soldiers and a Japanese thug were arrested last year trying to sell pistols.

Ford Hopes to Oust GM as Leading Car Producer

By DAVID J. WILKIE

DETROIT (AP) — A competitive campaign is building up in the nation's auto industry that will dwarf anything of the kind in car history.

When the battle lines are finally drawn the campaign will find Ford attempting the almost fantastic task of ousting General Motors as the world's leading car builder. That's precisely why Ford is spending a quarter of a billion dollars to bring out an entirely new model in price areas it heretofore has not been able to cover.

Ford already has announced that when the new Edsel model is introduced some 7 or 8 months from now, there will be 4 series of cars. They are intended to fill gaps in the Ford line—between the Ford and Mercury models and also between the Mercury and Lincoln cars.

With these additions to the over-all line Ford will be able to compete with every model produced by General Motors.

FOR MUCH of the last two decades any discussion of the General Motors-Ford competition has been confined to the fight between Chevrolet and the Ford division, big volume producers of the two parent concerns. During most of that time Chevrolet has led in car output and retail deliveries.

But for most of the last four months Ford division has clung to the No. 1 spot, building and selling substantially more cars than Chevrolet. Obviously Ford cannot make a successful fight against General Motors without leading Chevrolet by a large margin.

An idea of the magnitude of the Ford task in battling with GM is given in final figures for the two automotive giants for last year. Of an industrywide production of 5,805,881 units, General Motors built 3,082,424 cars and had 3,024,286 retail deliveries.

Ford Motor Co. built 1,669,185 cars and had 1,684,108 retail deliveries.

Although the figures never have been publicly disclosed, both GM and Ford carried over a sizable part of the 803,000 unit inventory with which the industry started 1956.

The figures on retail sales are those given in the official nationwide car registrations.

PREDICTING a "war" among the larger automobile companies has become almost a perennial project among the car industry's analysts. Generally these predictions have hinted at possible price slashing at the manufacturing level.

Few of these "price wars" ever has materialized in the auto industry. Nobody has had the boldness to suggest they could figure in a General Motors-Ford competitive campaign.

But there is no guarantee that a knockdown and drag out competitive battle among the larger car makers would not bring price slashing at the retail level. It was almost industrywide during last year's inventory reduction drive. It could happen again if dealer stocks become unwieldy as they did at this time last year.

California Leads Nation for Total Cars, Trucks

California leads all other states in passenger car and motor truck registrations with 5,641,408 passenger cars and 853,910 trucks, for a total of 6,495,318 vehicles, reports the National Automobile Club.

Rounding out the top ten in total registrations are: Texas, 3,939,000; Pennsylvania, 3,890,000; Ohio, 3,628,000; Illinois, 3,419,000; Michigan, 3,197,000; New Jersey, 2,131,000; Indiana, 1,828,000; and Florida, 1,756,000.

BEACH COMING
WITH MALCOLM EPLEY

TWENTY-FOUR years ago today, a radio fell into the lap of Ruth Hoover as she sat in her Long Beach home.

Her lap broke the fall and the radio kept right on playing. Later when the radio had been taken over to Recreation Park, it helped brighten the hours for refugees gathered there from homes ravaged by the earthquake of March 10, 1933. She was glad she had cushioned its fall.

But let's let Mrs. Hoover, who now lives at 2971 Sepulveda, San Bernardino, tell the story in her own words as they came to us last week in a letter that gives some intimate family details of a disaster about which most of us late comers have heard in only general terms.

From here on, it's Mrs. Hoover writing.

THE CHILDREN had come from school and had gone to play. I sat listening to the radio when all of a sudden it fell into my lap. It kept right on playing although the sudden weight had pushed the rocking chair from under me leaving me sitting there on the floor with a heavy radio in my lap.

By then I realized it was an earthquake.

My mother had run for the back door but she found the screen door so cluttered up with wash tubs and plumbing she could not get to the door. So she came back to the front room and helped lift the radio off me, so I could get up.

Then I crawled out the window but mother was so large she could not get through the window. So she and I called for help until a man driving up the street stopped and ran into the yard. He made a lunge and knocked the door down, jumped into his truck and was gone. We never did know who he was.

MOTHER and I were in the yard and the children came running down the street. They had been playing in the upstairs room of a neighboring home and had to come down a stairway that was swinging like a jump rope. But they had all gotten down safely. That house was wrecked so badly it had to be torn down. But every one of those children got out safely.

By that time it was beginning to get dark so we wondered where we were going to sleep. We were afraid to go back into the house because the floor was spreading apart from front to back. But we got the bedroom window open and could reach the bed. So we pulled out all the bedding and put ours and the next door neighbor kids to bed on the lawn.

ALL THIS time a steady stream of cars were passing along Nimitz. For that was the street we lived on. About midnight a car drove into the yard. Some one called out, and there was my brother. He lived in Hawaiian Gardens and had been all this time trying to get into Long Beach to help us but he had found so many of the roads blocked. But he knew the country pretty well and knew of several little lanes and finally made his way into the city.

So we piled into his car and he took us to his home. But before we got there I remembered I had left our girl in Long Beach with some neighbor children. She had wanted to stay all night with them. They were going to sleep in their garage.

But my brother would not make the trip to get her that night. Early next morning we went back to Long Beach. We found that the family where my girl was had had to roll up their bedding and move because the garage had gotten so shaky it was too dangerous to stay there. So she had to sleep on the ground after all.

NEXT DAY we and many of the town folk moved to Recreation Park where the Navy had put up many tents. There we had the time of our lives. Had chow just like sailors. The sailors even carried my radio over to the park and we had lots of fun. I was glad then that I had been under the radio when it fell for not a single tube was broken. Then the Red Cross took over.

Nothing -- (Nothing?) -- Up His Sleeves

"M-i-c..."

...k-e-y..."

...M-o-u-s-e"

BOY MAGICIANS competed recently at their headquarters in Brownie's Magic Shop, 2023 Pacific Ave. Among the baffling feats was one in which Jimmie Cross, 12, started with three steel rings, produced a handful, materialized as a grand finale a "portrait of Mickey Mouse." Get the resemblance?

Postal Union Cites Cause of Poor Service

Public pressure to eliminate the Post Office Department's "costly middlemen" was cited Saturday by a Long Beach postal employees' union as the remedy for "ever poorer and reduced postal service."

Charging that a steady program of reduced service amounted to "a squeeze play" against the public, a postal employees' source said the program is intended to show the public it will get very little service until it pays higher rates.

Local 543, National Federation of Post Office Clerks, says in a formal recommendation that $25 million could be saved by abolishing "duplicate postal management district and regional offices." It said another $25 million could be saved in the issuing of directives from a "paper headquarters."

THE LOCAL POINTED out these savings would more than cover the recent $36 million cut in postal operations. The cutback was reflected here Saturday with the closing of the Main Post Office at noon. Saturday hours for the main office will be 9 to noon, as opposed to the former 8 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. schedule.

Postmaster George J. McMillin announced Saturday a policy statement by Postmaster General Arthur E. Summerfield calling for rate increases. Among them are increases of from 3 to 4 cents on first-class letters, from 2 to 3 cents on post cards and drop letters, 6 to 7 cents an ounce for air mail and 4 to 5 cents on air mail cards.

POSTAL EMPLOYEES spokesmen attacked the politically appointed "middlemen" in the "expensive district and regional superstructure" which accompanied the Post Office department's decentralization plan.

Girl Scouts Purchase Share in Camp Site

Long Beach area Girl Scouts, who begin celebrating their 45th birthday today, are giving themselves a big birthday present—a 210-acre camp site near Elsinore.

Mrs. H. W. Hodges, Long Beach Council president, announced Saturday that the council had joined six others in Southern California in buying Rancho de la Cienega for $69,000.

Other Girl Scout councils participating in the deal are the Aliso Grande (Lynwood-Compton area), Green Willow (Bellflower-Norwalk), Pomona Valley, Claremont, Centinela Valley and Montebello.

The property, located off the Ortega Hwy. some nine miles from Elsinore, is owned by H. B. Anderson of Huntington Beach.

THE LONG BEACH COUNCIL contribution to the purchase price will come from funds raised by Girl Scouts themselves through cookie and calendar sales.

Mrs. Hodges said the purchase will provide a more convenient camp site for Long Beach Girl Scouts, who now conduct such activities at Skyland Ranch.

Girl Scout Week activities of the council will open on a reverent note Sunday as most of the 71,000 Brownies, Intermediate Scouts and Senior Girl Scouts and their 7,200 adult leaders from 482 troops attend church services in groups and individually.

TYPICAL OF THE many groups attending will be the 15 girls of Mariner Scout Ship Haven, who will wear their blue uniforms for worship at Bixby Knolls Christian Church, 1240 E. Carson St., with their skipper, Mrs. Ann McPhee.

Many troop activities also have been scheduled for Tuesday.

day, the Girl Scout birthday. Among them will be an ingathering of Girl Scouts attending Mark Twain School in Lakewood at the Girl Scout Ranch House, Carson St. and Bellflower Blvd. Each girl will contribute a penny for each year of her age toward a world friendship fund.

The Girl Scout movement was started by Juliette Low on March 12, 1912. The first Long Beach troop was formed in 1932 by Mrs. Helga Beckley. The Long Beach Council was incorporated in 1935 with Mrs. F. D. Reider as its first president.

Fluoridation Support Seen

The Harbor District Dental Society is expected to vote a unanimous endorsement of Long Beach water fluoridation proposals Monday night at a meeting in the Lafayette Hotel.

The controversial plan, which, its backers say, would greatly reduce dental decay, will be on the ballot in the next city election.

The dinner meeting will begin at 7 p.m. Speaker will be Dr. Earl Pound.

Plaque Honors Doctor's Work for Laboratory

Dr. Irvin Ungar Wednesday will receive a special plaque from the Long Beach Lodge of B'nai B'rith for his work in establishing a cardio-pulmonary laboratory in St. Mary's Hospital.

The laboratory, established a year and a half ago, was set up for the study and treatment of congenital and acquired heart disease.

Techniques utilized through work in the laboratory include heart catheterization, angiocardiology, lung function tests and such facilities as controlled lowering of body temperatures and monitoring during corrective heart surgery.

The winner will represent the city at many civic functions throughout the year. She also will be official hostess during the Miss Universe Pageant.

City Suggestion Plan Rewards Gas Man Who Designed Gadget

A gas utilityman's design of a special gadget for tapping into a "live" gas main has won him the first cash award in the city employee suggestion program inaugurated last December.

Raymond W. Ficklin, 2075 Adriatic Ave., was handed a $90 check on the city treasury, along with congratulations, by City Mgr. Sam E. Vickers.

"His design and fabrication really worked," commented L. L. Bendinger, superintendent of the Municipal Gas Dept. "It saved us money."

The need for a special adapter for tapping equipment arose in connection with an installation of mains at Pico Ave. and 9th St., Gas Dept. officials said.

SUCH EQUIPMENT is manufactured by a city supplier, but it couldn't be delivered for at least 60 days, whereas the installation project was urgent.

Total saving at the one location was estimated by H. E. Savidge, assistant superintendent, at $2,307.50.

In addition, Ficklin's adapter is being retained as a part of regular city equipment for future use.

Ficklin joined the Gas Dept. as a laborer in 1940. He said he will use the award for a vacation trip.

Haiti Police Fire on Mob Riot Against Candidate

PORT AU PRINCE, Haiti (AP)—Police fired on a mob rioting against the entry of presidential candidate Louis Delors into the town of Jeremie Saturday. The army said one person was killed and several injured.

The army said a crowd of peasants from the surrounding hill country "invaded" Jeremie, a town of about 11,000 in south-west Haiti, as Senator Delors and his party chiefs were about to enter it on a campaign tour.

RIOTING DEVELOPED and the shooting followed. Delors was a leader in the strike movement which toppled provisional President Joseph Nemours Pierre-Louis early last month. He has been considered a leading candidate for the presidency in the nationwide elections scheduled this spring.

WORLD NEWS BRIEFS

Irritating Fumes Alert Thousands

SOUTH POINT, Ohio (AP)—Clouds of potentially irritating chemical fumes from a warehouse fire kept thousands of people in a tri-state Ohio River area on the alert for hours Saturday.

Long after a huge pile of chemical fertilizer caught fire, wind and water combined to all but disperse any dangers of breathing the acrid fumes. Plant chemists reported the fumes contained chlorine and oxides of nitrogen, but "not of sufficient concentration to be injurious to either lives or property."

Flying Object Puzzles Pentagon

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Defense Department Saturday was unable to identify the fiery object that almost crashed into a Pan-American World Airways airliner high over the Atlantic.

A spokesman said the Department had received no report on the incident.

The incident occurred when the Pan-American transport was about midway on a flight from New York to San Juan, Puerto Rico. The pilot, Capt. Matthew A. Van Winkle, had to put his plane into a sharp climb to avoid a collision. Four persons on the plane were hospitalized from shock and injuries suffered as an apparent result of the maneuver.

Plane Chases 'Sky Visitor'

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP)—Two veteran pilots said they chased an unidentified flying object that played cat-and-mouse with them for 10 minutes Friday night on a flight from Beaumont to Houston.

The UFO whizzed past the Tennessee Gas Transmission Co.'s DC3 flown by Victor Hancock and Guy Miller and then "just messes around with us," Hancock said. "I still don't know what it was but it knew we were following it," Hancock said. "When it wanted to, it kept ahead of us easily. It would seem to stop, then when we caught up with it, it would be gone."

Marine Corporal Broken

PARRIS ISLAND, S. C. (AP)—The 13th Marine instructor to be disciplined at this troubled "boot camp" in nine months was sentenced Saturday to three months at hard labor and reduction to private for laying his hands on three recruits.

A five-member court martial board also ordered Cpl. William R. Walsh of Lynhurst, N. J., to forfeit $40 pay a month for three months. Under the charges he could have received a maximum penalty of six months at hard labor and a bad conduct discharge without any pay.

WASHINGTON (AP)—Russia set off another nuclear test explosion Friday, the Atomic Energy Commission (AEC) announced Saturday.

This was the sixth such announcement since last August when the AEC reported the start of a Russian test series.

Egypt Police Say Spy Caught

CAIRO (AP)—Egyptian security police have arrested an official of the Shell Oil Company on charges of spying for Britain, it was announced Saturday.

An announcement said the company's public relations director here, Fahmy Samaha, was taken into custody three days ago. It said security officials had obtained several reports which Samaha allegedly sent to an unidentified Briton recently expelled from Egypt for "spying."

Barefoot Beat Paces Millikan Dance Band

Rod McKenzie, daddy-o of the drums at Millikan High School, is a real cat—but no pussyfoot, he.

When the boys drift in for a session, Rod kicks off his size 9½s and gives out with a neat beat from his bare feet.

"Man, he really feels it, too!" a fellow bandman sighed admiringly.

Of course, that's what comes from baring his sole to music.

SIXTEEN-YEAR-OLD ROD, who lives at 2385 Ximeno Ave., is a junior at the new high school and a star performer in the dance band recently formed by Millikan students.

Rod has been thumping the skins since he was a lad of 12, but he fell into the rawfoot routine strictly by accident.

Last fall, when music prof Michael Pamprone was organizing the pop platoon, Rod showed up late at a practice session because he had been taking a gym class—sans shoes.

HE DIDN'T HAVE TIME to locate his loafers, so he sat down at his drums and had at it.

"Worked out pretty well," Rod recalled. "So I've been practicing barefoot since then."

Rod doesn't actually beat the drums with his feet, but uses his right foot to operate the pedal that thumps the drum.

The 16-piece band, as yet unnamed, will play its first dance date during the school's Easter vacation. But there's been no decision on whether the occasion will find Rod unshod.

Hungary Decrees Mindszenty Ban

BUDAPEST UP — A Hungarian government spokesman declared today Josef Cardinal Mindszenty, a refugee in the U.S., "can never resume his church functions in Hungary." The spokesman said the Roman Catholic prime minister, Janos Horvath, president of the office of religious affairs, said the Roman Catholic prime minister has "issued orders contrary to the agreement between the state and the Catholic church as well as the position taken in several statements by the bench of bishops, and which clash with the laws of the state."

"From this situation," Horvath said, "it follows that Mindszenty can never have church functions in Hungary again."

He warned Roman Catholics that the fulfillment of any orders from the Cardinal will be considered an illegal act.

MAN FINDS OUT VICTIM WAS HIS DAUGHTER

OPELOUSAS, La. (UP)—Edgar Morain stopped at the scene of a highway collision Friday night and helped police place the sheeted body of a victim in an ambulance. Then Morain went home. A few minutes later he was notified that the person killed was Josephine Morain, 18, his daughter.

Her companion, Willery Hudspeth Jr., died later at a hospital.

Salem Witches' Exoneration Called Bad for Tourism

BOSTON (UP)—Six persons convicted of witchcraft in 1892 have come back in gray flannel suits. Now they are hucksters for Massachusetts' much-publicized vacationland.

Legislatures, both Democratic and Republican-controlled, in recent years have killed measures that would have vindicated Salem's witches and set aside their convictions.

They claim it's good business. A new bill is before the State Senate asking that the convictions of Mrs. Ann Pudeator and five others be reversed. But thirty New Englanders point out that the witches drag nearly 300,000 persons to Salem each year.

"That means $4 million annually in tourist trade," said one senator. "You can't overlook that."

Supporters of the bill, including a few direct descendants of convicted witches, said they were asking only for "a simple act of justice."

Walter Merrill, director of the Essex Institute of Salem, said most of the townspeople are ashamed even today of the "notoriety" that followed the witchcraft trials.

"Massachusetts was the first state to exclude witchcraft as a criminal offense," Merrill said. "It should by this time have cleared all the witches."

Protests over legislative dilly-dallying have come from some illustrious Massachusetts residents, among them Boston's U. S. Senator Leverett Saltonstall.

One of Saltonstall's ancestors was a judge during the infamous trial days, but the senator points out that he refused to sit on a witchcraft case.

Nineteen persons were hanged on Gallows Hill during the hysteria that let loose a blood bath long since had fled the state. Now, the witches remain as the state's best salesmen.

One person escaped hanging, a shoemaker named Giles Corey. Instead, he was crushed to death with stones while inquisitors tried to force him to confess to sorcery charges. Only a few months earlier he had testified against his wife, also accused of witchcraft.

In 1711, the then general court of the Providence of Massachusetts Bay declared 14 of the witchcraft convictions invalid in response to petitions. The remaining six might have been exonerated, but their families long since had fled the state. Now, the witches remain as the state's best salesmen.

Negroes Find New Home in Southland

Compton Housing Tops List

Negroes are finding new homes in Southern California as they join the influx of population.

The Southland's finest housing for Negroes is within the city limits of Compton.

Yet, 10 years ago, not a single Negro lived in Compton.

The last special census taken in 1955 showed there were 10,871 non-white residents in a total population of 63,670.

There is no challenging the "finest housing in Southern California" designation. This is a fact attested to by Realtors, social service workers, county government officials, church and business leaders.

Two principal factors led to the influx of the Negro to Compton.

First, the city annexed an area around 130th St. in which Negroes were already residing. Secondly, tract developers constructed "non-restricted" homes in large areas.

TYPICAL OF the home developments is a tract recently completed at 131st St. and Central Ave. Most of the 60 homes were sold while still under construction.

Each has three bedrooms, 1½ baths and a two-car garage. They sold for $14,950 to $15,450. Down payment was $2,050. FHA terms, $97 a month, included principal, interest, taxes and insurance. To qualify, buyers had to have a gross family income of $395 per month.

John Buggs, member of the Los Angeles County Committee on Human Relations, said the housing developments were responsible for the big Negro influx.

"There has never been a program like it anywhere," he stated. "But the pattern of development has been very good. There are no particular race problems now."

There were some race "incidents."

For the non-restricted housing developments, large as they were, could not contain all the Negro populace who wanted to move from the blighted areas of Los Angeles. Some of the Negroes bought homes from Caucasian residents whose homes bordered the larger developments.

In 1953 there was a window smashing in the southwest part of town. White residents picketed a home and threatened to keep a Negro family from moving in. The word spread to Negroes in Los Angeles. Feelings mounted.

All the potential elements of a race riot were present.

BEFORE REAL TROUBLE developed, Compton Police Chief Bill Ingraham and Capt. Clarence W. Kissam intervened.

"We got together with the Negroes and assured them everyone, alike, would receive all the benefits of law enforcement," said Capt. Kissam.

"It was strictly a local situation and we knew we could handle it if we could keep the outside element away. We didn't want a lot of natural agitators."

The police enlisted the aid of The Eagle, a Negro newspaper. For three months, a 24-hour police patrol was maintained in tracts west of Central Ave. and south of Olive St.

There was no riot.

It is not, however, a picture of complete integration.

There are some communities in Compton today where colored lives next door to white. But, for the most part, where the colored have moved in, the whites have moved out.

WHAT PLEASERS Capt. Kissam principally is the pride that the new colored citizens of Compton have in their neighborhoods. He cites as an example Central Gardens, a housing development bordered by the flood control, El Segundo Blvd., Central and Rosecrans Aves.

"They have set up their own

MRS. ITASCA LEWIS Teaches Sixth Graders in El Segundo School

NEW TRACT in Compton Reflects Claim of "Finest Housing in Southern California" for Negroes community program," said Capt. Kissam. They have block captains to handle little problems. They have group meetings.

"When they moved in, there were no street lights. They wanted the very best so they put in underground conduits. They have a very neat neighborhood."

The neat neighborhoods are one reason why there has been progress in the acceptance of the Negro in Compton.

The Compton Chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People is typical of that progress.

It was formed in 1953 at the suggestion of white members of the human relations committee of the Coordinating Council of Compton. At the time of formation, there were 30 Negro and 20 white members. Today, there are 250 members, about equally divided between whites and Negroes.

It is the largest percentage of white members for any NAACP chapter in the nation.

JESSE L. ROBINSON, an assistant training superintendent for the Los Angeles Post Office, is president of the Compton chapter. Robinson, a Negro, has been president since it was founded.

"I believe Compton is growing in the knowledge and practice of human relations," Robinson said.

"Negro school teachers are employed here. Negroes are employed in a few of the super-markets and in some of the utilities."

"I feel that, if we can achieve face-to-face conferences at the right level, we can work faster Negro janitors. We have an honest-to-goodness relationship—not patronizing. Negro teachers instruct mixed classes and classes where the students are all Caucasian. We have had no opposition to this part of our program."

Integration does exist in the school system, particularly at the high school level. It works. That doesn't mean that there aren't occasional fights. There are fights occasionally at any high school anywhere. That's why Capt. Kissam discounts any "racial" implication.

"It's true we've had some bad publicity on school fights simply because the kids were of different races," he said. "A similar scrape between a couple of white kids wouldn't amount to anything."

standing of the American way of life as far as his treatment has been concerned.

Ricardo, who was born and raised in New England, was the first Negro businessman to get a license from the city. That was in 1953.

"I have never been treated better anywhere than I have in Compton," he said. "I have been waited on by clerks with southern accents and treated graciously. I have been in shops where they never saw me before, but yet they cashed my checks."

Negroes will be on important citizens committees, city commissions and other city boards."

Father Llewellyn Williams, religious leader of St. Martin's Episcopal Church, a Negro, feels there are now ample churches for the colored populace. He adds:

"The Ministerial Assn. in Compton is open to the Negro minister."

Non-White Count

Latest figures on the non-white population of Long Beach area communities other than Compton show the following:

Gardena 1,953, Lynwood 4, Palos Verdes 11, Torrance 764, Wiltiger 58, Long Beach 15,000, San Pedro 3,178, and Wilmington 3,227. The Negro population of Orange County is very small.

AT ONE junior high school, Willowbrook, most students are colored. Bill Jones, principal, reports that the school has won the Freedom Foundation Award every year since 1950. The awards are made for outstanding achievement in bringing about a better understanding of the American way of life.

F. M. Ricardo, Negro real estate broker, has no complaint about Compton residents' understanding of the American way of life as far as his treatment has been concerned.

Ricardo, who was born and raised in New England, was the first Negro businessman to get a license from the city. That was in 1953.

"I have never been treated better anywhere than I have in Compton," he said. "I have been waited on by clerks with southern accents and treated graciously. I have been in shops where they never saw me before, but yet they cashed my checks."

There are two Negro doctors in Compton. There is a Negro pharmacist. There is one Negro lawyer and four more are establishing offices in Compton.

City Mgr. Harry Scott reports:

"Everybody works together. There are no racial problems."

Mayor Del Clawson says:

"The time is coming when part of Compton."

THERE ARE, however, areas where more progress is needed. A consensus shows these are principally to be:

More employment of Negroes by the city, more employment of the Negro by downtown merchants, better transportation to the downtown area, more entertainment facilities for the Negro, more encouragement of the Negro towards feeling he "is a part of Compton."

Time for Action on Land Sinkage

A REPORT by the Assembly Committee on Manufacturing, Oil and Mining Industry notes that land subsidence in our harbor area is "a very serious problem."

We hope what this committee now understands may be conveyed to other members of the Legislature.

During the past 15 years land in this area has subsided as much as 24 feet, and it continues to sink at a startling rate, menacing the whole future of property, oil production, and commerce in our port.

The state of California cut itself a share of that problem when it cut itself into the revenues from tidelands oil produced in that area. Thus the state legislators have reason to give prompt and serious attention to proposals for preventing subsidence.

Some persons would avoid a showdown with the problem. They suggest "further study." Others argue that the proposed remedy, water injection, has not been proven effective.

But the time has come for action. Voluminous studies have been made. A study undertaken by Frank S. Hudson at the request of the Subcommittee on Long Beach Tidelands of the Assembly Interim Committee on Judiciary, contains 9 pages of bibliography on the subject. We should, of course, continue to study this problem, but not at the sacrifice of action. For if something isn't done, the question of what to do about Long Beach subsidence will become merely academic.

Hudson conducted his own subsidence study and studied the results of the investigations of numerous others. He came to the conclusion:

"The subsidence at Long Beach Harbor is due to the reduction of fluid pressure in the oil sands . . . which in turn is caused by the extraction of oil from the sands . . .

"Man made earthquakes will recur as long as the rocks of the oil zones continue compacting.

"The only practicable way of combating the subsidence is to stop the compaction of the oil zones by large injection of water into the oil sands."

It is not enough to say that this is untried and unproven. A large body of reliable authority contends that injection will work. No proposal in which authorities have equal faith has been offered. In absence of another promising solution, this one should be tried.

The folly will lie in doing nothing. In order to be able to start doing something, legislation facilitating oil field utilization in the local fields is necessary. It should be passed at this session of the Legislature.

Ike Doctrine Completes World's Fortifications Against the Communists

WASHINGTON.—The real significance of the Eisenhower doctrine resolution, just passed by both Houses of Congress, may not be immediately apparent to the public in these days of swift-moving events, but the lesson will not be overlooked in Moscow.

For the truth is that, for all practical purposes, the United States now has declared war on international communism in every area of the world. America specifically has served warning that any attempt to impair or interfere with the national independence of any country in the Middle East, either by military threat or by internal subversion through economic means or otherwise, will meet with countermeasures which could involve the use of military force.

The final text of the resolution, which passed the Senate by a vote of 72 to 19 and the House by 350 to 60—more than two-thirds in each case—is much stronger than when originally proposed by the President and Secretary of State. This is conceded in a formal report of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

THE EISENHOWER administration in some ways would have preferred the original version as approved by the House, but the broad language used by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee was deemed acceptable because the Senate committee report has interpreted its meaning so clearly.

Today, therefore, the Communists in both Moscow and Peking are on notice that, by an overwhelming vote of both Houses of Congress and by political parties in America, the armed forces of the United States will be used in the Far East—in accordance with the Far East resolution of 1955—and in the Middle East, in accordance with the Eisenhower Doctrine. The Pan-American countries are protected by the Monroe Doctrine and the Organization of American States.

As for Europe, the North Atlantic Treaty has set up an organization of 15 countries whose territorial integrity and political independence are guaranteed by the United States as well as other powers against Communist aggression. The Southeast Asia area is protected by special treaties known as "SEATO."

Even North Africa comes within the general scope of the Eisenhower Doctrine. Likewise, the area covered by the North African states in the Middle East, under what is known as the Bagdad Pact, can be said to be protected now by the resolution of authority just passed by Congress.

THUS, BY UNITED STATES aid, the whole world is fortified directly or indirectly against international communism.

This is a momentous step in American history and a milestone in world affairs. It means that while, as stated in the new resolution, the United States plans to act in accordance with the provisions of the United Nations charter—complying with the orders of the Security Council and the resolutions of the General Assembly—this country will not be stopped from acting alone if the U. N. falls down.

This is probably the first instance in which any country has pledged itself alone under Article 51 to do what the U. N. may fail to do. But whatever action the United States takes under the new resolution must be as a consequence of the request of the nation or group of nations desiring military assistance.

Nobody can complain now that the United States didn't make its intentions clear, as was unfortunately the case prior to World War I and World War II. American military power will be put on the scales to produce a general balance of power against the Soviets and their allies and satellites.

The basic purpose, of course, is not to take military measures, but to deter the Communists. It is a move of prevention. It conceivably could mean no steps at all would ever be taken on the military side beyond the deploying of American forces in or near the areas that might be threatened.

Justice Harlan Reminded of His Grandfather's Fight for Slaves

WASHINGTON.—Justice John Marshall Harlan of the Supreme Court is the grandson of John Marshall Harlan, who also served on the Supreme Court shortly after the Civil War and wrote a ringing dissent in the first segregation case to come before the court under the 14th Amendment.

The elder Justice Harlan came from Kentucky where he held slaves but battled for the slaves, first as a member of the Union Army, later on the Supreme Court.

THE OTHER DAY his grandson, now on the Supreme Court, got an interesting visit from Robert J. Harlan, Robert Harlan is a leading Negro attorney of the Washington bar.

"My great-grandfather," he told Justice Harlan, "served as a slave for your grandfather and was liberated by him. Your grandfather helped him save some money, and eventually he started a little photography shop in Cincinnati."

Attorney Harlan brought with him interesting documentary evidence showing the connection between his great-grandfather and the justice's grandfather. His great-grandfather had taken the name Harlan from the slave owner, as frequently happened in those days.

NOTE — The segregation case of U. S. vs. Harris in which the elder Harlan wrote his dissent in 1883, buried the 14th Amendment for 70 years. Congress had passed an act giving equal privileges to Negroes in "inns, public conveyances, and theaters." Northern members of the court ruled it unconstitutional. Harlan, a southerner, wrote: "The right of a colored person to use an improved highway upon the terms accorded to free men of other races is . . . fundamental . . . It is for Congress, not the judiciary, to say what legislation is appropriate. . . . Constitutional provisions adopted in the interest of liberty have been so construed as to defeat the ends the people desired to accomplish."

SECRETARY of the Treasury Humphrey was testifying before the House Appropriations Committee regarding the record peacetime budget which Humphrey said should be cut.

"Unfortunately," he said, after repeated questioning, "I can't point out any places where the budget can be cut."

"Mr. Secretary," queried Rep. James Whitten (D-Miss.), "in making the Congress to stand up in the face of the public demand for these programs, aren't you asking us to show more courage than you and the President could muster?"

Humphrey laughed.

"Yes," he replied, "I guess I am. But nevertheless, I hope you'll be able to find ways that we won't be able to find."

"It will take 18 months to spend this money," he continued. "I can assure you that, in line with the President's requirement, we're going to study our requirements day by day and month by month in an effort to hold down expenditures."

Senate Debate on Ike Doctrine Left an Onlooker Disillusioned

WASHINGTON.—The Senate was ready to vote. For eight weeks, the Eisenhower Doctrine had been analyzed, dissected, denounced and extolled.

Under extreme pressure from the White House, overwhelming Republican support of the Middle East resolution was assured. Majority Leader Lyndon Johnson, though irritated by Secretary Dulles' double talk, felt he had no choice but to uphold the President.

But a sizable number of other Democratic senators, led by Georgia's respected Richard Russell, thought the administration's authority to spend some $200 million in the Middle East should be restricted by Congress.

On this particular Saturday morning, Sen. Russell rose to propose a substitute resolution that would uphold the President's right to use U. S. troops against Communist aggression in the Middle East, but deny his request for further financial aid.

Dick Russell called the administration program "a pig in a poke." He said he refused to buy a pig in a poke without knowing "its size and weight."

The Georgia senator's argument was actually an attack upon the whole foreign aid program. He pointed out that we must start tapering off for foreign aid "if we ever hope to have a program of fiscal responsibility at home."

AS I SAT in the Senate gallery, listening to Sen. Russell, it seemed to me that he made a great deal of sense. Politically, everything he said could have been advanced by Republican critics of the size and perpetuity of foreign aid.

But here again, under administration pressure, such stalwart Republicans as Sen. Homer Capehart of Indiana and Ohio's John Bricker voted for extension of the program they have been questioning for years.

As one Democratic Senator told me, "A majority of the senators on the floor agree with Russell but they'll vote against him. In my case, for instance, I don't want the voters in my state to ever charge that I didn't uphold the President in his handling of the Middle East crisis."

After several hours of debate, the Russell resolution was defeated 58 to 28, with only four Republican senators voting for it. This cleared the way for final approval of the Eisenhower Doctrine last Thursday.

TO THE ONLOOKER, it was a disillusioning experience. Principle and conviction counted for little. Even the brilliant Sen. John Kennedy of Massachusetts, who shared many of Russell's doubts, what legislation is appropriate. . . . Constitutional provisions adopted in the interest of liberty have been so construed as to defeat the ends the people desired to accomplish."

SECRETARY of the Treasury Humphrey was testifying before the House Appropriations Committee regarding the record peacetime budget which Humphrey said should be cut.

"Unfortunately," he said, after repeated questioning, "I can't point out any places where the budget can be cut."

"Mr. Secretary," queried Rep. James Whitten (D-Miss.), "in making the Congress to stand up in the face of the public demand for these programs, aren't you asking us to show more courage than you and the President could muster?"

Humphrey laughed.

"Yes," he replied, "I guess I am. But nevertheless, I hope you'll be able to find ways that we won't be able to find."

"It will take 18 months to spend this money," he continued. "I can assure you that, in line with the President's requirement, we're going to study our requirements day by day and month by month in an effort to hold down expenditures."

THE RIGHT-TO-WORK law is not designed to clean up racketeering in unions. Its one purpose is to make all the unions helpless and thereby give industry an unfair advantage over the working man.

The Portland investigation is worth while and doing a lot of good, but don't condemn us all for one man's wrongdoings.

WASHINGTON.—The Senate was ready to vote. For eight weeks, the Eisenhower Doctrine had been analyzed, dissected, denounced and extolled.

Under extreme pressure from the White House, overwhelming Republican support of the Middle East resolution was assured. Majority Leader Lyndon Johnson, though irritated by Secretary Dulles' double talk, felt he had no choice but to uphold the President.

But a sizable number of other Democratic senators, led by Georgia's respected Richard Russell, thought the administration's authority to spend some $200 million in the Middle East should be restricted by Congress.

On this particular Saturday morning, Sen. Russell rose to propose a substitute resolution that would uphold the President's right to use U. S. troops against Communist aggression in the Middle East, but deny his request for further financial aid.

Dick Russell called the administration program "a pig in a poke." He said he refused to buy a pig in a poke without knowing "its size and weight."

The Georgia senator's argument was actually an attack upon the whole foreign aid

Rep. Clair Engle High on List of State Democratic Hopefuls

A NAME that will be banded about at next weekend's big Democratic convention in Long Beach, and one that may become increasingly prominent as the elections of 1958 approach, is that of Clair Engle, the eighth Second California District Congressman. He'll be here for the conclave.

Engle is high on the list of possibilities as the Democrats begin looking around for men to throw into the fight for major California offices next year. The question as to just who those men may be will keep tongues wagging in the fringes of the California Democratic Council convention which opens at the Municipal Auditorium Friday.

The mountain county Congressman isn't too well known in this area, and if he's going to run for statewide office a big buildup will be necessary.

ATTY. GEN. Edmund G. Brown touched things off for Engle in Washington last week. Brown, talking to capital newsmen, mentioned three California Congressmen as good material for the Democrats in their bids for the U. S. Senatorship, governorship and attorney general's office, all open in 1958. But he seemed to give Engle the edge over Congressman Chet Holifield and Rep. John Shelley of San Francisco.

Brown said that of the three, only Engle is a lawyer and therefore the only one likely to run for attorney general.

Engle is also a great little campaigner and would be a strong possibility for either the Senate or the Governorship," said Brown. When it was pointed out that if Engle left Congress he would vacate the chairmanship of Interior and Insular Affairs and it might go to a Republican, Brown said:

"That's certainly a problem. But we need good strong candidates in California and Engle would certainly be one."

BROWN, who won't say until June what office he himself intends to seek, said that Engle and Shelley had both indicated they were "open" to suggestions for trying for one of the three offices, but that Holifield had virtually ruled himself out.

So Engle, the most likely new-position candidate of the three Congressmen, has apparently told Brown he will run if things break right.

Engle served as California manager for the Adlai Stevenson campaign in 1956. He won election that year in the primary, so had no campaign worries of his own in the autumn. He was, however, somewhat overshadowed by Brown, who is probably remembered by most Californians as the No. 1 Stevenson campaign official in the state.

ENGLE HAS done all right in his own bailiwick. He began practicing law in Red Bluff, Tehama County, after graduation in law at the University of California. In 1934, he was elected district attorney of Tehama County, and in 1942 ran successfully for the State Senate. In 1943, a vacancy occurred in the second district Congressional post, a special election was held and Engle won. He has been re-elected seven times.

His district is one of the biggest in the country, stretching from Siskiyou and Modoc Counties on the north to the San Bernardino County line. It embraces 18 counties, a vast area of mountain, valley and desert bordering on Nevada but running to within a few miles of the Pacific at the north end. It would appear that politically satisfying such a widely scattered population would be a fair-sized job, but Engle has obviously done it for the last 14 years.

WHETHER the slight, fiery mountain county Congressman can extend his political success to the broad valleys and other sections of the state is a question that may be answered in 1958.

Building Will Start Next Month

First height-limit construction in recent years in Long Beach is scheduled to begin on April 15 with groundbreaking for the 12-story Royal Palms Apartments, it was announced yesterday by P. I. Wilsey Jr., who with R. T. Hehard and Roy L. Ruffum are sponsoring the project.

The structure will be built on a one-half block square site at First and Atlantic Ave. overlooking the ocean.

Containing 164 apartments, the Royal Palms is a cooperative organized under FHA Section 213 with occupants of the units holding all shares of ownership in the property.

E. T. Moore of Moore Realty, sales agents for Royal Palms, reports that 156 of the 164 apartments have been sold, meeting the FHA requirements that 90 per cent of the units be sold in advance of construction.

"ABOUT ONE-HALF of the purchasers are Long Beach residents," Moore says, "with the remainder coming from other southern and central California communities."

The fireproof and quakeproof building will be of steel and reinforced concrete construction with special soundproofing provided between apartments. Kitchens are all-electric with built-in oven and range and main floor facilities include a social lounge overlooking a heated swimming pool.

"The success of the Royal Palms is tremendously encouraging to all in this community who are interested in the continued development and improvement of downtown Long Beach," commented Wilsey.

"It is a significant addition to the fine living facilities in the area and we are proud of our association with a project that has attracted so many substantial citizens who will become valued permanent members of our community."

General contractor for the structure is M. J. Brock and Co., of Los Angeles. Architects are J. Richard Shelley, A.I.A., and Francis O. Merchant, A.I.A.

Total cost of land and property is $2,652,000.

ONLY EIGHT UNSOLD APARTMENTS

With 156 of the 164 own-your-own apartments in the proposed Royal Palms already sold, construction is scheduled to begin April 15. The 12-story structure will cost $2,652,000 and will be the first height-limit construction here in several years.

Rapid sales of both new homes and sites in Sun Gold Hills for custom building was reported yesterday by Robert H. Walter, president of Sun Gold, Inc., who said the activity has been increased by the growing scarcity of building sites in the foothill area above Whittier Blvd.

"We advise families who want to live in the east Whittier area in the foothill region to make their selections soon for this desirable Sun Gold Hills property will soon be sold out," he said.

ATTRACTED to Sun Gold's display of models near Santa Gertrude and Janine Aves., north of Whittier Blvd., he noted, are vets who can still buy on VA terms with approximately 20 per cent down, and non-vets who are offered FHA terms with about 25 per cent down.

Robert H. Smith, sales manager, said both groups are offered low monthly payments on the homes which are priced from $19,500.

Increased Sales Reflect Value of Cinderella Home

Reflecting the many appealing features by the consistently steady sales, Cinderella Homes are attracting throngs of visitors who are seeking large homes for a moderate price, the salesmen report.

Cinderella Homes are in Anaheim where Builders Shannon and Jene Vandruft of Vandruft Builders, Inc., have woven enchantment with excellent planning and luxurious finishing of these homes.

"The homes with the $23,000 look," read the ads. But they cost far less than that although every feature of the development speaks luxurious and relaxed living. Prices range from $14,980 to $16,250.

In smog-free Orange county, on roomy 72-foot wide lots, the homes are easily accessible to shopping areas, schools, the freeway, and many points of pleasure and entertainment.

CEILING HIGH fireplaces, louvered openings between kitchen and living room so that you can watch TV or chat with guests while you cook, hand-painted ceramic light switches, custom lighting fixtures, built-in speakers for music, custom wall papers are some features.

Care was taken to avoid that "all-just-alike" tract look, choice of 17 exteriors has handsomely taken care of this problem... giving each home an individual look of distinction, and each exterior is a storybook "picture" itself.

The homes have 3 bedrooms, 4 bedrooms, or the popular 3 bedrooms and a family room, and each has 2 full baths.

The Cinderella Homes may be reached by going out the Santa Ana freeway to Hwy. 39 in Buena Park, continue south past Knott's Berry Farm and through to models, one-quarter mile south of Orange Ave. From Long Beach, drive east on Carson St., which becomes Lincoln Ave., turn south to Hwy. 39 to models, one-quarter mile south of Orange Ave.

ANAHEIM HOME

This is one of the models of the Cinderella Homes in Anaheim which are priced from $14,980 yet have the appearance of a more costly home, salesmen stress.

NEW MANAGER

Coming to Long Beach Monday to meet personnel of the store will be Mrs. Alice Werbsa, above, who next week will become manager of the Broadway-Long Beach store in Los Altos Center. Mrs. Werbsa will succeed Herbert C. Stanyon, who is retiring after 34 years with the Broadway-Hale Co. The new manager will devote most of this week in getting acquainted with the big store and the personnel.

Showing Increased Sales

Strong public demand for homes in two price categories was reported yesterday by developers of Signature Homes and Twin Communities in Garden Grove.

Priced from $11,700 and from $15,800, the two new series of Signature Homes both feature traditional architecture and conventional construction on raised foundations with rich hardwood floors over two-inch sub-flooring, according to Jerry Snyder and Max Levine, who head the mammoth home-building firm which now ranks 12th in size in the nation.

Communities point to a strong public demand for homes in the Garden Grove area which feature high quality materials and skilled workmanship," it was stated by James H. Waters, sales manager.

"WHILE OFFERED at two different levels of prices, the major difference between the homes is size," he explained. The smaller homes, known as "Special Edition" dwellings, are on display on Dale St., between Ball Rd. and Cerritos Ave. The furnished models typify a wide variety of 3-bedroom, 2-bath stylings now rising at the site.

Newest Stratford Homes Appeal to Home Seekers

The Broadway Euclid Series, Stratford Homes of Anaheim are finding a ready market with home buyers who recognize the quality of Cunningham Co. built homes, reveals Charlie Sanders, sales manager of the 3 and 4-bedroom, 2-bath homes.

According to the Walker & Lee, Inc., spokesman, the development maintains the high standards set by previous Stratford homes in the Southland, with spaciousness, built-in appliances, extraordinary attention to details and top construction materials and craftsmanship.

Imported hardwood Saker is used extensively throughout the homes which are equipped with built-in dressing tables and bookcases in some models, luxury-size bathroom mirrors, paneled fireplace walls, built-in clocks and door chimes and many more "extras."

PRUDENTIAL HOMES in Anaheim Estates

"BADE, THAT THERE'S WHAT I CALL A SOUND FOUNDATION," observed Paul Bunyan to his faithful Blue Ox. "See them mudsills, girders, joists an' posts? Been settin' there 25 years in damp an' dark, an' not a trace of rot or termites anywhere. Sound as the day they was cut... BADE, sure as your true blue, that's BAXCO Pressure Treated Foundation Lumber."*

*Yes, Paul, and the protection which has been built-in with BAXCO Chemically Preserved pressure treated lumber in the foundations of conventional wood floor homes for the past twenty-five years is now being adapted to the new type slab foundation home. Subterranean termites entering through cracks in concrete slabs are almost impossible to locate before excessive damage has occurred. The critical and costly wood members to repair are the inaccessible sills, wall studs and plates.

Home owners are finding it far less costly to pressure treat concealed sills, studs and plates with preservative chemicals before installation than to tear walls open to replace termite damaged wood afterwards. Why take a chance when it only costs 18 to 21 cents to pressure treat a two by four stud.

And many termites are building houses in which all structural framing lumber, including the wall studs, roof rafters and sheathing in addition to the foundation lumber, is pressure treated to eliminate the costly maintenance caused more and more by dry wood termites—the kind that fly into the upper portions of buildings and do their devastating work wherever they find wood.

See your lumber dealer for more complete information.

Estates Appeal to Families

Stimulating widespread interest and attracting crowds to the Sunny Hills area of Fullerton is Signature Estates' display of furnished larger homes. It was reported by company officials.

BRIGHT KITCHEN
This view in furnished model home typifies the display at Signature Estates in Fullerton on Highland Ave. just east of Richman Ave. off the Santa Ana Freeway. Hours are 10 a. m. to 8 p. m. daily and Sunday.

Care-Free Kitchen Big Attraction

Thousands of home seekers who already have previewed the 1957 Prudential Homes in East Anaheim have strongly approved 7 new models and the Care-Free Kitchen exhibit being shown, according to M. D. Mitchell, general manager for the builder-developers.

Individuality of ideas is the keynote. All homes are different, yet each features its own Care-Free Kitchen, custom fitted to the floor plan.

This extraordinary kitchen with finger-tip design is the product of much detailed study and scientific research as applied to best achieve well planned convenience. The three basic elements—range, sink, and refrigerator, are positioned in a triangle with a minimum of 20 feet around the outside.

IT IS PLANNED to incorporate 5 activity centers, including planning, preparation, cooking, baking, and storage. In the baking section the electric mixer, platform, mixing bowl, compartment, cake mix-flour-sugar storage, and cutting board, are all located within finger-tip reach of each other and adjacent to the refrigerator which would contain the necessary perishables such as milk, eggs, butter, etc. The other four work centers are similarly organized with a place for everything and everything is in its place.

It boasts a built-in 1957 Tappan oven and range in a choice of colors, double sink with Waste King Pulverator, optional Waste King dishwasher, Modern range hood with exhaust fan, and mahogany cabinets. To see the 1957 Prudential Homes' models take Carson through Lincoln and Center to Placentia, then turn left to La Palma, and right to the entranceway.

The traditionally styled residences are equipped with all-electric kitchens and are conventionally built to appeal to families with net monthly incomes of $600 or more. It was stated by Jerry Snyder and Max Levine, who head Signature Homes.

Boosting interest of families seeking homes in a prestige neighborhood, they pointed out, is the location of the residences in an area of homes valued from $30,000 to $50,000, while the Signature Estates' dwellings are selling from $22,050.

JAMES H. WATERS, sales manager, said the display of model homes is now open daily, on Highland Ave., just east of Richman Ave., from 10 a. m. until 8 p. m.

Signature Estates, he noted, is a completely planned community of winding streets with each home situated on an individually terraced homestead, many of which are 80 feet wide.

Terms for vets are from $460 down, plus costs and impounds. Non-vets choose between low FHA terms and conventional financing with monthly payments from $93.98, principal and interest.

The homes have three bedrooms and family room or four bedrooms and two baths. Features include wood-burning fireplaces of flagstone, Texas white stone and used brick.

CARE-FREE KITCHEN
Illustration demonstrates one of the many advantages offered by this new kitchen design—a place for everything and everything in place. Every 1957 Prudential Home will have the Care-Free Kitchen.

Realtors Say Older Homes Now Appeal

Easier to finance in some cases and frequently offering more convenient living, the existing home is growing in buyer appeal, L. A. Martin, president of the Long Beach Board of Realtors declares. He cited both area and national market experience in support of his assertion of the growing popularity of older houses.

"According to the latest research reports of our National Association of Real Estate Boards," Martin said, "increasing numbers of families throughout the nation are turning to the purchase of existing homes in good condition. They have been attracted frequently to homes in the suburbs, but well-maintained units located close in have also been selling well."

"A PART of the demand for older existing homes is unquestionably explained by their lower price range compared to many new houses," Martin explained. "But in addition, two new factors have been brought into prominence by recent developments."

The first of these is the current condition of the mortgage loan market. As is generally known, mortgage loans at low interest rates are hard to arrange. Because of this, there has been a marked drop in the number of mortgages insured by the FHA or guaranteed by the VA. At present, such government-backed loans carry 4 1/2 per cent interest, and many lenders prefer making loans returning more interest. In this situation, increasing numbers of home buyers have bought existing houses and assumed their mortgages which were consummated years ago at low interest rates.

"The second factor working to the advantage of the existing house as a good buy in today's market," the Realtors' executive declared, "is what might be called its superior living conveniences. By that I mean the sum total of the advantages enjoyed by a person who buys into an established community."

Wins Recognition for Heavy Sales.

Ernest W. Schmidt, Long Beach, zone manager for Investors Diversified Services, Inc., investment management corporation, has received national recognition for record sales during November 1956 of the mutual fund shares issued by its four affiliated open-end investment companies, Joseph M. Fitzsimmons, IDS president, announced.

In addition to an award for customer service achievement, Schmidt won membership in the President's Club, an annual honor roll of the company's leading sales representative.

Grady Clark, IDS vice president-sales, stated that the awards reflected the results of a record year during which total gross sales of securities distributed by the company increased by 17.8 per cent to an all-time high of more than $4 hundred million.

Club Honors to Student

The Long Beach Chapter of the National Office Management Association will honor the city's "High School Business Student of the Year" at a dinner meeting Tuesday.

Airlines Show Business Gain

WASHINGTON—Airline business transactions through the Airlines Clearing House were up 16.7 per cent in January 1957, compared with the same month in 1956.

Big Demand for New Tietz Home

In Garden Grove, Lancaster and Riverside, prospective homeowners tour models of Skylark Terrace homes, keeping sales in all three of the Southern California locations at the high level set by previous units. Such enthusiasm results, believes Bill Tietz, president of Tietz Construction Co., builders and developers, from the spaciousness of the homes and lots as well as the many built-in features.

All-electric efficiency kitchens are equipped with built-in range and oven, automatic dishwasher, ventilating fan, disposal unit and family size breakfast bar. Natural birch cabinetry features the kitchen which opens to family rooms in all the homes, which also have 3 or 4 bedrooms and 2 or 3 baths.

Provincial architecture with brick trim exteriors and heavy shake or crushed rock roofs. Genuine lath and plaster, Pullman lavatories, electric bath heaters, and etched glass stall shower doors, and tile surfaces are more qualities of the dwellings.

Priced from $18,000, Skylark Terrace homes in all three locations are being purchased by both veterans and non-veterans. Close to schools, shopping centers, churches, major transportation and recreational areas, the homes are praised for their easy accessibility.

In Garden Grove, visitors drive out 7th St. (Garden Grove Blvd.) from Long Beach, turn north on Brookhurst and continue to the models.

LOTS HAVE frontages up to 85 feet and are big enough to easily accommodate play courts, such as badminton, playgrounds, gardens, barbecues and patios, as well as swimming pools, the latter available to buyers as optional equipment installed during construction of the homes.

Massive focal points in the living rooms are used brick or sandstone fireplaces with raised hearths. Sliding glass "lanai" walls open onto patio areas, and there is an abundance of closet and cabinet space. Buyers have a choice of Contemporary or

Hugh O'Brian, Alias Wyatt Earp, Becomes an Industry

By CHARLES MERCER

NEW YORK (AP) — A year ago Hugh O'Brian was a young man with a horse and a couple of guns. Today, still a young man, he's an industry.

This is thanks in part to a frontier marshal named Wyatt Earp. It's even more thanks to the way O'Brian has played the role of Wyatt Earp on ABC-TV. Popular as Earp is with adult and young viewers, O'Brian is beginning to transcend the character he plays—which is smart business for O'Brian as well as Earp.

"Doing two films shows a week for six months is a tough grind," O'Brian said the other day. "But it does leave me six months to get out and meet people."

HE'S CERTAINLY been doing that recently. Personal appearance tours have been taking him to many cities. Three weeks ago he was found singing on the Ed Sullivan show (CBS-TV). "Playhouse 90" (CBS-TV) has seen him playing a heavy dramatic role in "Invitation to a Gunfight." He is being sought for a movie to be filmed in Europe. There even comes word from Washington that he has accepted chairmanship of the National Rifle Assn. Firearms safety program.

Now, says O'Brian, he has formed his own western variety show which will play theaters in many cities. The tour will be managed by Col. Tom Parker, who also manages Elvis Presley. "I want to reach people in their own towns," O'Brian said. "I want to shake their hands and say hello. I don't think any performer can overestimate the importance of getting around and meeting people. I remember when I was a high school kid in Winnetka, Ill. Dorothy Lamour came to the neighborhood theater and I shook her hand—and I never forgot her."

HUGH O'BRIAN Likes People

EMPHASIZING that he loves show business, O'Brian says, "but I think it should be approached as a business. I made up my mind in the beginning that if I couldn't make a living at it then it would at least be an avocation. It seems to me that every successful actor has to approach his job as a business."

"Anybody who sets out to be only a star is going to end up being only naive. To be successful you have to have good management. Anyone who succeeds almost invariably does because he has fine people working for him. That's why I've tried to surround myself with good people who give intelligent advice."

A bachelor, a non-smoker and almost a teetotaler, O'Brian lives modestly and works hard—seemingly all the time. A native of Rochester, N. Y., he grew up in Chicago, Lancaster, Pa., and Evanston and Winnetka, Ill. He left the University of Cincinnati in his sophomore year to enlist in the Marine Corps during World War II.

HE BECAME a drill instructor and was chosen by the Marines for entry to the Naval Academy at Annapolis. He failed the entrance examination but succeeded in obtaining acting roles in several little theater groups. His real acting training began at the Lobero Theatre in Santa Barbara, Calif., where he played roles in support of numerous stars. A movie contract followed and he appeared in 18 films before he was tapped for the television role of Wyatt Earp. In there any possibility of Wyatt Earp being made into a movie? "Not right away. Not for a while."

Van Doren, TV Quiz Whiz, to Go on Radio

NEW YORK (AP)—Charles Van Doren, the television quiz sensation, is going on the radio, too. But the pay will be a lot less than his TV earnings. So far the Columbia University English instructor has won $143,000 in the TV quiz show, "Twenty-One." He'll get $43 for a half hour on the first of a new series of the NBC radio program, "Conversation," which returns March 21.

He will take part in a discussion of "What Makes an Educated Man?" Other participants will be Dr. John Dickey, president of Dartmouth College, and Clifton Fadiman as master of ceremonies.

Homeless in Rain

JAKARTA (AP)—Some 62,000 persons Saturday were reported homeless near the port city of Sourabaya in East Java as a result of torrential rains which flooded a hundred villages.

Hard of Hearing?

Do you know that a great many people who have a hearing loss also have sinus trouble, catarrh or both? Many of these cases could have part or even all of their hearing loss restored; many who now have sinus trouble and no hearing loss may develop a hearing loss later on in life.

Many of our patients now listen to TV and Radio at volume that the family enjoys. Thanks in the new system now being used in all of the hospitals in California, many who have tried this proven method are overjoyed. Just like magic, in many cases, improvement is shown after the first treatment.

If you have a hearing loss no matter how slight or how bad, it may be due to sinus trouble or catarrh. Why not find out? Don't delay, we will give you the first treatment and our complete sinus and catarrh examination for the small sum of only $3.

We are one of the busiest offices in Southern California, so if we cannot help you, be assured that we will not take your case.

The total charge is only $3 for the first treatment and the examination, and if you are no improvement from the first treatment we do not want you back. This offer will be withdrawn in ten days.

Amplifier Improves TV Juliet

By JACK GAVER

NEW YORK (AP)—The differences between television and the stage were never more noticeable than on a couple of last week's big dramatic shows.

One case in point was the Old Vic Company's presentation of "Romeo and Juliet" in an NBC spectacular. Claire Bloom, who played Juliet, came off quite well on the TV screen. But in the theater, while looking the part properly enough, she is handicapped by a small speaking voice that makes it impossible to regard her as a first-rate Juliet. In TV, with its microphones, this lack isn't apparent.

PAUL ROGERS, who is the best of the Old Vic troupe, certainly did himself no harm as Mercutio on TV, but any who saw him do the role on the stage must regard the TV job as a pale performance. This was due not to so much to the drastic text cutting, which had to be done for television, but to the fact that the flamboyance of a proper stage performance for a role such as Mercutio has to be toned down drastically for the screen. The "Queen Mab Speech," for example, suffered the loss of most of its quality as Rogers uttered it for NBC.

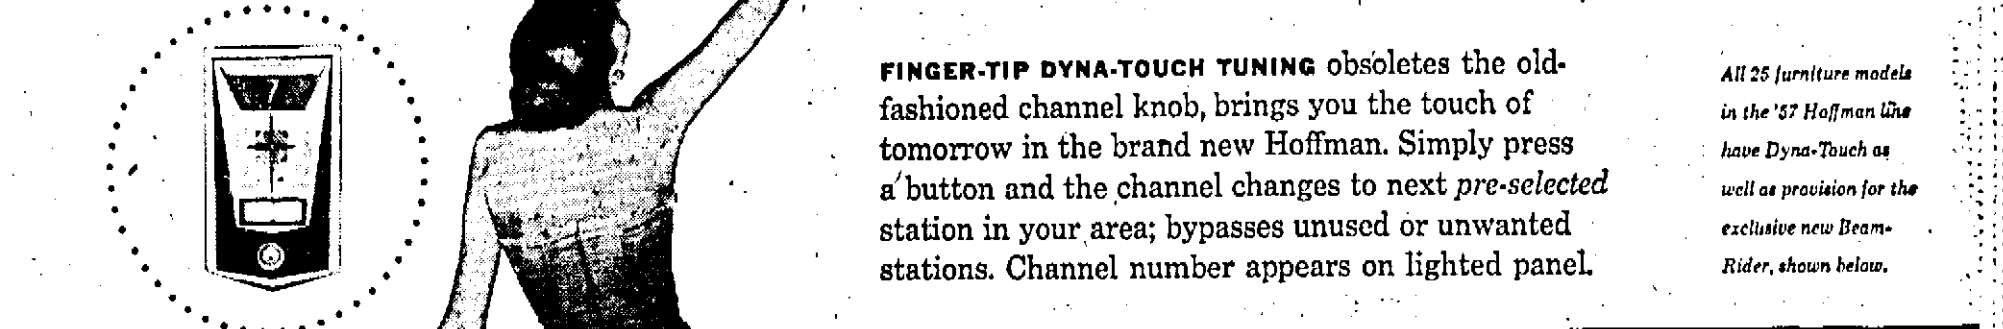

And so bewildered was the role of the nurse in the TV version that it might well have been played by the most lowly understudy instead of by Wynne Clark, whose performance on stage makes it an unforgettable interpretation.

THE OTHER case in point involved Reginald Rose's courtroom drama, "The Defender," which has spread across two Monday nights on the CBS "Studio One."

Now the stage has been famous for its courtroom dramas over a long period of years, and it has seen some sticky stuff in this line, as well as an occasional good one. But the sort of deplorable that Rose attempted to get away with on TV in the final episode last Monday was a throwback to the Sammy Shipman school of stage mellers of some 30 years ago — and it's just possible that even Shipman in his heyday would have scorned this particular gimmick.

We Live in the Sun, Swim in the Surf - - -

cabana sets—trunks and matching skirts designed by Gantner and called "Yachtsman Wikes"; a junior figure swimsuit by Maurice Handler draped for the ultimate in figure flattery; a Catalina knit in multi-colored stripes for a real figure-shaper with matching beach-towel featuring a California hand print design, and again, for the men, Gantner's "Makaha Wikes." These new flat-fronted, calflength swimming pants were originally designed in the Hawaiian Islands to protect surf-riders from body bruises. Now enthusiastically indorsed by Californians, they promise to become more popular.

We Like Informality in Our Homes - - -

BECAUSE TODAY'S modern Californians demand the ultimate in smart styling in both their apparel and furniture, we are picturing an informal setting in redwood and canvas sun sled and companion chair, left. Both are by John Hancock Mfg. Co. Pictured at right is metal dining room furniture made by pioneer developer Virtue Bros. Black metal accented in brass and handsome, practical plastics are combined to offer the ultimate in beauty and utility.—(Photos courtesy of Furniture Mfg. Assn. of California.)

'California Living'—a Way of Life

By MARY LOU ZEHRM
Independent Press-Telegram
Women's Editor

"A way of life." How many times we say or read this expression. And just as many times we conjure in our minds "our way of life"—our life here in Southern California. It's California Living! Two magic-sounding words that paint a picture, tell a story, and describe a way of life fast spreading throughout the rest of the nation.

It is leisure living in the midst of a year-round vacation land that reflects a way of life happily realized by people everywhere through the genius of California designers and manufacturers. Informality in our living pattern has been a very natural and a very easy idea for us to accept. Informality also has served as the common denominator for a number of basic style-conscious California industries—apparel, furniture, giftware, architecture and construction.

Thus it is that today, in cooperation with the California Retailers and Manufacturers Committee, the California Fashion Creators, and Men's Apparel Guild in California, we give a hearty salute to our way of life, for beginning Monday is the state-wide observance of "Salute to California Living Week."

Our state has been the launching area for many of the best fashions to be adopted by women, men and boys all over the United States. And the 300 million dollar a year furniture manufacturing industry plays a major role nationally in furthering the "California look" in our homes. It is in recognition of the steadily-growing importance of fashions, furniture and their sister California industries that the Salute to California Living is being conducted next week in communities throughout the Golden State.

On the California fashion horizon for Spring and Summer we see a number of trends, each reflecting in some way the California way of life.

They call it "casual" this West Coast way of living and way of dressing. Casual is the word for the shirtmaker dress, a fashion classic that has become a stronger than ever style for the coming season. But California designers have robbed the shirtwaist of its monotony. Known for adding fun to the functional, and elegance to the ordinary, designers of the California shirt

Our California Designers Create a Casual Elegance in Costumes

THE ELEGANT CASUALNESS achieved by our own West Coast designers in their clothes for women cannot be duplicated—for they may be worn 'round the world or right here at home with equal aplomb.

The Cocoon Look is one version of the important cape trend in Spring fashion, as interpreted by California Girl (left). Under the jacket which is lined in a silk rose print is a bloused back sheath. It is made of Montego linen. "Three on a Match" . . . sweater, skirt and stole by Lee Herman of California, is tailored in white wool jersey with inset bands of knit ribbing outlining a pattern of tiny rhinestones. Next is an indispensable imported French woven check cotton suit, a highlight in De De Johnson's Spring collection. "On the Go" is the slim line coat by Young Set of California.

The Wild Waves Say

By IOLA MASTERSON

SHAKE, rattle and roll! Know that song? If you've lived here long enough you helped write the lyrics with Mother Nature improvising on the melody. Just 24 years ago today, Man, what crazy rhythm!

That was March 10, 1933. It had been an unusually warm day, a copper sun glinting through haze. Oppressive, like a storm was brewing. Later everybody called it "earthquake weather" and many believed it had a lot to do with sending Long Beach sprawling.

To prove that memory is as strong as the shake itself we called around at random for some flashback recollections. Where were you on March 10, 1933? What were you doing at 5:55 p.m.?

MARGE AND AL Davis were newlyweds and Marge was cooking her very first dinner in their home at 3734 Corliss. She was hopelessly removing a meat loaf from the oven. Never has been able to convince her children it wasn't that meat loaf hitting the floor like a rock that did all the damage!

Al stands by Marge, though. After the first excitement died down he came back in the house, brushed crockery out of the food on the floor and made a sandwich. "Very good," he said. Must have been. They've lived happily ever since.

IT WAS POLLY CHACE's birthday. Burton, her mother, sister and highchair-sized Coni were having dinner at the Villa Riviera. "A terrible rumbling, like heavy machinery lumbering up Ocean Blvd.," Polly recalls. They managed to reach the street in time to see buildings collapsing everywhere. Enough of that—head for home, a tediously long trip that night.

Once home, to reassure Coni, they pretended nothing was very unusual and to prove it took Polly's birthday cake out to the parkway, burned the candles as is customary, and ate it!

WHEN THE EARTH signaled "Tilt!" Dorothy Brady (nee Lewis) decided it was time to be somewhere else. So with teenage realism she did the sensible thing and fainted—right in front of the china cabinet (accounting for some nasty scratches!).

MARK TAYLOR WAS on the sidewalk near 8th and Pine where he had a panoramic view of the P. T.'s huge water tank taking a nose dive and the Y's cornice breaking loose.

They were judged and they weren't found wanting! Not Long Beach's gang of Kiwanians and wives on Southern Pacific's gay, Marlin Gray "Fun Tour" chartered train to New Orleans.

Just read this and cheer! The tour had its own Marlin Gray celebration and costume party en route and three of the four major prizes given were won by Long Beachers. Henrietta Tallant, what a more, was chosen "Queen" of the train, an honor that carries with it a complimentary trip on the "Fun Tour" next year, we understand. Husband Frank won "most original" man's costume honors.

Wait Jordan placed first in the "most handsome" man's costume judging and Henrietta and Dr. Les Watson won the top "couple's costume" prize for the entire train (people on it from all over the Southwest!). The gang arrived home yesterday afternoon, tired but triumphant.

However, the real reason he remembers March 10 is because the very next day he and Neil drove to Riverside to get their marriage license which they needed for an altar date early in April.

ART HOLTZ AND Stan Martin were playing their usual desultory game of squash on the Pacific Coast Club's basement courts, neither one trying to kid the other about any Olympic ambitions. But when that quake hit every Olympiad Judge who ever lived would have given them gold medals for speed and spirit in the Gazelle Leap event as they hurled cellar equipment and debris. What's more, each carried a precious "handicap weight" picked up in the midst of turmoil. Ask them. Better still, ask wives May or Marian. Then you'll hear the truth!

GRACE (THEN CRAWFORD) Bixby was cooking dinner. A self-styled scaredy cat she was adrenalinized with courage; calmly turned the stove off, picked up the bird cage and walked, unruffled, to safety. Must have been SOME adrenalin! It was three days before she discovered her back was a mass of black and blue where she had been really bumped by something heavy and determined!

Ever tell you about our experience that day? Saaway, that's quite a story. You see we—

SOMETIMES you get to feeling out of this world before you're ready to go. Not that Emily and Don Gilroy didn't want to move into their new home in Park Estates but, you know how it is.

Anyhow, they miss the old neighborhood gang so they're having a "We're Lonesome" cocktail buffet party tonight for former chums out on California Ave. in Bixby Knolls.

What's more they want to introduce their La Verla St. manse to such north-enders as Cal and Rod Strong, Dorothy and Joe Mul-larky, Edna and Bill Abrams, Virginia and Roy Crager and Willa Mae and Bill Murrell.

Others planning to get acquainted at 8 tonight are Garnette and George Hedley, Marjorie and Pres Johnson, Joyce and Bert Paul, Marilyn and Bill Osborn, Barbara and Bob Ivey, Gertie and Noel Guertin, Frances and Ray Parker and Lorin and Georgia Nelson.

To prove that their new section of town boasts savor fare, too, they're having that Polish chef with the continental touch, Conrad Bomba, in to prepare the dinner. By the way, if there are any leftovers—Why, thank you, Emily! Tomorrow night will be wonderful!

THERE WAS PLENTY of "wild" in Whisenand Monday when Mary and "Red" learned they had another grandchild! Daughter Jenn and husband, Dr. Richard Smith, wired the good news from Minneapolis that their fifth was a daughter, Claudia Jane.

FRIDAY NIGHT you should have seen the face Chuck Chandler shaves every day. He wouldn't have recognized it either in its incredulous condition! Camilla and Jim La Greys had a surprise birthday party for the guy at their home, 3954 Walnut Ave.—first surprise he'd ever had. First surprise PARTY, that is!

There for cocktails, and midnight buffet were Hilda and Francis Gohar, Crystal and Nile Bunch, Mary Edna and Floyd Williams, Lolita and Vernon Monk, Madeleine and Bob Burroughs and Vi and Ed Standler.

BARBARA GIMBEL arrived in town Wednesday afternoon from home in New York for a visit with her parents, Eva and Clair Poulson, and sister Betty Wentworth. First trip to the West Coast in a year, she planned this "extra" week for family and old friends fun before husband Bruce arrives this coming week to join in as much of the jollity as time will allow.

Chiffon type sheers that float, plus jewelling on buttons and cufflinks are two more reasons for donning the shirtwaist after dark. Cardigan sweaters are dyed to match shirtwaist colors, are lined in the identical fabric... such as shadow plaids and woven stripes, for Spring's look of airy femininity.

Further reflections of California living in fashion are the double life of California coordinates, those multiple separates designed with an indoor-outdoor theme. Skirts, blouses and jackets that peel to reveal brief shorts, mid-riffs and even swimsuits are mated in color and fabric to achieve a well-planned costume.

Ruffles! Laces! Bibs! Flounces!... tell us that it is a season for lady-like graces and girlish glances, directed at dresses, skirts and blouses lavished with these feminine furbelows. Even sportswear has adopted this sissy trend, with pant cuffs and pockets sporting froths of lace and eyelet, buttons and bows. When it comes to ruffles, it is the bib front of blouses and dresses that receive the major attention of designers, with anywhere from three rows to an entire front yoke detailed with these delicate "frotings."

Capes appear in every length, sweeping the floor in great folds of taffeta and silk over evening clothes... engulfing a suit or dress in street-length ensembles, elbow length capes topping sheath dresses... frequently with contrasting linings that can be reversed with outstanding, 2-color or print-and-solid effect. Suits reflect the cape influence with well seaming or flanges set in at cape level.

Many swimwear are designed with coats and jackets to match, some terry cloth lined for oceanside efficiency. Whatever the style or color, however, California swim designers are ever creating fashions to flatter, to function, and to keep the tradition of superior swimwear alive throughout the world.

Two of the newest California ideas in menswear to meet the popularity test are cabana sets—trunks and matching shirts—which are good for beach, pool, or just backyard sunning, the calf-length swimming pants for the ocean swimmer who likes to surf-ride or skin-dive.

Top designers like Catalina and Gantner make them in fabrics ranging from regimental stripes to madras plaids and varied prints. For men who do a lot of swimming—and there is no better way to keep cool during hot summer days—more than one pair of swim trunks is a must, and the cabana set makes a wonderful gift.

California furniture manufacturers are credited with basic improvements towards more comfortable, enjoyable living in homes everywhere. Designing lighterscaled furniture in keeping with the small homes dictated by high building costs, the use of bright colors to make homes more decorative and more cheerful, the popularity of dual-purpose furniture to give homemakers greater function in smaller space, and adding warmth of form and shape to modern furniture, are only a few of the important contributions our manufacturers have made to the nation.

Lady Be Good -- to You!

By ILKA CHASE

Necessities today have been almost annihilated by the price of our luxuries. Living in the simplest fashion, we are obliged to do a good deal of belt tightening if we want orchids on the budget. Yet vital though the rent and the children's schooling and the doctors' bills are, life gets bleak indeed if we can't occasionally indulge ourselves and buy something for no other reason than that we want it.

It shouldn't be a large thing — for most of us expensive luxuries are out of the question anyway — the overall percentage of yacht and stable owners is small, but fortunately pleasure and contentment and convenience out of all proportion to size and cost may derive from small items.

ONE LUXURY I have always felt strongly about is two newspapers at the breakfast table. Bread and cheese and kases are all very well in the evening, but in the prosaic morning light each of two individuals, even though bound in matrimony, has a perfect right to this news.

And speaking of the morning, even if most of the year you must devise budget meals which, with skill and care can be delicious, buy good tea and coffee. Hard liquor and champagne come high. Many people never drink champagne for years on end and Scotch or Bourbon only when they're giving a party, but difference in price between first-rate tea and coffee and a brand that's only fair is not vast. If we cannot manage them as daily luxuries, they should at least be frequent. The satisfaction is enormous. If cocktails, when it's just the family, rocket the bill too high, settle for an inexpensive wine. Settle for it in any event.

IN EUROPE, wine is an automatic accompaniment to food. Here it lends a festive air to the simplest family meal and possibly it's a blessing that it does seem to us a little daring and special.

One way to have the most talked about and heavily patronized dinner parties in town is to serve non-party food. A delicious stew or put roast with crusty French bread, a tossed green salad and a really good wine, instead of roast beef or quail washed down with antagonistic ice water.

Another item, a small thing, but how much it means to the guest in the house, is pants hangers. A few times in my life I have stayed in the luxuriously appointed homes of the rich. Beds turned down in the evening, my laundry whisked away, a rose on the breakfast tray — no pants hangers. No skirt hangers, either. Man can get on without the latter, but these days what with shorts and slacks so prevalent in the country a woman is as hard put to it as her husband when the hostess forgets. If there's anything that looks ridiculous and gives one a feeling of inferiority, it's that slightly crinkled look around the knees of otherwise well-groomed visiting couples. A dead give-away if ever there was one.

Of the hostess who supplies wire hangers and lets it go at that we will not even speak. Better for a man to revert to the old dodge of the traveling salesman and sleep with his trousers under the mattress than to entrust them to those inventions of the devil.

One or two big bath sheets for the man of the house. Not astronomical in price, but enough to make a fellow feel a real sybarite, set him up for the day as he steps from the shower and envelops himself in a toga.

IF YOU live in the city, treat yourself to a bouquet of the very first daffodils, the very first lilacs.

When traveling unexpectedly, permit yourself the luxury of wiring ahead for reservations. To think, "Oh, well, I'll save that expense," is often to end up in a cab at far greater cost, shuttling from one hotel to another trying to find accommodations.

If you're arriving at an airport late at night with luggage and can arrange for a rented car to meet you, it's a godsend not to have to cope with relays of porters, limousines and taxis. You save an awful lot of wear and tear on yourself and the difference in price, when you're tired or busy, is worth it.

Everyone will have his own special treats, little luxuries that appeal to him most. Fortunately, we don't have to be millionaires to afford now and then these small bouquets along the way.

SCOUTS, ALL

Although originally from different countries, the common bond of Girl Scouting has drawn these women together in Long Beach. Members of the International Patrol they are, from left, Mmes. Winnie Blackburn, England; America Wieland, Brazil; Nona Minton, China; Hetty Smith, England; and Peggy Janzen, India. They will play an active part during Girl Scout week, today through Saturday. All are American citizens.—(Staff Photo.)

Patrol Woven of International Threads

If anyone can interpret the Girl Scout program abroad, women residing here who have been Scouts in other countries can.

Long Beach Council of Girl Scouts has several such interesting women: They are now members of the International Patrol, and a busier group is hard to imagine, especially during the ensuing week, Girl Scout Week.

They convene monthly in each other's homes for a dinner meeting. Between times they attend council and troop meetings, gatherings and various other Scout functions, telling the girls and their leaders about their native countries and Scouting there.

Backgrounds of those International Scouts pictured today reveal how such a troop is capable of furthering international understanding and cementing friendships between Scouts here and abroad.

A White Russian, Nona Minton was a Girl Scout in Harbin, Manchuria. In her troop were White Russians, Manchurians and Chinese. After World War II she worked in a hospital in San Francisco. She is the wife of Lt. Cmdr. (USN, Ret) Eldon V. Minton, 6213 Peabody St.

Born in Brazil of a German mother and Austrian father, America Wieland received her unusual given name from her grateful mother who had treasured memories of this country before she and her husband moved to Austria and later South America.

The 17th of 19 children, America is herself the mother of two sons and a daughter, Margaret Golding, who is also a member of the International Patrol.

America has made two trips to Brazil to visit her brothers and sisters and has a wealth of color slides of the country. With her husband, John, she resides at 12828 Airport St., Downey.

Brixton Hill, Eng. was home to Hetty Smith until she came to the United States six years ago. She was active with the Girl Guides in England. Her home is now at 2844 Baltic Ave.

For seven years her sister, Winnie Blackburn, has been leader of Girl Scout Troop 225 in addition to her International Patrol activities. Winnie and her husband, Chester, met each other during the war when he was with the US chemical warfare services stationed in England. With their two sons they live at 2800 Baltic Ave., near Hetty and her daughter.

One of the most active members of the patrol is exotic Sita (Peggy) Janzen who was married in Calcutta, India to C. E. Janzen, then with the Air Force. Now the parents of three children, they reside at 4538 Coldbrook Ave. She has been a patrol member for two years and had been a Girl Guide in India. Her other Scout activities include being a Cub Scout den mother, Brownie troop leader, Girl Scout troop leader and Scout neighborhood chairman.

Other members of the International Patrol and their countries are Tamara Snodgrass Armenia; Kay Wright, England; Elizabeth Debronec, Belgium; Blanche Slinger, England and Ruth Adams, United States.

The patrol was started in 1931 by Laurie Raynal, an Australian girl making her home in Long Beach. She had previously formed such a patrol in Washington, D.C. and since her move to Seattle has begun a patrol there.

The International theme prevailed at a recent meeting of Long Beach Girl Scout Council in the Lafayette Hotel when Kathleen Cartwright, director of camping for Pasadena Council, showed color slides taken in Brazil when she was a Girl Scout exchange - counselor for eight weeks.

School Students to Hear Philharmonic Orchestra

ANTICIPATING the appearance of the Los Angeles Philharmonic Orchestra in a special program geared to the student listener Thursday at Polytechnic High School auditorium, an extensive program is being carried on to acquaint youngsters with the numbers they will hear. At left, Joanne Hamand and Bill Bachman listen to a preparatory broadcast of concert excerpts over the Long Beach school system's FM radio station. Roosevelt students in the picture above, from left, John Avery, Sandra Hankins, Peter Schneck and Maryann Solavik, demonstrate pictorially their impressions of the music heard. Another of the concert numbers wins visual expression through the drawing of Norman Thompson.

Symphony Concert Set at Poly Auditorium Thursday

An unusual musical opportunity will be offered students within the Long Beach Unified School District Thursday when the Los Angeles Philharmonic Orchestra, under the baton of Peter John Barnett, associate conductor, presents a symphony concert at Polytechnic High School auditorium.

In the audience for the first half of the concert, which is geared to the student listener, will be students selected from the fifth and sixth grade classes at Edison, Webster, Field, Burbank, Birney, Burroughs, Lincoln, Whittier, Muir, Lafayette, Barton, Burnett, Stevenson, Longfellow, Los Cerritos, Signal Hill and Garfield Elementary Schools.

Comprising the audience for the concert's second half will be junior high school students from Washington, Hughes, Franklin, Hoover and Stephens Schools, as well as Polytechnic High School.

Selection of students to attend the "live" concert is based upon interest in music, but the entire student bodies of each school will have an opportunity to hear the concert in its entirety when it is rebroadcast Friday, March 22, over the school system's FM radio station KLOK to elementary schools, and on March 29 to junior and senior high schools.

In an effort to acquaint the students with the music they will be hearing at the concert, preparatory lessons have been presented over KLOK, and are being used in connection with program notes prepared by Miss Mary Shouse, supervisor of music, and Miss Alice Gallup, assistant supervisor of music. The notes give insight into the lives of the composers to be featured in the concert, as well as their style of composing.

Each "live" concert will be about 45 minutes in length, and students will be transported to the Polytechnic auditorium via school bus.

Because of limited seating, the annual concerts take place at a different high school each year, with the audience drawn from elementary and junior high schools in that particular area.

Worry Clinic

Love at 'First Sight' Is Dangerous and Illogical

By DR. GEORGE W. CRANE

Case U-324: Ernest J., 17, is a high school senior. "Dr. Crane, you have told us that people can fall in love two ways," he began. "One is by love at first sight while the other is by earned love through shared happiness on many dates."

"Well, I wonder which method is better?" "I fell in love at first sight with a cigarette girl at a night club in my city. I'm crazy about her and can't study. She wants me to elope with her and I feel like doing so. But I know my parents want me to go on to college. What should I do?"

LOVE AT FIRST sight is the more dangerous type, for it can strike you before you even get acquainted with the object of your sudden ardor. In the "earned" love affair, however, you have plenty of time to learn each other's personality and see how well you harmonize. You meet the girl's parents and friends. You hear about her likes and dislikes, her hobbies and social attitudes, for you go on many dates over a period of possibly several years.

Then this common mass of happy experiences and memories serves much as a joint checking account of spiritual values. It tends to weld unmarried couples together much as children help cement the bonds of love and devotion between parents.

However, not all cases of love at first sight prove disastrous. If you meet a girl in a church group and then fall in love at first sight, the odds are better than if you fall in love with a bar maid.

When I was 16 years old, I was elected president of the Young People's Society at the Wayne Street Church in Fort Wayne, Ind. But before the actual casting of ballots, the various nominees for office were asked to stand and take a bow so the voters could see them.

Four vice presidents were nominated. And when the 4th vice president stood up, I took one look at her and my heart did a complete flip-flop, or so it felt. And to this day my heart has never got back to its original position.

FOR THE GIRL being nominated had such a charming smile and irradiated such an attractive personality, that I fell in love at first sight. So I can sympathize by personal experience with Ernest and all the rest of you who are smitten instantly by Cupid, without even being given a chance to develop an "earned" love affair.

That girl later became my wife, but not for 11 years, for

I went on to college and graduate school. Meanwhile, I dated other girls and developed several romances of the "earned" love variety.

But the magic spell of that original sudden romance still held, and has persisted for 40 years. But suppose I had fallen in love at first sight with an unscrupulous girl of an immoral nature and generally a poor prospect for rearing children. Then I would have had to battle this spell as an evil influence. Many of you readers right now are smitten by love at first sight, and may sometimes realize that you must break the spell, since logic demands that you do so.

Be reassured that you can do so and that love will rise anew if you go through the proper romantic motions with a desirable member of the opposite sex.

Send for my "Tests for Husbands & Wives." Use them to shatter unwise infatuations.

Please enclose a long, 3 cent stamped self-addressed envelope and 20 cents in requesting a Dr. Crane Bulletin. Address: Dr. George W. Crane, in care of Hopkins Syndicate, Melott, Ind.

This feature appears Tuesdays and Thursdays in the Independent.

Our Children

Patterns of Growth Don't Progress at Steady Rate

By ANGELO PATRI

One difficulty parents and teachers may have in their efforts to teach children is caused by a lack of understanding of the way children grow. A mother teaches a small child proper toilet ways. Good. Now she thinks she is all set. Comes the morning when she finds she is upset. "Now why did he do this?" she asks. "He knew what to do. He's a naughty, disobedient, troublesome child."

Don't you believe it. Her son is a child, and children grow unevenly. They grow a couple of steps ahead, then back they go a step. I don't know why—they just do. It will not take as long to train the child again as it took at the start but he has to be trained once more—and patiently, please, or the state will be worse in the end than at the beginning.

A child progresses in a subject rapidly, and his teacher and parents are highly pleased with him. "One hurdle over," they sigh with content. Don't be so sure. There comes a day when this usually eager, active, brilliant pupil puts an elbow on his desk, holds his head on his hand, yawns openly, and fails to do the work he always did so well. "He's getting into a bad habit. He's spoiled. He's lazy. Maybe he is sick?"

No. He more likely is following the pattern of his growth. First he grows fast, climbing the hill of learning speedily. Then his brain cells and the intelligence that dwells in them say, "Let's stop here on this nice, level plateau and rest a while before we go up further," and they do. What the pupil needs here is review, an easy period of looking back over the road just traveled before starting up again. This is the way all learners learn, and it is the way the teachers must recognize.

At times, parents are discouraged with the results of their teaching. "I've told him a thousand times to take his hat off when he comes into the house, to shut a door softly, to keep his voice inside the room, to behave like a human being. Does he? I might as well talk to the wind!"

Don't believe it. The next-door neighbor will meet you one morning with, "Tell me how you managed to make a young gentleman out of Lester? My boy still is behaving like a savage. What's your recipe?" You'll blush with the warmth of your pleasure. Much growth is hidden while taking root, and in time it rises to the surface, into action. That's the way children grow. Consider them in this light, and hold the faith.

Reading stimulates thinking, develops character and affects behavior. Every child will benefit by reading good books. Dr. Patri has made a list of more than 50 books for children in leaflet P-8, "A Book List." To obtain a copy, send 10 cents in coin to him, P. O. Box 99, Station G, New York 19, N. Y. # GOP'ers Circle Special Dates

Tuesday and Wednesday are red letter days for the busy Long Beach Council of Republican Women, with members gathering for business meetings and attending special political sessions.

Mrs. J. R. Grizzle will preside at the 11:30 a. m. meeting Tuesday in the Pageant Room at Wilton Hotel. Following the noon coffee hour, the group will re-convene to hear Dr. Robert G. Neumann, UCLA associate professor of political science.

Dr. Neumann will interpret his personal observations of recent events in the Middle East. Club members heard a talk by the educator in January just before he left on his field trip to the troubled area.

The next day, Wednesday, many club members are expected to register for the California School of Politics, an annual meeting taking place this year at Anaheim's Disneyland Hotel. Morning sessions will begin at 10, and Dr. Neumann will continue his discussions of vital Middle East problems at the noon luncheon. Workshop divisions will take up problems of club structure, mechanics of meetings and program planning.

Mrs. R. G. Kenyon of San Marino, president of California Federation of Republican Women, has announced a special speaker of particular interest to GOP women, Mrs. William F. Burdick of Washington, D. C. She is president of League of Republican Women, en, District of Columbia, and program chairman of the National Federation of Republican Women.

Mrs. Logan H. Goodnight and Mrs. Gladys O'Donnell will attend a board meeting at the Disneyland Hotel Tuesday evening, to which interested members are invited.

Reservations for the Wednesday luncheon may be made with Mrs. Elizabeth Canepa, 1141 Marine Dr., Laguna Beach.

Plan Benefit Card Party

May 1 is a date with top priority for members of the Women's Auxiliary of the Long Beach Pharmaceutical Assn., a day on which they will be hostesses for a smart card party at Virginia Country Club, proceeds to be used for the auxiliary's various philanthropies.

Mrs. Niles Huscher, chairman of the spring affair, announced tentative plans for the event at the group's March luncheon meeting at the Lafayette Hotel.

Hostesses for the luncheon were Mrs. J. E. Windsor, Charles Vermillion and G. Lueker. Using the St. Patrick's motif, tables were centered with green harps and shamrocks. Mrs. George Scheigner, president, conducted the business meeting and introduced guests of the day, Mrs. Edna Bracken, Mrs. Floyd Glass, of Twenty-nine Palms, and Mrs. Ruth Monahan, of Portland, Ore.

Guild Gives 'Silver Tea'

Traditional purple, gold and green, symbolic of the lenten season, were chosen for tea table decor at the annual Silver Tea for women and guests of St. Gregory's Episcopal Mission.

Altar Guild members hostessed the Tuesday afternoon event at the home of Mrs. Frank Morgan, 1909 Lave, Los Altos. Receiving guests were Mrs. Morgan, Mrs. Morgan, Arnold Gilson, Keith Moore, Harold Dutton, Thomas Carse, Roland Moore, Berta Campbell and Mabel Cook.

Dutch iris, daffodils, clusters of freesia blossoms and fresh green foliage arranged in an antique silver bowl formed the striking centerpiece at the tea table. Pouring were Mrs. Morgan, Cook, Carse, Gilson and Keith Moore.

Funds derived from voluntary silver contributions will be used toward altar furnishings.

LONG BEACH STATE COLLEGE EVENTS

by PLACER MINER

It's round-up time at Long Beach State College! Yup, Or Placer Miner is out to tag a few of those organizations whose names in our column have been conspicuous by their absence. They number a goodly portion of the clubs at LBSC, and since they don't come to us, we're trying to track 'em down.

Strangely enough, the first of these outfits which has been uncommunicative toward us is Alpha Phi Gamma, journalism honorary. We always thought good writers would, above all, communicate.

Alpha Phi Gamma has just added five new members to their rolls: April Rawlings, Claude Klug, Joyce Irwin, Clint Hopson and Margie Desmond. Looks like the old hands knew whom they were recruiting, for two of the initiates promptly distinguished themselves at the California Intercollegiate Press Association convention last week at Sacramento by taking top honors—April with a first in feature writing and Claude with a second in photography.

Another group at Long Beach State which strives for communication in its activities, but which hasn't practiced much of it in our direction, is the Forensics Club.

Made up of students majoring in speech and dedicated to fostering participation in speech activities, the club's impact is more noticeable away from home when its members represent—quite successfully, too—LBSC in competitions at other colleges. However, they have been busy, too, on the Forty-Niner scene.

Only last week, 11 junior colleges participated in the group's annual junior college speech tournament. This coming Friday, Forensics Club members join hands with their fellow students in the drama field, the Harlequins, to stage a drama-speech festival for high school students. The speech students are working on plans for the all-campus speech tournament which comes up in April.

On the lighter side, the group has frequent meetings "for fun," we are told. At these get-togethers there is one cardinal rule: no speeches.

"When the mountain won't come to Mohammed, Mohammed must go to the mountain," runs an old saying which came to our mind when we found out a little bit about the Ski Club, another newcomer to our column.

Realists to the core, the Ski Clubbers are branching out into water skiing. The reason (and a good one): no snow. Might even rent a boat, we are informed, and have the outings end up as beach parties.

The group will show movies next Wednesday when they have their meeting in Soroptomist House. Meanwhile, hopeful to the bitter end, they have contracted with the art department to make club emblems for their ski jackets.

What's the latest weather report, somebody?

Another busy group at Long Beach State College is the Psychology Club with about 30 active members. Reason for its success could be that the club uses a little psychology to stimulate attendance. Coming up in the next few weeks are a number of films.

"Angry Boy" gets the series going Tuesday, and following at two-week intervals are others dealing with rejection, hostility, depression and over dependency. With each showing, a member of the faculty will give a lecture, interpreting the film. Some of the movies will be during the day, and others at night so that all interested groups will be able to attend.

The Psychology Club is also toying with the idea of making an experimental movie. If it materializes, the subject will be color vision, and Dr. Roy Heinz of the college staff will render valuable assistance.

Although the LBSC bands aren't exactly strangers to us, we'd like to mention them in closing. Placer Miner accompanied the concert and dance bands to Orange Coast College last Wednesday when LBSC provided entertainment at that college's student assembly. Under the direction of Dr. Sanford Helm, the State musicians furnished 45 minutes of excellent entertainment and left their audience with an extremely satisfying impression of our college.

Reception for Goldenweds

Traveling from their new home in Las Vegas to be with family members and close friends, Mr. and Mrs. Roy Houssels Sr., former longtime local residents, were honored at an open house reception Sunday in celebration of their golden wedding anniversary.

The goldenweds' daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Hansel Albritton, hosted the festivities in their 1702 E. 63rd St. home. Assisting were the couple's two sons and daughters-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Roy E. Houssels Jr. of Long Beach and Mr. and Mrs. John H. Houssels of Reseda.

Married in Vernon, Tex., on March 3, 1907, Mr. and Mrs. Houssels resided in Long Beach for 35 years prior to their recent move to Nevada. They have a second daughter, Mrs. Jerry Curry, residing in Kansas.

Honoring the couple were Mrs. Norma Archer and Messrs. and Mrs. John Evans, Verle E. Steele and Linda A. L. Radke, Jack Evans and John Jimmie and Julie, Robert Stongstad, Richard A. Johansen, and the pair's three grandchildren, Diana, Nancy and Richard Albritton.

Soprano, Composer Due on Ebell Program of Music

Musical fare to be savored by Ebell of Long Beach following a luncheon Monday will be provided by attractive Sally Hazard, dramatic soprano, and Harper MacKay, pianist-composer.

Miss Hazard, who grew up in California, has studied on a scholarship with the world-famous diva, Lotta Lehman. After studying operatic technique under Carl Ebert, she appeared last year with the Guild Opera Company in two difficult and contrasting roles, the comic Clorinda in Rossini's "Cinderella" and the tragic Desdemona in the West Coast premiere of Menotti's "The Saint of Brecker Street." Now studying with Metropolitan tenor, Armand Tokatyn, she is increasing her repertoire to include all the great operatic soprano roles.

MacKay, who has concentrated extensively in California communities, began his musical study at 7 as a student at the New England Conservatory of Music. From USC he received both his master's and doctorate in music. He has composed symphonic and chamber works and has taught music theory at the Fine Arts Conservatory and USC.

After working as pianist and arranger on various radio and television shows, he has recently done considerable work in film studios.

Among his original musical novelties are "Musical Phone Numbers," "Caricatures in Music" and "364,000 Musical Questions." He toured the U.S. as musical director for international singing favorite Carl Brisson, and recently concluded a three-year engagement at the Huntington-Sheraton Hotel in Pasadena.

The musical artists will be presented by Mrs. James A. Worsham, program chairman; Group JE, headed by Mrs. L. G. Lachar, will serve luncheon. The meeting will be conducted by Mrs. L. E. Shanks, president.

PEO State Conclave Plans Formulated

Firm groundwork was laid for the 54th annual state convention of PEO when Mrs. A. E. Fox entertained at luncheon recently in her Three Arch Bay home in South Laguna.

The hostess is a past state president and will serve as advisor for the convention, slated for April 30, May 1 and 2 in the Lafayette Hotel.

Further details will be discussed at a workshop meeting March 13-14 at the Lafayette.

Mrs. J. Roscoe Howell of Long Beach heads the general convention committee. Others participating in the meeting in Mrs. Fox's home were Mrs. F. M. Taylor and Miss Edith McGill, Chapter G; Mrs. Ben Knight and Mrs. Louis Gunn, Chapter JM; Mrs. William L. Taylor and Mrs. Alexander Cameron, Chapter JX, and Mrs. Harold Morris, Chapter KJ.

All members of chapters in the state as well as unaffiliated PEO's living or visiting in the Long Beach area, may attend the sessions in the Lafayette grand ballroom. Visitors coming from out of town who are not official delegates will arrange their own housing.

Handling reservations for a banquet on the opening day are Mrs. Raymond J. Kirkpatrick and Mrs. Carol Scott.

The PEO Sisterhood was founded in 1869 at Iowa Wesleyan College, Mt. Pleasant, Iowa. Out of the original membership of seven college girls, the organization has become international, with chapters throughout the United States, in Canada, Alaska and the Hawaiian Islands. It is invitational, with a membership of more than 125,000 active members. Of the 422 chapters in California, 25 are located in Long Beach. State membership numbers approximately 16,000.

Purpose of the founders was the general improvement of womanhood, including spiritual growth, advancement of social relations and culture and philanthropic projects.

The philanthropy has evolved into three major educational endeavors. The Sisterhood maintains a revolving educational loan fund which has provided financial aid to more than 10,000 young women to complete their education.

An international peace scholarship program was established in 1949. Eight students from foreign countries are now attending U.S. colleges and schools with the aid of these scholarships.

Cotley Junior College for Women in Nevada, Mo., a fully accredited school, is owned and operated by the Sisterhood. All three projects are maintained through contributions from all the chapters. The California state chapter

Say Vows by Candlelight

A candlelight wedding service performed by the Rev. William Diehm of North Long Beach Christian Church united Miss Charlotte Virginia McNabb, daughter of Douglas McNabb of Twenty-Nine Palms, and Clifford L. Smith Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Clifford L. Smith Sr. of 108 W. Mountain View.

The bride wore a blue sheath dress with white accessories and a corsage of white orchids. Miss Barbara Brune was her attendant. Jack Thrasher served as best man.

At a post-nuptial reception in the bridegroom's home, the newly married couple greeted 30 close friends and relatives. The lace covered table was

Change of Duty Occasions Numerous Social Events in Service Set Circles

By VIRGINIA NEWTON

This week's chat in service circles featured much about informal parties, highlighted by welcomes and goodbyes in the cruiser set.

One of the nicest was the cocktail party at the home of Capt. and Mrs. Arthur Spring to bid farewell to Cmdr. and Mrs. W. J. Carey and to welcome the new executive officer of the U.S.S. Helena, Cmdr. Mark Hannah, who, with his charming wife, arrived here recently from Washington, D. C. Following the party, guests went aboard the Helena as the dinner guests of Capt. and Mrs. Spring.

Another farewell and welcome to the Careys and the Hannahs was a luncheon given by Cmdr. and Mrs. George Stroud.

Cmdr. and Mrs. Carey bade goodby to their many civilian and service friends here at a party at their home one evening recently. The affair also served to welcome Cmdr. and Mrs. Hannah to the U.S.S. Helena crew and also welcomed "aboard" Lt. Keven J. Keane, Chaplain, who is leaving the Naval Station for duty aboard the heavy cruiser.

In a few days the Careys, with their four children, will leave for new residence and duty in Washington, D. C., where Cmdr. Carey will report to Bureau of Personnel, Navy Department.

Although the ship's gone, wives of the officers of the USS Philippine Sea have stayed together enjoying several lovely events, including a pretty luncheon party at the home of Mrs. Earl B. Lange who was assisted by Mrs. James Hill.

The wives also welcomed a new member to their fold, Mrs. Norma Farris of Garden Grove.

On the afternoon of March 20 the same group will meet at the home of Mrs. Jack W. Hough of 4422 Albuany, Lakewood. Her co-hostess will be Mrs. W. E. McGarrick. The women will enjoy an afternoon of cards following a St. Patrick's Day luncheon.

Recent house guests of Mrs. Roy Proudfoot were her mother, Mrs. John J. Lehmann of San Diego, and also from the border city, Cmdr. and Mrs. Rodney B. Starr.

On the evening of March 12 at 8 p.m. Navy Wives Club No. 1 will conduct a business meeting at the Savannah Navy Clubhouse. Mrs. John Cohn of 2130 Hill St. has invited all Navy wives in the area who wish to join to attend this important meeting.

Leaving shortly for new residence and duty in Germany are that popular Air Force couple and family, Capt. and Mrs. Nick DiGiglio.

Other departing Air Force folks are Maj. and Mrs. Charles Burton and family.

who are going to Hamilton Air Force Base.

Dr. Lee Furr of the Air Force and Mrs. Furr are going back to civilian life in Minnesota.

Lt. Cmdr. and Mrs. C. A. Croft entertained last Friday with an attractive party at the cocktail hour.

From far off Iceland came Maj. Owen Moore for a few weeks visit with his family in Compton, before returning to the Air Force Defense post there.

A pretty surprise baby shower given last Friday at the home of Mrs. George S. James Jr. who was assisted by Mrs. John Harris, honored Mrs. Hilbert Dawson and Mrs. James O. Boykin. Attending were wives of officers attached to the U.S.S. Philippine Sea.

At the recent Long Beach Air Force Officers Wives Club St. Patrick's Day luncheon, Mrs. Edward Hoover Jr. was welcomed as a new member. Jimmy McGarrick charmed the guests with his wonderful Irish songs. He was accompanied by Lois Wolfe.

A belated "Happy Birthday" wish to Robert Lange who celebrated his 13th last Wednesday with a fine family birthday dinner party. His grandmother, Mrs. Paul Tardiff, came up from San Diego to attend.

The crew of the U.S.S. Helena was surprised with cigars last week when happy pappys, Mrs. L. C. Mirtsching and Marine Capt. Frank Koethe went around proudly announcing additions to their families. Both welcomed little girls.

GOP Club Sets Membership Tea

Southeast County Republican Women Federated will entertain with a membership tea at 1 p.m. Tuesday at Lakewood Country Club. Guest speaker will be Mrs. J. D. Finch, Americanism chairman of the Los Angeles County of Republican Women.

Mrs. Irvin Moxingo has arranged the program and Mrs. Ira Batdorf will preside at the business session. Visitors are welcome.

To Accept League Gavel at Luncheon

The many and varied activities of Junior League of Long Beach during the next club year will be under the leadership of civic-minded Mrs. Robert W. Godwin, who will accept the gavel symbolic of her presidency during luncheon ceremonies Friday at the Lafayette Hotel.

Mrs. Godwin has served the league as chairman of Children's Dental Health Center, as recording secretary on the Junior League board and as a member of the finance and year book committees.

Her Junior League training includes attendance at the annual conference of the Association of Junior Leagues of America, Inc., at Quebec, Canada, and regional conferences in Tucson, Ariz., and Los Angeles.

A charter member of Nightingales, the new executive has also served as recording secretary of Medical Auxiliary board, treasurer of University Women's Club and president of Bachelorettes. Other community interests include Girl Scouts and Y-Teenies.

Mrs. Godwin attended the University of California at Berkeley and did graduate work at the University of Southern California in the School of Education. A former teacher, she was also a counselor in Long Beach schools.

Your Baby & Mine Nursing Problems

By MYRTLE MEYER ELDRED

One of my very young friends has just had her first baby and when I asked her how she was feeding it she said, casually, "Oh, I'm nursing him." This would not have been the answer five years ago or even three years ago; that it is, increasingly, these days is a fine indication that everywhere doctors, nurses and mothers are being convinced that there is no food like nature's and that busy, young, modern mothers are just as able as their grandmothers to nourish their young.

It isn't always lack of interest in a mother it is the know-how of nursing which stymies her. She wants to nurse but she is easily discouraged. The baby cries. The nursing is somewhat painful. The bottle seems so easy and fool-proof.

Perhaps she starts out with great quantities of milk and then the supply seems to diminish to nothing. She is sure the bluish fluid she expresses could not possibly nourish her baby. If she has the wrong advisers she gives up at that point. If she has confident ones, she persists and succeeds.

The first six weeks of nursing are never perfect. Neither are the first six weeks of bottle feeding. It is far easier for a baby to get used to the food nature intended for him, than to become adjusted to a foreign food. So look upon the first six weeks as a test period.

The supply of milk may be variable. The baby may not be as happy at some time as at others. The nursing may be uncomfortable. It all adjusts itself in time, the baby to the breast, the breast to its new task. It can't be expected overnight. The mother needs rest.

more rest than she may like to take. She needs a generous diet and lots of fluids. She may have to force herself to partake of these. She needs understanding from her family, especially her husband, because she isn't quite the free agent he might like her to be.

Recreation has to be timed to the baby's needs, though after the sixth week, she may find he will sleep all night without any (or just one) waking period—provided he is getting all the nourishment he needs.

The tangible and intangible assets of nursing have been written about many times, but the mother needs to remind herself that in no way can she become so closely or lovingly associated with her infant as

Among Career Women

ASWA Plans Told for Important Night

By ANNE GILCHRIST

With sound of the gavel's call to order in the Boulevard Room of the Lafayette Hotel at 7 p.m. Wednesday evening, Miss Norma Farris, newly installed president of the American Society of Women Accountants, will begin her most auspicious meeting since induction.

The night will mark the chapter's annual public relations meeting. Speaker will be Mary Swift Becks, attorney, who will discuss, "Practical Law for Women," which is also the name of a course Mrs. Becks teaches in the adult education division under auspices of Long Beach City College.

Invitations to join ASWA Wednesday have been extended to members of both Los Angeles and San Diego women accountants as well as other accountant clubs and Business and Professional Women's Clubs. Eva Grubb, public relations chairman, is in charge of the evening's arrangements with reservations being taken by Ann Dietrich.

Miss Farris (president, Twin Mortgage Co., Bellflower), active in the Long Beach ASWA chapter since 1951, was formerly national editor of the National Membership Bulletin covering activities of 2400 members of active chapters in 25 states and the District of Columbia.

The three primary objectives of ASWA are to encourage women to enter accounting and to seek higher attainments in this field; to inform the public concerning abilities and achievements of women accountants; and to urge women in this profession to participate actively in organizations such as theirs. Membership is open not only to women in accounting but to instructors, students of accounting, and women who otherwise have a substantial interest in this work.

National Secretaries

Spring is just around the corner — floridly speaking — a fact Queen Beach Chapter members, National Secretaries Assn., found out at their Tuesday evening dinner meeting at Hody's Lakewood.

Guest speaker of the evening was Gladys Christensen (Virginia Patis Shop) who gave a preview of some new spring flower ideas, demonstrating how to make lovely table arrangements and how to create attractive corsages for wear with spring fashions.

With this March meeting the Long Beach secretaries began their 11th year as one of this city's most spirited career women's clubs. Last month's dinner meeting was setting for 10th birthday observances when each of the past presidents gave highlights of her year in office. Joe Maes Knoerr, current president, summarized the program and named future goals.

New members initiated included Norma Glycerase, Peggy Fitzmorris and Nicky Nichol.

Medical Assistants

Two important guests will join Long Beach Medical Asin the homey act of nursing —and, if there were a better food to be had, nature would manufacture it.

If you would like our leaflet "Information for Nursing Mothers," send a stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request for leaflet No. 4 to Myrtle Meyer Eldred in care of the Press-Telegram.

Molly Mayfield

TV Hypnotizes Her Husband

DEAR MRS. MAYFIELD:

Here's another complaint from a wife whose husband loves TV more than life. I think often of heaving a heavy book through the screen. The explosion of the tube and the shattering of the glass would make such a satisfying up-rat.

But then I remember how hard he works all day, so I leave him to his dream-world and tip-toe off to bed with cotton in my ears. (I tried sleeping pills but found them habit-forming.)

Weekends at our house are the worst. In season, we have a steady parade of games: Football, baseball, basketball, etc., followed by ancient vintage films.

This is hard on the children, who aren't supposed to be too noisy while all this is going on. It keeps a mother hopping, thinking up activities that will keep the little ones not only quiet, but busy with constructive play and away from old "one-eye."

I should hate to see the kids grow up with their eyes permanently focused at six feet, their little rumps huge from sitting and their limbs atrophied from lack of exercise.

Once, out of desperation, I took the back off the monster and loosened several tubes—to no avail. The repair man (called on the double by you-know-who) arrived promptly on the scene and got paid for out of my housekeeping fund.

If you can't lick 'em, join 'em. I tried that. Now I need glasses. And I was never so bored in my life. Frankly, Molly, TV is the bane of my existence. Any suggestions?

short of homicide and/or suicide will be appreciated. Dear in mind, though, that I'm still rather fond of my hypnotized husband. And, though this may sound a little on the humorous side, it really isn't.—M. E.

DEAR M. E.: My! You have tried to break the TV habit, haven't you? You sort of took the wind out of my sails for a minute. Loosening the TV tubes and tugging on a couple of extra-neous wires would have been a fine idea, and look what happened. But, if at first you don't succeed...

I am reminded of a male acquaintance of mine who used to like to watch those professional football games on Sunday afternoon. For some reason, the wife from the household next door used to pick that time every Sunday to come visiting—and inevitably wander in front of the television screen. My friend told me: "It got so bad I used to think she was a member of the Chicago Bears backfield."

But, seriously, I think the gentleman of the house is entitled to watch his sports events without interruption. I don't think, however, that he ought to be permitted to stay frozen in front of the screen. With those vintage movies, I think you'll find a judiciously placed comment can break the spell and make them look pretty ridiculous.

Also, why, when he's watching TV and the kids are in bed, don't you tip-toe quietly out the back door and go visiting in the neighborhood? Sooner or later, he'll wonder where you are, and when you get home, just smile sweetly and say, "Oh, you were so pre-occupied, I just thought I'd go out for a while." I'll bet THAT will put a dent in the TV habit.—M. M.

Extra Trick Backfires

"Finesses never work for me," moaned Hard Luck Joe. "I guess I ought to take up gin rummy."

"It looks to me as if you were playing gin rummy," said North. "There was no reason to jeopardize your contract by using up one of my high clubs to get to my hand for the finesse in trumps. Wouldn't game and rubber be enough for you without the over-trick?

As usual, Joe had brought this hard luck on himself. The contract was an excellent one and while overtricks are nice in duplicate, they should not be played for when they jeopardize a rubber bridge contract.

After winning the opening spade lead, Joe should have played ace and another trump. West would have won that trick and cashed a spade. East would still make his ace of diamonds but North's long diamonds would be established for a club discard before East and West could do anything about that suit.

As the hand actually went, Joe entered dummy with the ace of clubs in order to take the trump finesse. The finesse lost to West's king and West proceeded to cash one spade and then led the queen of clubs. Now, when East got in with the ace of diamonds he led a third club and West's jack of clubs set the contract.

Why Grow Old?

Star Calls Boredom the Enemy of Lovely Figure

By JOSEPHINE LOWMAN

Mildred Miller, charming young mezzo soprano of the Metropolitan Opera, has a figure so slender that she often is chosen for the "panta roles" (roles that were written for a young male character but to be sung by a female). She is not only an opera star but is also the mother of two children—two reasons often given as alibis for overweight.

There was a short period between her operatic debut more than five years ago and the present time, when she found herself 12 pounds overweight, and realized that this made all of the difference in her sang-froid. She was appearing quite often on television and television cameras broaden even the slightest gain.

So, Mildred went on a diet and lost the excess weight. The other day in New York she said, "There are tricks in everything: tricks in decorating like using a mirror or light paint to make a large room seem larger; tricks in make-up like rouge on your chin to make your face look shorter; tricks in cooking like putting a pinch of sugar into any recipe that uses tomatoes. I found that there are tricks in dieting too."

This lovely star continued to say that she found boredom a greater enemy when reducing than actual hunger. "I was bored with simple nourishing food which took care of the body's needs but did not leave me emotionally satisfied with my meal. Boredom is the dieter's direst adversary," she declared.

During her reducing session Mildred Miller says she discovered the difference between appetite and hunger. She feels that appetite is mental and hunger is physical. She continued, "Your mouth will water at the sight of a luscious piece of strawberry shortcake or the odor of frying onions or a whiff of garlic dressing, and when looking at all of those magnificent color photos of food in women's magazines — they are all appetite arousing."

"Hunger on the other hand is physical. Your stomach gets empty. If it remains empty too long you actually have hunger pangs."

Of course not everyone has the incentive to lose which

Chef of the Week

He Advocates Good Food to Cover His Tablecloth

By MILDRED K. FLANARY
Independent Press-Telegram Home Economics Editor

He's a one-job man . . . and that "job" is the American Linen Supply Co. Manager of its Long Beach operation, today's Chef, Orville C. Holtzhusen joined the company in 1931 and has never worked for any other firm.

Holtzhusen was born in Skokie, Ill. In "those days" it was out in the country. . . . today, it's a suburb of Chicago. He liked his surroundings so well that he remained there until 1931. That is, except for the time he was affiliated with Uncle Sam, when he was "shipmates" at the Naval Air Station, San Diego, Calif., during World War II.

His beginnings with the American Linen Supply Co. were rather unique. He was a fair hand at baseball. The depression was in full swing—and in order to play on the company team he had to be in its employ. He became a natural at both endeavors; and his advancement has been steady. Serving as their personal manager in Chicago for a number of years, he progressed to production superintendent — to general manager at Salt Lake and then to Long Beach.

Education-wise, he majored in business administration at Northwestern University. Civil-wise, he is able chairman of the Chamber of Commerce 500 Club. Under his guidance it has increased its coffers by $13,000—and its membership by many new "businessmen" to our city. A Rotarian, he is also a member of the Pacific Coast Club.

Holtzhusen is a handy man around the house—but a real hazard in the garden where he advocates "craw cut" for all the greenery. He's a hi-fi-repetitionist (plays each new record constantly until he knows it by heart)—and as a trainer of pups, he's DOG-gone good!

Our "chef" likes and knows good food, and he's also capable of preparing it. For instance try his ham timbales.

HAM TIMBALES
1/2 lb. boiled ham
1/2 lb. Old English cheese
1/2 green pepper
10 crackers (crushed)
2 eggs
1 cup milk.

Grind ham and mix well with pepper, cheese and crackers. Add beaten eggs and milk. Bake 30 minutes in greased muffin tins. Serve with creamed mushroom soup thinned with milk.

To Represent Speech Club

Mrs. Louise Wagner will represent the Real-Ette Toastmistress Club Wednesday in the area speech-contest to be held at the Huntington Beach Country Clubhouse. She won this distinction by taking first place when members of her club competed for the honor at a dinner meeting recently at the Hawaiian Restaurant, Mrs. Jesse J. Ends won second place.

Judges for the event were Miss Marjorie Vallancey, of Naval Shipyard Toastmistress Club; Mrs. Helen Anderson, San Pedro Toastmistress Club; Mrs. Hazel Merriam and Howard Barkell, realtor and toastmaster. Mrs. Marguerite Waters presided at the dinner meeting.

Wives Host Annual Party

Dinner in the Company Room at Allen Center, Terminal Island, and dancing later in the main ballroom made the annual Wives' Night staged by Jordan High School Faculty Wives a festive event.

Attending were Messrs. and Meses. Ben Palmgren, Richard Cline, Theron Freese, Clark Bernd, Ewing H. Crutchenfield, Eugene Conklin, Donald Hopkins, James Nickle, Robert Edmonds, Robert Dixon, Iver Rustuen, Jonathan Davis, Phil Young, Paul Baldwin, John Jackson, James Sharp, Harold Stanley and Milton Sager.

You're Safe from Tidal Waves!

By Vera Williams

FRIDAY EVENING, Sept. 7, 1900, Galveston, Tex., lay serene on its sandbar seven miles from the mainland, its hard-packed, white sandy beach glistening just beyond the quiet waves.

By Saturday midnight, one-seventh of its population was dead, drowned in raging waters or crushed by collapsing walls. One-third of the city was swept clean, the wreckage piled high for four miles parallel with the beach.

The Galveston hurricane-driven tidal wave with its 6,000 dead and property damage of 30 million dollars stands as one of America's most tragic disasters. Its heavy loss of life was due in great part to the fact that there was no warning of the storm that came in from the Gulf as a tropical hurricane. Citizens were wholly unprepared for it.

BUT THAT COULD NOT HAPPEN to you here in Long Beach.

The reason it could not is that, ringing the Pacific Ocean, is a network called the Seismic Sea Wave Warning System, with stations at key points on both sides of the ocean and dotted on tiny islands throughout the vast body of water.

Through this system is transmitted rapidly information of storms—volcanic eruptions or earthquakes which may cause tidal waves.

One of the key points in the network is the Long Beach-Los Angeles Harbor lighthouse at the tip of the breakwater. The seismic sea wave recording graph is under the United States Coast and Geodetic Survey and in charge of Coast Guardsmen lighthouse keepers.

"Boss" of the warning system in this area is Cmdr. Roswell C. Bolstad, Los Angeles district officer of the Coast and Geodetic Survey (U. S. Department of Commerce), on the 14th floor of the federal building in Los Angeles.

DISASTROUS LOSS of life and property in the Hawaiian Islands which resulted from the seismic sea wave ("tidal wave" to the layman) following the April 1, 1946, earthquake off the Aleutians pointed up the need for a system for warning the Hawaiian Islands and other Pacific islands and coasts in case another such wave should occur, according to Cmdr. Bolstad.

The Coast and Geodetic Survey began developing detection instruments needed in such a warning system and enlisted the cooperation of the Army, Navy, Air Force and Civil Aeronautics Administration in using government-controlled communication facilities to handle warning messages.

In that April 1, 1946, tidal wave, 173 lives were lost in the Hawaiian Islands and property damage there was estimated at 25 million dollars.

ON NOV. 4, 1952, when a seismic wave broke from an undersea earthquake off Siberia and lashed the Hawaiian Islands, no lives were lost, property damage was low. Thanks to the Seismic Sea Wave Warning System, all knew the tidal wave was coming, and were prepared for it.

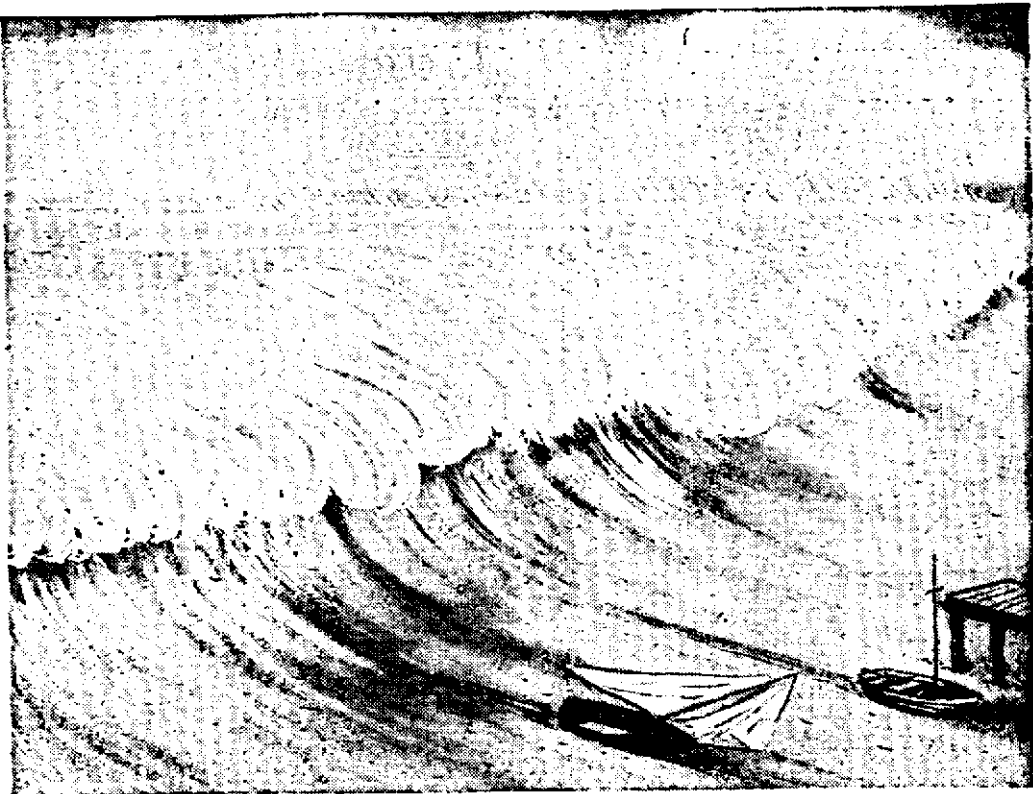

Seismic sea waves are generated by earthquakes in the floor of the ocean (seaquakes), or by volcanic eruptions, explains the commander. They travel in all directions from the epicenter of the earthquake or eruption.

Fortunately, these disturbances do not always produce seismic sea waves. There is no known characteristic on a seismogram of an earthquake which will show whether or not a seismic sea wave has been generated.

Many seismic sea waves cause no damage at all; but such a wave may leave one place undamaged and yet go on to a more distant place and cause enormous destruction. Thus all disturbances are relayed by the warning system.

A seismic sea wave usually consists of a long series of waves that will last for several hours, and in many cases more than a day. The first wave is seldom the largest, but the size and violence of the waves increase rapidly, and in general reach a maximum with the third to eighth wave.

The velocity of a seismic wave depends to a great degree on the depth of the ocean. In the deep waters of the Pacific the velocity is around 500 miles per hour. The distance between crests is well over 100 miles. The period of time between successive waves is around 15 minutes, as compared to 30 seconds for the highest storm waves.

—Drawing by H. Parker Markle

This is staff artist's conception of tidal wave similar to those that hit Texas coast and Hawaii. Experts say it can't happen on West Coast.

As the seismic sea wave reaches shallow water, the wave length shortens and the height becomes greater until at the shore the water may pile up to heights of 30, 40, 50 or 60 feet in a destructive onslaught.

Often—but not always, say the observers—there is a dramatic withdrawal of the sea before a tidal wave hits. It is as if the oncoming wave creates a vacuum pulling the water into it before it thunders ashore.

FOR INSTANCE that was the first warning in the Hawaiian Islands of the 1946 tidal wave. Long accustomed to the sound of the breakers on the shore, residents suddenly were conscious of the stillness. The beach was bare far out—and then the first of the series of high walls of water crashed.

The entire perimeter of the North Pacific Ocean is an active seismic area, and seismic sea waves reach the Hawaiian Islands, for instance, from all points of the compass. Since 1819, seismic sea waves have been recorded on an average of one every 3½ years. Most of these waves did no damage.

On the Pacific Coast there is little danger that a tidal wave could cause extensive damage or take a high death toll, observers believe. Although the Pacific area is geologically active, the sub-surface continental shelf off this coast is steep and the shoreline high.

Along with the steep shelf, the Pacific bottom is filled with lateral and diagonal underwater canyons that go to fabulous depths, each one cutting the force of the seismic wave.

SEISMIC SEA WAVES are not to be confused with the regular tides, due to gravitational pull of the sun and moon and other celestial bodies. Cmdr. Bolstad emphasizes, even though considerable damage is done now and then by these tides. At the time of the new moon and the full moon, high tides are higher than usual, and low tides are lower than usual. Because an average lunar day is 24 hours and 50 minutes long, tides follow this time table. If there is a very high tide at noon one day, for example, the tide will be at approximately 12:50 p. m. the following day.

There are three kinds of tides: diurnal, one high and one low a day, as in the Gulf of Mexico; semi-diurnal, two highs and two lows a day, as on the Atlantic Coast, and mixed, as on the Pacific. The mixed tide is two highs and two lows a day, but one high is considerably higher than the other and one low is considerably lower than the other.

Tides are predicted by the Coast and Geodetic Survey. Roy M. Sylar, supervisor cartographer in Cmdr. Bolstad's office, says Long Beach can look for high tides this year on Jan. 16 (we already had that one, a 6.9 footer), and on June 27, July 23, Oct. 24, Nov. 21. These, all new moon tides, will range from 6.7 to 6.9 feet.

Earthquake—1933

Although Long Beach has never had a tidal wave, it will always be associated with the earthquake of March 10, 1933, which killed 100, including 51 in this city.

The temblor actually centered offshore at Newport Beach, but the Long Beach school system felt its full force and only in recent years has the city wiped out the last scar.

An accident of timing spared thousands of pupils, most of whom were safely home when the quake started.

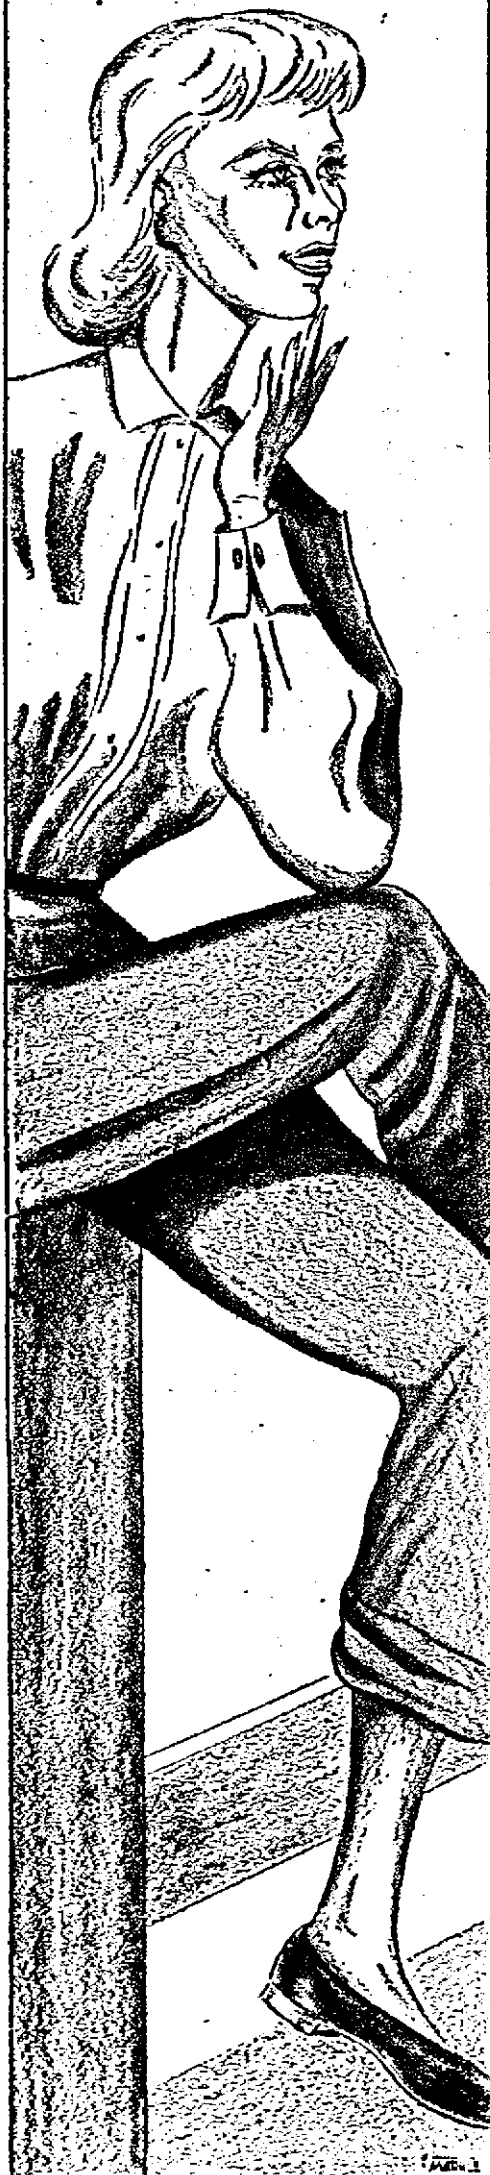

The time was 5:51 p. m.

Poor Relations

By Veva Wilcox Van Valkenberg

Illustrated by H. Parker Markle

I HADN'T SEEN my kid sister for fifteen years, not since she was seven and I was fifteen, but I knew her the minute I saw her coming up the walk. Except for growing up, she hadn't changed much. Her eyes were still too big for her face and she was still slender and blonde.

At first I was excited about seeing her again, then I took a good look at her. She looked like a tramp. Oh I don't mean that kind of tramp; what I mean, she was wearing jeans and a shirt and she didn't have a perm. Her hair hung straight to her shoulders and tucked in at the ends. I figured she was broke and looking for a free meal ticket.

That changed things. Like I told my husband Joe, when his brother wanted to borrow money to move out here, "everybody wants to move to California. They got the idea they can get rich quick or get into the movies or something. If we start helping him we'll have to keep it up. We'll never get ahead with a lot of poor relations hanging on our necks."

THAT WENT FOR MY FOLKS, too. I had never let a one of my folks know where I was, yet one of them had found me, and here she was, all eager and happy about finding a soft touch.

I met her at the door.

"You're my big sister, Irene," she said in a glad, breathless sort of voice.

"Oh?"

"I'm Molly, the baby, remember?"

I didn't ask her in. Joe and I've got things fixed real nice with overstuffed and all, and I didn't want her seeing it and getting the notion we could afford handouts. I went out on the porch and sat in the swing. She sat on the porch railing.

I've been looking for you for years," she almost sang, "but no one seemed to know anything about you."

I wondered how she'd found me now, but I didn't ask. "I've been around a lot," I said.

"I've missed you so much! Why did you run away from Aunt Kate's?"

"I didn't owe her anything. Why should I stick around?"

SHE GAVE AN EXCITED little bounce, like she was too happy to sit still. "Well, at least we've found each other now. I worried about you. After all, you were only fifteen. Was the going pretty rough?"

"I made out alright. Long ago I learned that you had to look out for number one first. I'm still doing alright. Joe, my husband, don't make no fortune with the garage, but we'll get along if we don't fall for every hard luck story that comes along."

I gave her a straight look to make sure that she got my meaning. She did, for she flushed and bit her lip.

She was quiet for a minute then she said, "I see the boys often."

I yawned and looked at my wristwatch.

"They're fine men, Irene. They were both in Korea, but neither was injured. You'd be proud of them, Irene." She sounded like she was begging for something.

I didn't answer, but started picking at my nail polish where it was beginning to peel.

THERE WAS ANOTHER SPELL of silence and I kept wishing she'd take the hint and go, but she just sat there.

The silence began getting on my nerves. "You still with those people who took you when the folks got killed?" I asked, just for something to say.

"The Hillyer's? Oh, yes. They are wonderful to me. They legally adopted me, you know?"

"Yeah? Well, if they've done so well by you, what do you want of me?"

"I'm wondering, Irene, if it is in your power to give me what I want," she answered soberly.

I knew then that I had been right about her. Everyone wants something.

She took a little box out of her shirt pocket and handed it to me. I brought you a little present," she smiled. "I remembered how blue your eyes were."

Inside the box was a pair of ear screws. Can you imagine a seven-year-old remembering all those years that my ears were pierced? She must have got pretty homesick back there in the hills away from all her folks. The folks who took her didn't have any kids of their own to make it easier for her.

FOR A MINUTE I WENT a little soft, then I caught onto her sly trick: she'd try to break me down with a present of junk jewelry, then ask could she stay awhile.

The ear screws weren't much, anyway not big and flashy like I like. There was a dinky blue stone about the size of a big pea with a circle of brilliants around it. The blue stone was kind of cute, though. It had star-shaped light rays in it that moved when the box was moved, cute and tricky.

But I wasn't buying. "You keep them, kid, your eyes are blue, too. You can get your ears pierced."

She looked like she was about to cry but she managed to smile. "Maybe you'll accept them when we're better acquainted," she said.

It made me sore for her to act so dumb, pretending she couldn't see she wasn't wanted. I stood up and let her have it straight.

"Look, Kid, I've never asked odds and I don't give any, if you see what I mean. Sure, we're sisters, but we had nothing to do with that. We're strangers now, let's keep it that way."

The soft look went out of her eyes and she really was a stranger, cool and indifferent. "It's your decision," she said, sliding the box back into her pocket. "Hereafter, whatever happens, I'll do everything in my power to 'keep it that way.'"

I DIDN'T GET A CHANCE to tell Joe about her for he was all excited when he came home for supper.

"Guess who was in the shop today," he said "James J. Hillyer, is who. I worked on his car. Man what a car!"

"I never heard of a movie star named Hillyer," I said, but the name sounded familiar.

"If you'd read something besides movie magazines once in awhile you'd know who James J. Hillyer is," snorted Joe. "He's from your old home town. He's just the guy who found all that uranium on his place. He's worth millions, is all."

My knees went so weak I had to sit down. I was the sister of a millionaire! Maybe certain women in town wouldn't be quite so starchy when they heard that. But I wouldn't be in any hurry to join their clubs, I'd be cool to them the way they had been with me. And now Joe could get the backing he needed to enlarge the garage and get a car agency.

I THOUGHT ABOUT the ear screws. "Joe," I said, "remember telling me how the guys in your outfit bought up diamonds and jewels and stuff when you were stationed in India?"

"Sure. So what?"

"Ever see a blue stone with star-shaped lines in it?"

"Sure, they're star sapphires. Worth more than diamonds."

He laughed that nasty way he does when I want something he thinks we can't afford. "You ain't getting ideas, are you, Baby?"

"Oh I don't know," I smiled.

Then I remembered how the kid had looked and what she had said when she left.

Joe gave me a funny look. "What's the matter, Irene? You sick or something?"

"Sick?" I wanted to scream, "sure I'm sick. My sister's a millionaire and I'll never get a thing out of it, and what's worse, I can't tell anyone about it, ever."

I couldn't answer Joe. I just shook my head.

Overstocked!

Southland is overstocked with short short stories, and writers are asked not to submit them for possible publication until further notice. However, from those already accepted, short shorts will continue to appear in this magazine at regular intervals.

"I have been looking for you for years," she almost sang.

Hottest Freight on Earth

By Edward A. Herron

BY SIX O'CLOCK on a calm, sunlit morning, Conductor Bill Cantwell takes a last, approving glance at his white-painted home, ducks under an elm tree by the sidewalk, and starts for the "roundhouse."

The early morning hour, the brilliant sun, the complete absence of wind fit into a pattern. It forms a background for the fact that this morning Cantwell's train will carry the hottest freight on earth.

Every foot of ground in the seven miles he drives to meet his train is owned by the people of the United States. Every home that he passes is owned, not by the people who occupy them, but again by the people of the United States.

THE TREE-LINED town of Richland, marooned on a high desert plateau in the state of Washington, is owned by 169 million Americans and cared for by one of the most unusual landlords in the United States.

General Electric Co., agent for the people, maintains the town of 27,000 which only 12 hurried years ago was a village of 250 persons surrounded by sagebrush and sand.

Among other activities it operates a railroad, and each week General Electric hands to Conductor Bill Cantwell a paycheck for shepherding the most dangerous material ever manufactured by man.

Only a breath of wind away from Richland, behind a barricade wire and a barrier of secrecy, is another General Electric project, the Atomic Energy Commission's Hanford plant.

THE PRODUCT of the billion-dollar plant and its 9,000 employees is plutonium, the ingredient of the atomic bomb. One of the by-products of the mammoth plant hidden in the desert is the skill to be applied in the peaceful use of the atom.

A waste product of the atomic process is a deadly radioactive residue which must be disposed of safely and without hesitation.

While the rest of the industry talks about the coming of the atomic age, the 150-mile railroad within the barricades of Hanford is already deep into it.

In the railroad maintenance shop, liberally sprinkled with the purple shamrock insignia marked "Radiation Zone," Conductor Cantwell meets Engineer Bill Dye and Trainman A. H. Cox. They receive their orders for the day: burial detail.

In Hanford, when a piece of highly radioactive equipment becomes faulty, it must be buried.

A radiation monitor is assigned to accompany the crew on the mission.

A LITTLE KIT resembling an auxiliary lunch bucket is handed out, each kit containing two pen-sized dosimeters for spotting gamma radiation, and a film badge which responds to invisible rays. A card is prepared for each man on which will be entered a running total of the radiation to which each crewman is exposed. It's the job of the accompanying monitor to keep tabs on exposure, to tell the man if necessary: "You're burned out—no more radiation for the rest of the week."

Getting dressed for the burial detail is a ritual.

William Cantwell, conductor; William Dye, engineer, and A. H. Cox, trainman, get into these special costumes in preparation for handling world's hottest cargo.

Full length coveralls are pulled on, a surgeon's skull cap, then a wide hood which is tucked under the coveralls. White canvas shoe covers are donned, followed by heavy rubbers.

Finally, the trainmen pull on surgeon's gloves, taping them off with canvas gloves whose edges are bound with masking tape. If the job is extremely "hot," assault masks are included, and the man-from-Mars look is complete.

Crewmen and radiation monitor go to the 1,500-horsepower diesel waiting on the track and climb aboard.

The crew, cleared through security at a barricade, picks up a string of 10 empty flatcars and rolls smoothly over the desert to the tall stacks silhouetted against the horizon. The stacks mark the chemical separations plant where plutonium is separated from irradiated uranium fuel elements.

Engineer Dye takes the diesel onto a spur that leads directly to one of the buildings. With Cantwell directing the operation, he pushes his empties toward the windowless building.

WAITING FOR THEM is a burial box mounted on a flatcar. Dye has 19 cars between him and the box. Cox and Cantwell necessarily are closer when they make the coupling. When they move back to the locomotive, the radiation monitor runs his counter over them in a preliminary check.

Before the train arrived, the wornout and contaminated objects had been dropped into the box, inside of which was a 12-inch layer of sawdust to soak up any moisture. Steel clamps were snapped shut when the lid was dropped in place on the sponge-rubber gasket surrounding the lip of the box. These precautions were necessary to prevent a stray gust of wind from lifting radioactive dust from the box and scattering it over the desert.

Dye keeps the "funeral train" at a 10-mile-per-hour pace on the run to the burial ground far out in the desert wastes of the 610-square-mile Hanford project.

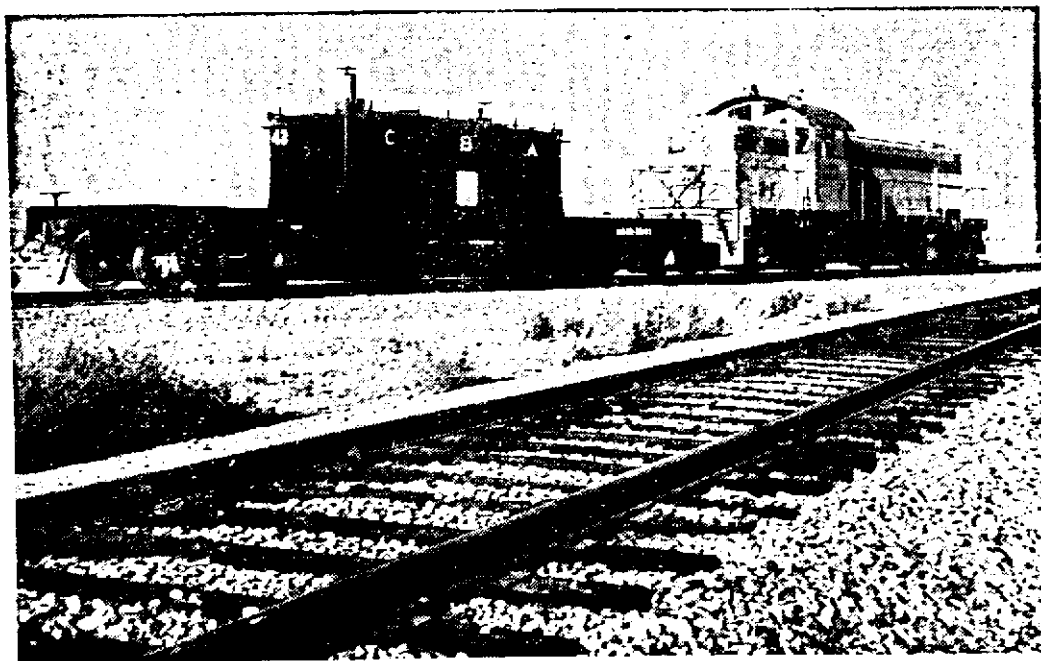

He glides the train to a stop beside a huge hole dug in the desert. A long cable, threaded through loops along the spacer cars, is peeled loose and attached to a tractor 500 feet away. At a signal from Cantwell, the box is skidded down from the flatcar, down a ramp and into the hole.

A SIGNALMAN, standing high on a crane boom, directs the burial. Bulldozers push earth over the crated equipment.

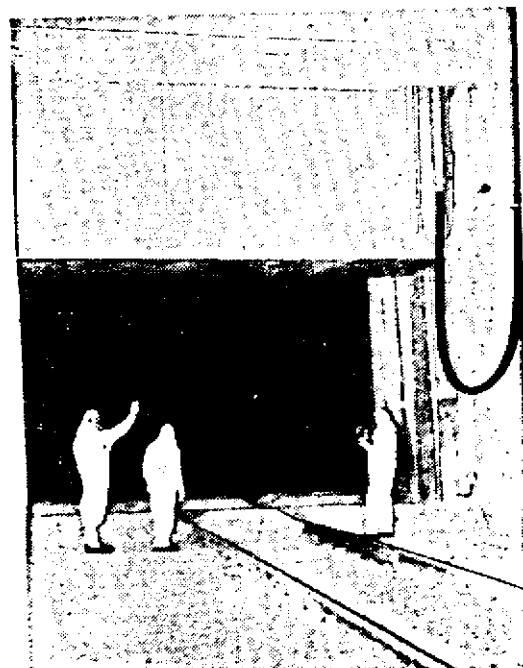

Burial of extremely heavy equipment, too unwieldy to be boxed, is handled in an even more bizarre fashion.

When a giant concentrator must be disposed of, it is lashed securely on a flatcar. A tunnel, 500 feet long has been dug beneath the desert. A spur leads back into the tunnel, where Dye rolls the flatcar with its somber load. Cox uncouples the car. The train pulls out into the sunshine. A huge, water-filled concrete barrier drops down, sealing off forever the flatcar and its burden.

The tunnel can swallow 12 flatcars. When it is filled, the spur will be shifted to a new cavern.

Uranium fuel elements which have been irradiated in Hanford atomic reactors are moved by rail crew to chemical separations plants in black cask cars like this.

Crewmen "highballs" a carload of "hot" discards into underground burial tunnel.

Examples of the craft of Mrs. Ira Timson of Downey are shown here. Mrs. Timson has only her left arm.

Handicaps Don't Count

By Jane Ann Witte

DOWNEY
HOOKED RUGS in beautiful floral patterns grow under the flying fingers of 79-year-old Mrs. Ira Timson, 10835 S. Cord St.

To date, she has made 13 rugs 36x64 inches; has hooked an 11x14 foot rug to cover the floor of the den, carefully fitting it around a corner fireplace, and she has hooked a rug "picture" that hangs on the wall.

Nothing very unusual about that—except that Mrs. Timson has only one hand and arm—the left. Her right arm was blown off by a gun that "wasn't loaded" when she was 16 years old. Her left hand was injured at the same time, so that she has only a thumb and two good fingers with which to work.

"I've never considered myself handicapped," she says. "... A person isn't handicapped unless he thinks he is."

THE TIMSONS have been married 55 years; they have two daughters, both teachers. Mrs. Timson, originally a Nebraska farm woman, sews beautifully and still makes her own clothes; she used to bake bread and she still bakes pies, cakes, cookies, rolls. She has done much gardening and she has raised many chickens.

"I can't crochet, knit or quilt—those things take two hands," she says, "but I can make buttonholes. I can get a meal and I can diaper a baby as fast as anyone else can."

She makes some of her rugs from yarn and some from wool which she cuts herself with scissors. Some of her designs are original. She keeps her frame set up in the den so that she can work any time she likes, and as short or as long a time as she likes. She makes the rugs with a single loop stitch, working with a needle from the back. She perfects the floral rugs, each of which has a border and a scroll. The wall-to-wall den rug is of squares in a gay, hit-and-miss pattern. The rug "picture" is of a trim white cottage with trees, flowers and clouds.

MRS. TIMSON was born in a sod house on her father's homestead near Aurora, Neb. She was a promising young pianist when, in grouse-hunting season, a shotgun loaded with buckshot and in her brother's hands, went off tearing off her arm just below the shoulder. She threw up her left arm to protect her face and her left hand also caught the buckshot. The two smallest fingers were permanently crippled.

"It was very hard on my brother," she says.

The accident occurred in the days before telephones and automobiles, and she was eight miles from the village doctor, which gives some idea of the danger and suffering she endured.

She attended Lincoln Normal University and taught in Hamilton and Nance counties. After their marriage, she and her husband lived on a farm in Nance County.

"I've cooked for threshers—hungry threshers, a dozen at a time," she recalls. "We used to do our own butchering and make our own soap."

SHE MADE THE family's clothes, including clothes for the children. Ready-made garments were not plentiful in those days. But she found two things she could not do: she could not feed wet wash into the wringer and turn the handle at the same time, and she could not braid her children's hair. Mr. Timson had to braid the girls' hair until they were old enough to do it themselves.

The Timsons moved to Downey in 1909 when that area was orange groves. They had a four-acre chicken ranch, and until 1917 raised upwards of 5,000 chickens a year.

Their daughters are Dr. Gladys Stevenson, who heads the economic department at Whittier College, and Dr. Iris Marie Timson, who teaches in Los Angeles State College. The former received her Ph.D. from Iowa State College at Ames, Iowa, and the latter her doctor in Education from Stanford.

La Purisima: Symbol of Courage

Restored in 1930s under the CCC program. La Purisima Mission, near Lompoc, is now a state park. This is a view of the padres' residence after restoration.

By Marilyn Goslaw Feller

THE MORALE of Long Beach was unshaken by disaster on March 10, 1933. Homes and schools fell but courage rose again as it did at La Purisima, 11th California mission, when a great earthquake struck in 1812.

For a beautiful, never-to-be-forgotten trip, travel north about 150 miles from Long Beach, on Highway 101, then turn left on Highway 1 for 20 miles to the scenic valley of Lompoc. La Purisima Mission is nestled among the rolling hills. Today it is a state park and has been restored to its true setting when the mission centered a flourishing community in 1787.

Thirteen days after the mission's 25th anniversary celebration in 1812, Father Mariano Payeras had no reason to feel this would be a day any different from days gone by.

THE MISSION Indians had gathered for atole, a gruel of ground barley. Each family dipped out its portion from a large pot of gruel that boiled all day over an open fire. A mother in her full, coarse muslin skirt and red sash brushed back her rebozo, a black headpiece and shawl combined, as she finished her laundry at the mission washing pool. She felt at peace as her children were happily playing near the pear trees in the mission garden. Father was working at the one job he knew — hewing timber. Nature struck about 10:30 a.m. and terror gripped all the mothers as they ran for their children. The earth shook and swayed for a full four minutes.

Before the eyes of Father Payeras, his beloved mission crumbled to dust. Nearly all the adobe mission buildings and 100 native homes were laid low. Even today a huge crack is still evident as the earth was ripped asunder by the quake.

WITH THE SAME vigorous courage shown by Long Beach 24 years ago in rebuilding the city, the padre and his natives labored earnestly to complete the second Mission La Purisima some four miles from the original location.

In three years the community was completely restored. The residence building of the priests is an outstanding example of mission architecture. Housing was completed for more than a thousand Indians. By growing their own food and by their marvelous "do-it-yourself" ability, this mission's communicants became self-supporting.

The present curator, Frank

L. Gutierrez, reminiscing of days gone by, said, "The CCC boys in 1935 showed this same courage in the remarkable job of restoration of this mission. All the work was done by hand, in the same way that the Indians did after the earthquake of 1812."

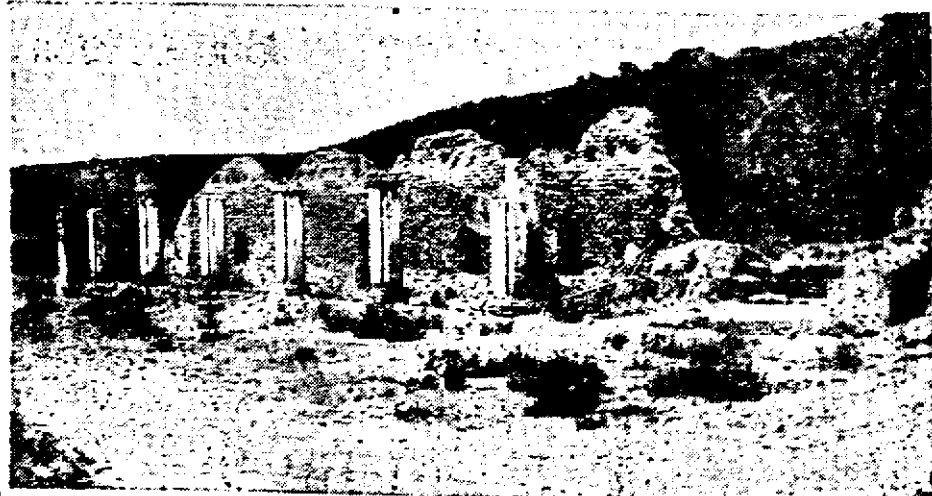

Gutierrez pointed out that the destruction of Father Payeras' mission was man-made. "After the secularization (1834) by the Mexican government, the mission was sold at auction to Pio Pico. Later he, in turn, sold the mission. It changed hands several times and the dust of time settled. Even the tiles from the roofs were sold; thus rains dissolved most of the walls."

Since 1903, the Union Oil Co. has owned the property and has deeded six parcels of land to the State of California.

In 1935, the state and Santa Barbara County purchased the rest of the grounds and all 680 acres became a state park.

TODAY LA PURISIMA Mission is not hemmed in by modern buildings.

Erected on a foundation built by Father Payeras and the natives are rumades to offer shade for picnics. No fee is charged. Hours on any day of the week are from 9 a. m. to 5 p. m.

La Purisima was knocked down by earthquake in 1812 and was rebuilt. Secularization again resulted in ruin (above). Before 1935 restoration work began.

Square dancing is becoming increasingly popular among Long Beach youngsters. With boys' hands clasped, this octet of grade school dancers does Texas Star.

Balance and Swing, Little Doll

Susan Wentworth and Philip Brothers, both 11, promenade. Soon they will do ballroom dancing.

IN JEANS and sport shirts and bright cotton dresses that start out ankle length and soon are ballerina length—the girls grow so fast!—several thousand youngsters are learning to square dance at 3720 Long Beach Blvd.

They learn the Texas Star, My Pretty Girl, Glory Hallelujah, Oh Johnny—which really is a mixer—and the Bunny Hop, even though the Bunny Hop isn't a square dance.

Most of them are in the fifth and sixth grades.

THEY HAVE CUTE NAMES for their square dance groups: Dude Ranchers, Dudes and Dolls, Jeans and Janes, Levis and Lace, Silks and Spurs.

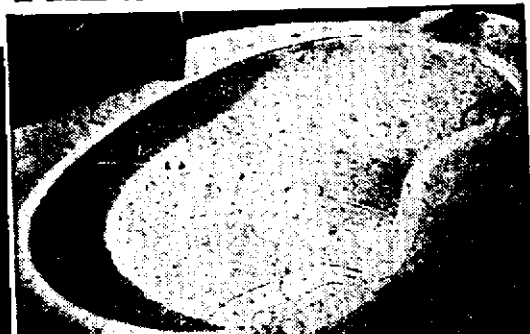

From square dancing, they naturally go to the Black Hawk waltz, three step, Varsoviene and soon they are doing the basic ballroom dances—waltz, foxtrot, tango, rumba, samba and mambo—under the direction of Derrill and Chloe Call.

The children are taught proper ballroom etiquette—a man NEVER leaves a woman stranded on the floor; he asks her nicely to dance, he doesn't just jerk his thumb at her; he seats her at his right when he serves her party refreshments. And both learn to stay off each other's feet, if possible.

OUR COVER

"May I have the next dance?" asks Steven Spurling, 11, of Marjorie Ann Green (center), 10. On Marjorie Ann's right is Betty Jo Fluke, 11; on her left, Trudy Winkler, 10.

WHAT YOUR NAME MEANS

DEAR MISS RULE: Would appreciate your analysis of McFarlane.—G. B. M., Long Beach.

My maiden name was McFarlane. I came from England as a girl. Please tell about it.—MRS. E. H. G., Long Beach.

G. B. M. and E. H. G.: The ancestor of the Scotch Clan McFarlane was Gilchrist, brother of the third Earl of Lennox. His son was baptized Pharlán, the Gaelic equivalent of "Bartholomew," a Biblical name meaning "son of the furrows." The lineage descended from Pharlán took the clan-title MacPharlán. Part of the family changed the name to MacFarlane, and one branch used McFarlane. The family lands were on the west bank of the celebrated Loch Lomond. Near the end of the 1500s the men of Clan MacFarlane were defeated in battle by the English. In the early 1600s the last descendant of the clan chiefs migrated to Virginia. The ancient coat-of-arms of the clan had a red St. Andrew's cross between four red roses on a silver shield. Their motto was "This I'll defend."

DEAR MISS RULE: I would like the analysis the name COLLINS. P. T., Wilmington.

I would appreciate your brief genealogy of COLLINS.—F. D. C., Long Beach.

P. T. and F. D. C.: COLLINS is taken from the early English phrase "Son of Nicholas" by way of the diminutive Collin, meaning "little Nick." The Greeks originated Nicholas, meaning "soldier of the victorious army." The Collins coat-of-arms had three black birds on a blue shield. Many of this lineage in America are descended from Thomas Collins of Massachusetts, born about 1630.

DEAR MISS RULE: What do you know about my maiden name VAUGHAN. I was born in Ireland.—M.H., Long Beach.

I would like information on the name VAUGHN.—W.V.J., Long Beach.

M.H. and W.V.J.: The Welsh family named VAUGHAN are descended from princes of Wales who lived prior to the 10th century. In the ancient Cymric (Welsh) language, "vaughan" meant "short in stature." The Irish surname Vaughan comes from O'Maughane, meaning "descendants of the great one." This family lived in Munster. Both Welsh and Irish descendants in America have in some cases shortened the name to Vaughn. The family coat-of-arms had a rampant red lion on an ermine covered shield. Several descendants of the Welsh family settled in Virginia in the 1600s. Their grandchildren fought in the Revolutionary War.

DEAR MISS RULE: I would like the meaning of SCHOWALTER, often spelled Schewalter.—D. E. S., Long Beach.

D. E. S.: SCHOWALTER immortalizes the physical characteristics of a sovereign who ruled a kingdom later incorporated into the nation of Germany. The root-source of this name was the courtly title "Schon-Waltener" or "handsome ruler." Schon-Waltener was handed down through the centuries in the short form "Scho-Walter." The descendants first settled in America in the 1700s, among the Mennonites in Pennsylvania.

DEAR MISS RULE: Would you give information on the surname HAYES.—O. V. H. and J. H., Long Beach.

O. V. H. and J. H.: In old England "Hoyes" meant a hedge on-closing a group of fields. From this environmental description developed the surnames Hayes, Hays, Hawes, Haigh and Haugh. In the 14th century Chaucer wrote in his Troilus, "But right so as these holtes and these hayes, that have in winter dead beene and dry, revesen them in greene when May is; when every lusty beast lusteth to play." The Hayes coat-of-arms had three black tiger heads on a silver shield. Many members of this family settled in Maryland in the 1700s.

Send your names to La Reina Rule in care of Southland Magazine, Independent Press-Telegram, 6th and Pine, Long Beach 12, Calif., for analysis and brief genealogy, for publication in this column.

its present full total of 1,000 square feet. Added to the original tiny building were a second bedroom and a large all-purpose service area. Still in no manner large, the house certainly acts big and accommodates perfectly to its two owners.

HORIZONTAL REDWOOD siding faces the building on the exterior, presenting a rustic appearance, a look that best suits the interior mood. Opening off a small shed-type porch to the jungle of seashells is the front door that leads directly into the front room.

At a first glance it is obvious that virtually everything in the house is antique—livable, practical and attractive old items that, in addition to their charm, offer a great deal of downright function.

Oval rugs of braided wool and in riotous color cover the floor. Tiny, cocoa-like floral, provincial-patterned wallpaper gives more a feeling of texture than of pattern. The wall just inside the front door is paneled in mahogany. Against it stands a provincial television console upon which is an arrangement of antiques—an old apothecary scale and bottle and small bric-a-brac. On the wall hang two old brass sconces that flank an attractive arrangement composed of a maple rack and small, hand-painted china dishes.

Standing before a picturesque window is a provincial, modified wing sofa upholstered in pale beige tweed. The multi-paned window behind it has been installed with antique pine side shutters and fitted with shallow shelves that display, against the

You Can Fly-Fish Off the Pier!

IF YOU are looking for a different type of winter sport, try fly-fishing right in the city's front yard — off a pier, the breakwaters or a dock in the inner harbor.

Several Long Beach anglers have discovered that this type of fishing provides the ultimate in sport at any season of the year. Right now, you can catch mackerel, bonito — even halibut — without getting your feet wet.

If you don't know how to handle a fly rod, then try a weighted fly on a spinning outfit. It works the same, sometimes even better.

PAUL HARMON, who owns Tommy's Tackle Store in Seal Beach, introduced me to this different type of fishing last fall.

Paul has been using streamer-type flies for two or three years. He doesn't even change from business clothes when he wants to go fishing. He even takes a part of his lunch hour, makes a few casts off a moiré dock and usually goes back to work with a few fish for the deep-freeze.

Paul, as far as can be determined, was the first person to start fly-fishing for halibut. And he learned about that in an accidental sort of way.

He was fishing the surface for bonito, got a back-lash and, while untangling that, the fly sank to the bottom. He retrieved in the usual manner and wham! a three-pound halibut hit.

PAUL'S METHOD of fly-fishing for bonito is simple. He prefers a tiny spinning outfit with six- or eight-pound-test monofilament, perhaps a couple of split-shot sinkers — just enough to make a good cast into a channel.

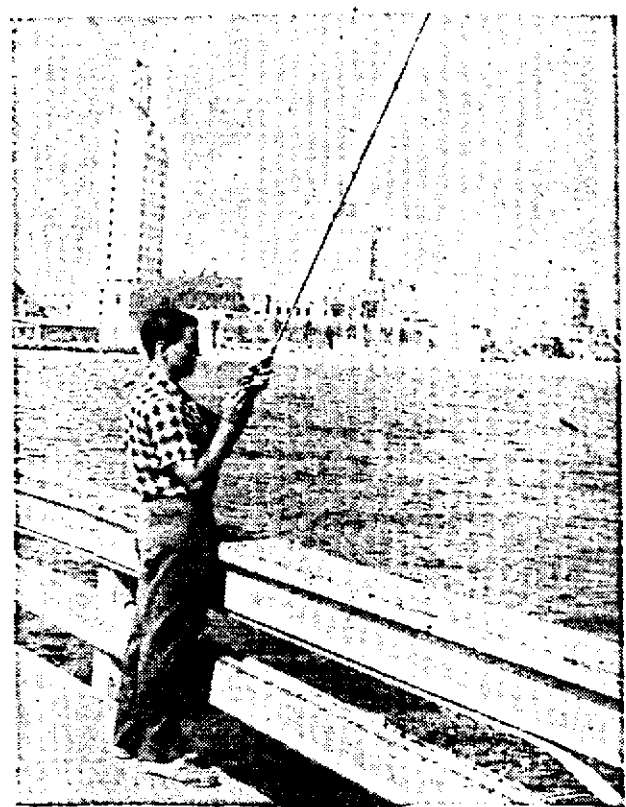

Paul drives up to a dock, parks, takes outfit in hand and then scans the water. If the water is glassy, a run of fish is easy to spot because of the gentle ruffle that moves along the surface. He casts into the middle of such a ruffle, counts the equivalent of a slow 10, then starts retrieving with short, quick jerks. Therein lies the secret. An ordinary spin-fisherman might work the water all afternoon without a single strike. Paul works the rod tip constantly with quick jerks, reeling rapidly all the while.

I watched Paul with envy the first time we went fishing together. He caught and released a half-dozen mackerel and two bonito in a matter of minutes while I got nothing except a lot of fresh air and sunshine. We were fishing on a dock where steamships normally tie up. On that day the wharf was clear of ships and workmen.

THIS TYPE of fishing may be done anywhere in the Long Beach and Los Angeles Harbor area, but it is well to observe "NO FISHING" signs. Certainly no sportsman wants to interfere with the loading of a ship or the routine operations on a dock.

One of the best spots for bonito is the entrance channel to the Long Beach inner harbor, near the Pontoon Bridge that connects this city and Terminal Island. Inasmuch as the shoreline is the property of the Southern California Edison Co., it is best to use an outboard to reach the channel.

As for flies, Paul has tried many of them. There is one, however, that seems to work like a charm. It is a large fly, a copy of the famous Vee-Bee used in fresh water for bass, crappie and bluegill. Incidentally, Paul started using Vee-Bees, then asked the manufacturer, Bill EQUITZ, of Long Beach, to make larger copies on

Without even changing from business clothes, anglers can catch fish by fly-fishing off Long Beach piers.

By Donnell Culpepper

No. 4 and 6 hooks. Bill now makes the flies and they carry the Vee-Bee name, although larger than the fresh-water variety. They come in several colors, but the white and yellow combinations are hard to beat.

IN CASE YOU are not familiar with the Vee-Bee, it is a fly that has two brilliant eyes at the top of the hook.

These flies can be used successfully around the breakwaters. Perch of all kinds, bass, mackerel and other fish often strike at the flies if they are fished properly.

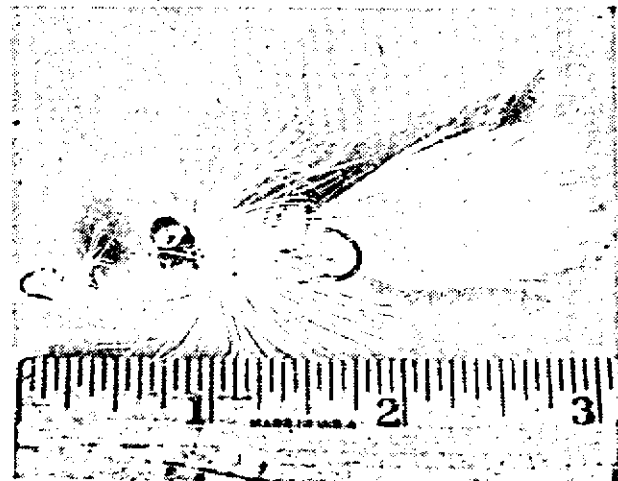

The same kind of a retrieve is used when fishing for halibut, but the outfit must be rigged differently. Tie a shiny sinker about three feet from the hook on a dropper piece of monofilament. The sinker should not be more than one ounce, preferably about half of that. The shiny sinker has two purposes: it gets the fly down to the bottom in a hurry and it also serves as an attraction for the flaties that lie half-submerged in the sand.

ONE OF THE BEST areas for halibut in the winter and early spring is the comparatively calm water between Rainbow and Belmont Piers. While some surf fishermen wade out in boots to try their luck, boat anglers seem to have the best luck. Often the halibut lie just beyond the best cast a surf fisherman can make.

Halibut are everywhere when the runs start and you can do just as well from most of the piers and moles in the harbor. Paul counted more than 200 halibut catches on flies last spring. Most of those were caught on his lunch-hour periods.

Halibut are not too plentiful at this writing, but the mackerel and bonito have been providing excellent sport through the winter. Get a 5-pound bonito on the other end of a spinning outfit and you'll have one of the sportiest fish in the ocean.

You'll be lucky to land one, especially if you are fishing from the top of a mole, 20 feet above the surface of the water.

carved in cherry, each busy with his or her task in the day's travel.

Day after day the settlers traveled on until they found the land of opportunity in a new and fertile country. They cleared away trees, plowed the soil and built stout log cabins.

The artist creates this scene in "Frontier Farmer."

The cabin has a large rock fireplace; a kettle hangs on a crane; on the hearth are Dutch even, tea kettle and coffee pot; hanging from the mantel is a long-handled skillet and poker. All are carved from ebony. On the mantel stands an antique clock and a candle mold. In the corner stands an old-fashioned safe, the shelves stacked with tiny dishes.

THE HOME-MADE slab table holds a caster, spoon holder and jar of knives and forks, made of lemon wood. The bearskin rug lying before the hearth is of gum and kethabaro. The muzzle loader was made of three woods; the powder horn hanging on a prong was carved from walnut. The quilt covering the bed is made from 101 tiny hexagons of 77 kinds of wood.

The broad trail of the horse "Patience" now leads to the open range as Old carved scenes of branding cattle, building corals.

A Sister from Naga

THE MURPHY SISTERS of North Long Beach attract attention wherever they go. Annette, 18, a Jordan High School senior and journalism enthusiast, has reddish hair and brown eyes. Grace, 11, a sixth-grader in the Grant Elementary School, has olive skin, thick jet-black braids and deep brown eyes.

Annette is the daughter of the Rev. and Mrs. Hubert E. Murphy, long-time missionaries in India. Grace is their adopted daughter, loved as their own child. She is half Naga and half Scotch. Her mother, a member of a Naga tribe, and her father, a Scotch officer in the British army, and her other close relatives were killed in World War II when the Japanese invaded the Naga Hills, a low range of mountains stretching for 200 miles along the Assam-Burma border.

When she was 3 years old, the Murphys obtained her from a Church of Scotland orphanage at Kalampong, high in the Himalayan Mountains near the Tibetan border.

SHE WILL become an American citizen next year.

"Our Annette, who was born in India, prayed for a sister," says Mrs. Murphy. "... We saw a picture of Grace in the orphanage, and knew that we had to have her."

The Naga Hills, explains Mrs. Murphy, are part of the Hump over which United States airmen flew supplies, equipment and men to our allies in China in World War II. A dozen or so tribes make up the Nagas. Some tribes are head-hunters.

Grace was born in Kohima, Assam, according to the Murphys. Her grandparents were converted in the Presbyterian mission in Kohima, which makes her a "third generation Christian."

EFFORTS to bring Grace to the United States failed for years because she had to enter in the Indian quota, which is small. The Murphys are former Oklahomans and finally Rep. John Jarman of Oklahoma entered a special bill in Congress granting Grace permission to enter.

The four Murphys arrived last October. The Rev. Murphy returned in January to his mission at Bangalore, in the central part of southern India. Mrs. Murphy and Annette probably will join him soon, but Grace will remain until she gets her citizenship.

The Murphys are "faith missionaries," which means that they are supported by contributions. They are not medical missionaries, but they have had much first aid training, so they help natives who are injured or ill.

"IN INDIA," says Mrs. Murphy, "you do what you have to do."

In addition to their regular services, they have a special Sunday School and church service for lepers. It is conducted on the roadside, outside the mission gate.

The Murphys have many art objects from India, including an embroidered and painted picture of a yak and rider from Kalampong; rosewood elephant with ivory tusks, rosewood lion, copper and brass bowls and plaques. Their television sets are camel saddles from Egypt.

east light, a sparkling array of old colored glass.

FACING THE SOFA is a very old tavern table cut down to coffee-table height. It still proudly retains its original white china drawer pulls. More than 100 years old, its mellowed old top seems virtually impervious to any new signs of wear.

Opposite the front door stands a quaint, conversation-provoking arrangement that presents such a pretty picture from the doorway that it makes up for the lack of an entry. Against the dainty, sprigged wallpaper is an old pine washstand on which a double hurricane lamp in yellow and white milk glass casts a cheery light. Over this are four colorful old rooster prints from an English poultry catalogue. Framed in distressed pine, they tie in nicely with the pine stand.

At the far end of the living room is a huge wing chair up-

holstered in coral-colored fabric patterned with brown carriage motifs. A second antique washstand, this one quite differently styled from the other, acts as an occasional table near the chair. Before the chair is a Victorian footstool—a squat, amusing object that still retains its original upholstery. Oval needlepoint pictures and an ornately carved cuckoo clock complete the grouping.

THE KITCHEN, opening off the living room, is one with the dinette. Even in this room the furnishings, except for appliances, are antique. At the windows are pine shutters that filter the north and east sunlight. Wallpaper in provincial pattern features a ruddy, turkey-red background. The pale butter-yellow ceiling reflects light and matches the yellow cabinets and tile countertops.

Just inside the open arch from the living room is the dining area with its quaint old table and captain's chairs. On one wall hangs a pine shelf that displays Mrs. Stanley's antique pitcher collection. Between the dining area and the preparation area is a Dutch door that opens to the garden.

In the cooking center, even the cooking utensils are antique — with handsome old copper pans and pots presenting a homey look. The "everyday" dishes are pieces of old china that contribute much appeal to the table which is most often spread with a gay red-and-white checked cloth.

OF PARTICULAR interest in the kitchen is the plate-drying rack that is located over the sink between two flanking cupboards. This unique pine rack, a copy of the kind found regularly in English countryside cottages, holds an assortment of cups, saucers and small plates where they are placed within handy reach to dry by themselves.

Off the living room is the bedroom, a surprisingly spacious area. Sage green paper sprinkled with tiny red and white figures sets the scheme. A huge high bed of combined pine and fruitwood has given up its old rope bottom in favor of the more contemporary spring- and -mattress combination; otherwise it retains its authenticity. Overlying the bed is the handmade quilt of multi-colors in the traditional sunbonnet pattern.

THE NEW BEDROOM opens off the original bedroom. It, too, has an old, but beautiful bed. A high wainscot of natural mahogany runs around the room above which is a calico-print wallpaper that has predominantly pink and rose figures. A fabric-ruffled valance over the pine-shuttered windows matches, exactly, the pattern of the paper. The west window is a bay and has been dressed with scalloped, unbleached muslin cafe curtains suspended on rings from a brass rod. Before the window is an interesting old "mammy bench"—a long pine bench on rockers, complete with small rail that creates a sort of cradle at one end.

The most unusual feature of the whole house is the new all-purpose room that does more than its share to relieve the rest of the house of living pressures. It provides adequate space for the laundry appliances, a large marble-topped storage unit (which doubles as a convenient dressing table) and spacious storage closets. Color scheme and shutters make this a pretty room.

A small bath opens to the service area. Like the latter, it, too, has quaint old lighting fixtures and a pink and white color scheme. In keeping with the old-fashioned aspects of the house, even the built-in mirror is flanked by storage chests with old pine shutters for doors.

The Vanishing Rancho at Malibu

son, through May into early June. Wildflowers usually bloom more vividly after fires, some say because of carbon added to the soil.

Tapia, Prudhomme, Keller, and Rindge were names that appeared on titles and deeds as the beautiful property passed from hand to hand during Spanish, Mexican and then U. S. rule. The Rindge ranch home, a fabulous mansion of Spanish archways, tiled roofs, and now known as Serra Retreat under supervision of Franciscan monks, is closed to visitors, but can be seen from a distance at the highway bridge (Alternate U. S. 101) over the estuary of Malibu Creek. This section has not burned.

A FRAGMENT of the old land grant, known as Tapia Park on the Malibu Canyon road, is open to the public as a picnic site operated by the Los Angeles County Park and Recreation Department. The old Tapia barn is still standing on the grounds. Malibu Canyon road crosses from the coast to Ventura Blvd., inland. (Turn north toward the mountains at the signals, the only traffic lights between Oxnard and Santa Monica.) Tapia Park lies near the summit opposite the junction of Puma Road at a bridge spanning the upper waters of Malibu Creek. The creek was center of bitter litigation involving early day water rights.

Although Malibu remained intact longer than most Spanish land grants, its character as a ranch is yielding to the demands of population and recreation seekers in Southern California. Private homes, public parks, including Zuma Beach near historic Point Dume, motels, cafes, schools and churches and other hallmarks of civilization now occupy the former domain of the Indian, puma and mule deer.

Broken fence, deteriorating line rider's cabin spelled end of Rindge cowboys era. Now this old landmark is no more, destroyed (inset) by Malibu fire of 1955.

Corned beef, with parsley potatoes, soda biscuits and asparagus with a mustard-horseradish cream sauce, is tasty for St. Patrick's Day dinner.

FOOD

By Mildred K. Flanary
Independent Press-Telegram Home Economics Editor

MARCH 17, a four-leaf clover day for all of us who are Irish by heart if not by descent, is a day for the wearing of the green, parades and dining on Irish favorite dishes.

And, synonymous with St. Patrick's Day is corned beef, so celebrate in true Irish fashion with a corned beef dinner for family and friends. Cabbage, of course, is the first thought for an accompaniment, but for a variation, try fresh asparagus, which is abundant right now. Try asparagus served with a mustard and horseradish cream sauce that accents both the asparagus and corned beef flavors. To complete this Irish dinner, serve parsley potatoes and shamrock-shaped soda biscuits.

Following is the recipe for mustard cream sauce . . . and just in case you've forgotten

Corned Beef

TO KEEP it in shape: a 5-lb. piece of corned beef. It is wise to ask your butcher whether or not the beef requires previous soaking in water to keep from being too salty. Soak it if advised to do so. Discard the water. Place beef in cold water to cover. Add 6 pepper corns and one-half clove garlic.

Bring it to the boiling point, remove the scum, reduce the heat, cover the pot and simmer the meat for about 5 hours, or until it is tender. You may have to add boiling water to keep the beef covered. Leave the meat in the water in which it was cooked until it is lukewarm. Remove it and press it with a weight, or serve it warm and unpressed with horseradish sauce.

SERVE WITH: Corn on the cob, tomato-onion salad, rye bread, butter or margarine, peach betty, beverage.

NEW ENGLAND BOILED DINNER

Place corned beef in water to cover. Cover and simmer slowly 4 to 5 hours or until tender, depending on size. About 45 minutes before meat is done, add 8 small onions, 4 medium sliced potatoes and 6 turnips. Cook 10 to 15 minutes of cooking time, add 1 large head of cabbage cut into wedges. Serve meat on platter surrounded by the vegetables, garnish with parsley. It is a New England custom to cook 10 or 12 small or medium beets separately, then slice and serve with the dinner. It usually takes 1 pound of corned beef to serve 2 to 3 people.

Beautiful Bottleful of Light

By M. D. Logan

DO YOU HAVE an interesting bottle sitting around doing nothing? Put it to work. Convert it into a lamp. If you are fortunate enough to have a colored or textured bottle, so much the better. Such unusual qualities are enhanced when the lamp is turned on.

By using a rubber expansion adapter kit, this is a simple, inexpensive but satisfying project. All electrical parts needed can be purchased for less than $2.

The lamp socket and harp (shade support) attach to the adapter kit, which in turn fits into the bottle like a cork. The two sizes of adapters available can easily be made smaller to fit in-between sized bottles.

THE CORD leaves the lamp through a small hole, fitted with a grommet, in the bottom part of the two-piece socket. When plugged into an outlet, the cord drops in back of the lamp and is hidden. This not only eliminates the need for the cord to run down through the inside of the bottle, but also the tedious task of drilling a hole in the bottom of the bottle.

If a suitable drill is not available to make the hole in the socket, the electrical supply shop where you purchase the rest of the parts can do this for you, and also insert the grommet, which keeps the cord from fraying on the sharp edges of this hole.

THE SATISFACTORY overall height for a table lamp is 25 to 30 inches, with 15 to 17 inches from table top to the bottom of the shade. A simple wooden base can be made if more height is required for the bottle, or about 2 inches can be added at the top of the harp with a threaded brass riser.

The shade should be in keeping with the type of bottle base. The lamp shown is of a rather crude, bubbled, Mexican glass, hence a simple shade with a slight nubby texture was used.

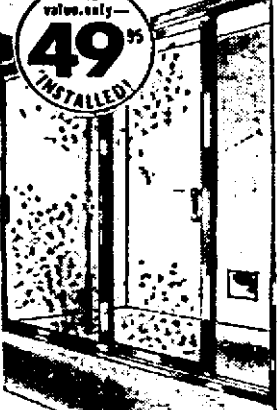

The parts needed to complete this project are shown on the accompanying diagram.

Bottle of bubbled, Mexican glass, found in dusty corner of a junk shop, is basis for this lamp.

Flameless electric cooking
keeps more juice in the meat

In roasting, juice is the secret of flavor—and flame is the enemy of juice

Here's why:

♦ Flame needs air to breathe. A flame-heated oven constantly inhales dry air, exhales moist air—literally cooks meat in a hot draft that evaporates good juices. And what is more disappointing than a fine roast without all its flavorful juice?

But when you cook it electrically, there's no draft of constantly changing air. Because there's no flame. You cook in moist, not dry heat. Result? More juice stays in the meat...and it tastes better.

♦ And electric cooking is cleaner. Keeps your pots, pans and walls fresh and new. It's far cooler, too. Electricity puts the heat in the food, not in the kitchen. It's fast and automatic. Truly, electricity is the only modern way to cook. See your electrical appliance dealer soon.

LIVE BETTER—ELECTRICALLY

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA  COMPANY

Did you know? Flameless electric cooking costs about $1.39 to $1.59 a month for a family of 6.

A Landmark's Legend

By John Ronson

LOVER'S LEAP, a towering rock on the west bank of the Russian River about 99 miles north of San Francisco, is the newest historical landmark in the Redwood Empire of northwest California and southwest Oregon.

The high rock in Mendocino County, near the town of Picta, also has been known, more poetically, as Squaw Rock. Many travelers, particularly those with a romantic bent, stop here to marvel at the ways of love.

Legends differ about which Indian maiden plunged to her death from the rock, but they agree that a perfidious male inspired the lethal leap.

One version had Satuka, flitted by Cachow, jumping from the rock and smack on top of Cachow who was honeymooning at the base of the rock with his bride. All three were killed, according to the legend.

On pioneer historian skeptically observed, after looking over the terrain at the base of the rock, that Cachow selected an exceptionally lumpy honeymoon bower.

WAKOONA WAS the heroine of a second version of the legend. Her betrothed, Tokumwa, it seems, had a tryst with another Indian maiden, whereupon Wakoona attempted to stab the interloper with a dagger fashioned from the leg of a black bear.

Pinked when he threw up a protective arm, Tokumwa chased after the fleeing Wakoona, but the Indian maiden, fleet as a fawn, outran her pursuer and plunged to her death from the towering pinnacle.

Lover's Leap, a sheer precipice which towers above the Russian River, figures in a legend of romance, tragedy.

He Stays Young With His Hi Fi

By Clarence Bernard Propes

THERE IS HI FI and hi fi but in the hands of an expert and a connoisseur it becomes very high hi fi.

Such is the case of Mark and Harriet Feinberg. In the red-walled living room of their immaculate three-room apartment at 1011 Ximeno Ave. is one giant tropical plant, some very comfortable furniture, a darkened television set and a hi-fi system that consists of a pre-amplifier, an amplifier, a tuner, a record changer, a tape recorder and 14 loud speakers.

"An outfit like this belongs in a great hall," said Feinberg, "but this is where we live and listen."

FEINBERG IS an advertising man while Harriet Feinberg is a nurse at Community Hospital. Both show the same great pride in their home and the hi-fi system.

"We share interests," said Mark, and Harriet smiled in agreement. Her small kitchen is her domain, completely and efficiently equipped with everything a chef might dream of. The center of life is the front room with the golden sounds from the hi fi system.

The 14 speakers are distributed about the room with can-niness and care. One set of three is in an immense cabinet under the tuner and amplifiers. Another set of three is in a corner cabinet while a third set is over an artificial fireplace that was once a Murphy bed cabinet. Two wall speakers complete the ensemble.

FEINBERG engineered his own system, for, as he said, "I wanted the finest to give me the living presence of music."

He finds each set of speakers has its own sound and tone. He adapts the speaker characteristics to individual recordings. While he was there, he demonstrated his theories by sending an ancient chant through one set of speakers; a fandango through another set. For Gershwin's "Rhapsody In Blue" he used all the speakers, controlling the sound like a conductor. He threw the music from one set of speakers to another, with the notes almost visible as they flowed and leaped about the red-walled room.

His hi fi system is the result of a lifelong interest in music. It began three years ago when he became interested in hi fi. "I studied a year before I bought a single piece of equipment," he said. "We had to get rid of our nine tanks of tropical fish first."

"We had several thousand fish. We even had red, white and blue guppies. We had to clear out our tropical plants, too, to make room."

FEINBERG ADMITS that he is "pushing 60" and, as the result of an active and busy career, he feels that he must either keep up his interests and "stay alive, while I am alive," or let himself go and age rapidly. His career includes service with the Fifth Marines in World War I (he's proud of being the first American soldier to set foot in Germany after the war) and many years of travel to and from Europe as a cheese expert for the government and later as an importer. He has been with Golden State, a dairy products firm, for about 10 years.

A perfectionist, he has labored hard to achieve the realism he is constantly seeking and he finds hi fi an adequate outlet for his interests. His recordings bring listeners as close to the subjects as the original recording microphones. The soft breathing of a singer is audible and the swirl of notes from the brasses can seem inches away. A recording of a railway train brings the sound booming into the room.

The sounds are capably controlled. In spite of their power and depth a passerby on the street outside would not suspect the presence of such power and volume.

FOREVER SEEKING the ideal of the "living presence of music," Feinberg still is not satisfied. He has ordered a stereophonic or binaural set that will bring new horizons of sound into the small room. This set will require special recordings which will take two needles to play, each needle for a different section of an orchestra. With the proper placing of two sets of speakers the listener is surrounded by music the way a concert goer is surrounded by the musicians.

This may be what Feinberg is looking for but it is doubtful. He will listen and then he'll search for new wonders in sound.

BOOK REVIEWS

JAMES A. MICHENER

After writing about the Pacific war in his best-selling "The Bridges of Toko-Ri," James A. Michener turns to last fall's Hungarian revolt in "The Bridge at Andau" (Random House, $3.50). When the spark of war ignited in Budapest, Michener hurried to Europe, interviewed hundreds of liberty-loving Hungarians, and actually helped many of the 20,000 refugees who poured over the wooden Andau bridge to freedom. He gives an on-the-spot account of what really happened—the incredible barbarism of the Russians and the agony and suffering that resulted, but with a people, though defeated, still holding up their heads in haughty contempt of their oppressors.

WHEN THE reader lays down Stephen Longstreet's "The Promoters" (Simon and Schuster, $3.95) he is amazed to find that the world he lives in isn't brawling Texas but Hollywoodish California. For 373 close-packed pages, the reader has lived in Texas and been dominated by two unforgettable men, "Judge" Alex Cantlin, part Mexican Indian and part Irish-American, and Joel Tropp, a promotion man who has come up the hard way from his share-cropper ancestry, fighting compulsive alcoholism all the way, and losing most of the time.

Almost as well as the reader knows Cantlin and Tropp he knows a succession of lesser folk—Celeste, Cantlin's daughter, uncannily like him; Blossom Garzil, drum majorette who knows more about sex than her letters, and gets to be a Hollywood star; Dr. Hurwitz who figures in a hilarious satire on psychoanalysis, and Moira Novak, a $50 prostitute who disapproves of the way E. E. Cummings punctuates his writing.

On the delightful side is Esme Potter, who loves Joel Tropp.

Joel, with realistic hard sense does not let her go overboard, which proves his basic integrity.

"Hard-hitting" describes Longstreet's writing better than any other term that comes to mind. And "The Promoters" is strictly for the adults, and not squeamish ones, either.

Longstreet, a resident of Los Angeles, is an author, critic, artist and playwright. He has received awards for his paintings. He received the Billboard Award for "High Button Shoes" and the Photoplay Award for "The Jokson Story." His novels to date have included "The Pedlocks" and "The Lion at Morning." His travel book "The World Revisited" is on best seller lists.

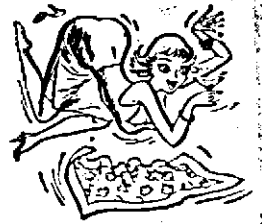

A STRANGE STORY of terror is "The Nightwalkers" (Les Noctambules in French) by Beverly Cross (Little, Brown, $3). Horrible vengeance is meted out to a wartime collaborator by a group which waited and planned for years after the war for its special kind of atonement. And innocently involved in the plans is a young English student at the Sorbonne. This novel of Paris is so stark in its realism that the reader often shudders but continues to read on.

IN THE FALL of 1847 a man with long blond hair, wearing the clothes of a mountaineer, appeared in the great interior valley of California. He was James D. Savage, the place was the Tulare Valley, now known as the San Joaquin. In six short years he became ruler over hundreds of Tulareno Indians who called him "El Rey Tulareno." Savage exploited the Indians in his trading posts and mining activities. He led the Mariposa Battalion in the War of 1851-52 and on one of his forays discovered Yosemite. His story is told, documented, in "Jim Savage and the Tulareno Indians" by Annie P. Mitchell (Westernlore Press, $3.50). The author was born in the old mining camp of Tailholt in Tulare County and she knows her material, much of which has appeared in the Quarterly of the California Historical Society.

A DISQUIETING but thoughtful book is "A Watcher on the Rhine" (Morrow, $4), an appraisal of present-day Germany by Brian Connell, British journalist considered one of the best informed contemporary observers of Germany. Connell believes that hope for the new Germany lies in its youth, but he is doubtful about the youth and he believes that the basic German character does not change. "The youth of university age were born too late to remember the downfall of the Weimar Republic," he writes. "They grew up with the brass bands, banners and victory parades of the Nazis, which merged, as they became teenagers, into the horror of mass bombings, the dislocation of destruction and the hunger of the years of defeat. . . . They would probably pay any political price necessary to sustain financial security."

VAUGHAN WILKINS, author of "And So—Victoria," returns to his forte as a historical novelist in "Lady of Paris" (St. Martin's Press, $3.95). The lady is Theresia Cabarrus, Princess de Chimay, whose exciting life was connected intimately with great events of revolutionary and imperial France. Known as the "consort of a nation," she inspired the fall of Robespierre. After the Reign of Terror, she received the adulation of Paris as "Our Lady of Mercy." In passing, it should be told that she refused the offer of marriage of the young Napoleon. "I believe, General, that I could do better for myself," she pertly told him.

"BOTTOMS UP"

That's the cover illustration and title of a hilarious new paperback (Dell, 25c) which the publishers call, appropriately, "a good-to-the-last drop guide through the mazes and hazes of Whiskeyland." In addition to scores of cartoons, there are anecdotes and wise-cracks on drinkers — beginners and veterans.

WHEN JUDGE Jacob M. Braude of Chicago started making speeches 40 years ago he began paying close attention to other speakers. He discovered that most of them bored their audiences with talks that were too long, that they digressed too widely, they included too many dreary passages of statistics, and that too few used illustrative anecdotes. He began collecting little gems of this kind until today, calling upon a collection of more than 40,000 of them, he can illustrate any point he wishes in a way that's pleasing to an audience. Of these, he has included almost 3,000 into "Braude's Second Encyclopedia of Stores, Quotations and Anecdotes" (Prentice-Hall, $4.95). Not even an occasional speaker should overlook Judge Braude's book.

FOR MUSIC LOVERS, there is "Olin Downes on Music: A Selection from His Writings During the Half-Century, 1906-1955" (Simon and Schuster, $5). Edited by the widow of the veteran music critic of The New York Times, this is largely a re-issue of articles about music matters. Mr. Downes' copy is often rich in satire, or devastating with its fire, but always fresh in its approach and warmly human in content.

"I CAN JUMP PUDDLES" (World, $3.50) is Alan Marshall's eighth published book in his native Australia, and it marks his first appearance to an American audience. It is a happy story about a boy who grew up in the bush country of Australia a half-century ago—and it is happy despite the fact that the lad, an infantile paralysis victim, spent his childhood and youth on crutches.

What critics say about

"THE BRIDGE AT ANDAU" by James Michener

"It would be a good thing for this country and for the world if 'The Bridge at Andau' were read by everyone over 21 in America . . ."

ORVILLE PRESCOTT, The New York Times

"The year will not—it could not—bring a more important or a more profoundly moving book than James A. Michener's chronicle of the Hungarian revolt. . . . With the narrative skill to be expected of the author of 'Tales of the South Pacific,' with a journalist's eye for the telling detail, Mr. Michener restores it all: boys and girls in their teens destroying Soviet tanks with homemade gasoline bombs, the A. V. O. (Hungarian secret police) mowing down Red Cross workers, the slaughter of A. V. O. men by their countrymen who had endured torture unequalled in modern times . . ."

VERNIE LOOKS BACK ON

19 Years in Majors

By George Lederer

Pitchers dreaded to see Vernie come up to bat.

SPRING ISN'T quite the same this year for Vernon Decatur Stephens Jr.

For the first time in 19 years the former Poly High and Long Beach City College star has not signed a baseball contract. He has, in effect, hung up his flannels and is now hanging panels.

Stephens, for 15 years one of the American League's most dangerous hitters and leading shortstops, announced his retirement recently to become part owner of a partition and paneling manufacturing business in Fullerton.

"I HAD TO QUIT some time and I just decided that now was the best time," said the 36-year-old Stephens, who spent six frustrating years with the old St. Louis Browns before one of the biggest trades in baseball history sent him to the Boston Red Sox in 1947.

"Baseball has been wonderful. I couldn't have been in anything else that could have been one-tenth as good to me.

"From a physical standpoint I suppose I could have played another year or two. But now, at last, I'll get to spend some time with my family. I don't know what it's like to be home in the summer."

VERN WILL HAVE a chance to find out soon. He recently bought some land in the fast-growing resort of Hesperia where he plans to build a vacation home for his wife, Bernice, and children Vern III, 14; Ronnie, 9½, and Wendy, 4½.

"It'll be a lot of fun for the kids with swimming and horseback riding. And I've already joined the country club. Now, between paneling, maybe I can get in some golf."

Stephens' venture into Fiber Comb Unlimited, Inc., started by accident.

"A close friend of mine in the restaurant business needed a good way to separate noisy banquet groups from the other customers. Soundproof partitioning was the answer and the start of our corporation."

VERN PLAYS a versatile role in the corporation, just as he did in the majors as a shortstop, third baseman and, on occasion, as an outfielder.

"I do most anything. Sell, lay panels and help in the company's supervision."

"Would you be tempted to go back into baseball as a coach or manager?"

"Nobody wants to be a manager or coach these days. You never know from month to month whether you'll have a job. I haven't had any offers along that line and I'm not looking for any now. But, I suppose if the right thing came along I might change my mind."

THE "RIGHT THING," Stephens indicated, would be a major or Coast League offer, but not lower than triple-A classification.

Until that opportunity presents itself Stephens plans to remain active in baseball by helping in Long Beach's immense junior program.

He has been engaged by Ned Brown, a Long Beach oilman, as an adviser to Little League, PONY League and Babe Ruth League teams sponsored by Brown.

"I'll meet with the managers and teach kids not only to play ball, but to be good sports and good competitors at the same time."

The Brown Drilling Co. includes interests in New Zealand, Venezuela, Trinidad and Turkey, where Brown has organized kid baseball programs.

"AFTER WE GET things set around here," Stephens said, "I may get to travel to those countries as a sort of kid baseball 'ambassador'."

As a baseball diplomat Stephens is well qualified. He played in 1,695 major league games and was never ejected by the umpires. It's an enviable record, one that compares with spending 15 years in the Army and never growling at the top sergeant.

Stephens carries into retirement a lifetime major league batting average of .287, 244 home runs, 1,844 hits and 1,167 runs-batted-in. He performed on six American League All-Star teams, led the league in runs-batted-in with 109 in 1944 and twice tied for the lead in that department with 159 and 141 in 1949 and 1950, respectively. He also topped the league in home runs with 24 in 1945.

DESPITE THIS impressive record Stephens found it difficult to pinpoint his top performances.

"My biggest thrill was just being able to play in the majors. But I remember one good day I had with the Browns against the Yankees in 1945. Spud Chandler was pitching for New York and I hit two homers, a double and a single. But we lost in the ninth, 5-4.

"Another game with the Red Sox made me feel a lot better, though. It was August of '46, the year we lost the pennant to Cleveland in a playoff game. We were playing the Indians for first place that night and we trailed by two runs going into the last of the ninth. I hit a home run to win the game that put us in first place."

STEPHENS PICKED Allie Reynolds, the Yankee Super Chief, as the pitcher who gave him the most trouble.

Stephens placed Lemon and Reynolds on his "all-star" team as right-handed pitchers and named Hal Newhouser of the Tigers as the outstanding southpaw of his time.

"My outfield would have to be Ted Williams, Joe DiMaggio and Stan Musial. I don't see how you can improve on that. (Musial was the only National Leaguer mentioned by Stephens because he faced Stan several times in St. Louis city series and also in the 1944 World Series.)

"I'D HAVE TO PICK Yogi Berra as my catcher and Mickey Vernon at first base. It's tough to choose between Bobby Doerr and Joe Gordon at second. Shortstop? Phil Rizzuto without a doubt. Put George Kell on third. That's it."

To manage the mythical club Stephens picked Joe McCarthy, who guided the Red Sox from 1948 to 1950 and was elected to the Hall of Fame last month.

"McCarthy had the ability to watch everyone on the field at the same time. He was a great manager."

After 19 years in the majors, Vernie Stephens has quit baseball to enter panel manufacturing.

Vern laughed off his oft-publicized feuds with Ted Williams.

"WE CREATED THAT ourselves," Stephens said.

"There were 14 writers covering the Red Sox in spring training in 1949. And, of course, they couldn't all be writing about baseball. One day after batting practice Ted was clowning in the shower room like he always did. We got to sparring around in fun when one of the Boston writers happened to stick his nose through the door and saw us. The next day he broke the story that we were 'feuding'."

"Ted said, 'Okay, we'll really give 'em something to write about.'"

"So Ted and I agreed not to shake hands at home plate if one of us hit a homer with the other on base. We would wait until we got to the dugout. That's how it started."

Around the World With

FROM MEXICO

We intend to eat Mexican food in Mexico but are kind of worried about breakfast. Where in Mexico City can we get American breakfasts...

I STILL PREFER Sanborn's—the old Sanborn's on Madero street. Just for the atmosphere of the antique building and, probably, nostalgia. The two new Sanborn's are drug-store fountains.

If the weather is good, the Bamer Hotel roof is beautiful. The breakfasts are just fair but it is pretty and you can't hurt ham and eggs much.

...and should we wait until we get to Taxco to buy gifts in silver?

I hear from all sides that Taxco silver is less expensive in Mexico City than in the monument town of Taxco. They say it's due to the competition and the fact that NO tourist leaves Taxco without buying some silver anyway.

There are a lot of good shops around the Hotel Monte Cassino and Hotel Geneva area. And Mexican silver, I think, is becoming the best designed and best priced anywhere in the world.

I recall that you once explained the peculiar laws on drinking in Ireland. Would you mind going over them again for me?

THE PUBS of Ireland close abruptly at 10 o'clock at night. In the country they are closed all day Sunday.

This has led to a curious subterfuge of the "bona fide traveler."

Taking the English common law, Ireland has decided that a traveler must be served food and drink at any time of the day.

After 10 o'clock at night, the people of Dublin get in their cars and drive like mad five miles out of town to the "bona fides."

In the country on Sunday the farmer mounts his bicycle and pedals to the next village. Passing en route the people of that village pedaling to HIS village.

The Garda, the blue-uniformed Irish police, wander in from time to time and check names and addresses. However, if you are caught lying about your distance from home, the fine runs about 28 cents.

Austria is on our European itinerary next winter. We would like to do some skiing. Where is the best place?

IN ALL THE Austrian Tyrol, Kitzbuehl is probably the most popular. It is a little town of two blocks of main street. The Asilberg-Paris express peanut whistles around it to avoid running through the Middle Age walls.

The prices are extremely reasonable. The ski clothes are a fourth to one-half U. S. prices and a great selection.

Your mailed questions will be answered (no phone calls). Send a stamped and addressed envelope to Stan Delaplane, Southland Magazine, Independent Press-Telegram, Sixth and Pine, Long Beach 12, Calif.

TRAVEL AND RESORTS

They Hate Signs

Sign haters and outdoor lovers everywhere will rejoice in a recent ruling of the Fourth District Court of Appeals that the deed restriction against "FOR SALE" and other signs on property in Apple Valley are reasonable and enforceable.

These restrictions were placed of record at the time of subdivision to insure the comfortable use and enjoyment of the land by present and future owners. These restrictions are contained in all of the deeds executed by Apple Valley Building and Development Company and cover the entire subdivided area of Apple Valley.

The decision was given in a case brought by the Apple Valley Building and Development Company against Gordon Snider to enforce the deed restriction which prohibits signs on residences, except one showing the name of the occupant. The Appellate Court reversed a ruling of the San Bernardino Superior Court that the restriction was not enforceable.

The unanimous decision by Presiding Justice Stanley Mussell, in which Justices Banard and Griffin concurred, insures that property in Apple Valley will be used only for the purpose for which it was originally purchased, and that no person will be permitted to disregard the restrictions.

The ruling establishes a precedent that the restrictions are reasonable and enforceable and that all property owners can enforce any breach of the restrictions that might interfere with the comfortable enjoyment of their property.

Living It Up

For only $17.50 each, a couple can enjoy a big week end in famous Las Vegas under the terms of a new "package" offered by Trans World Airlines through travel agents. The price includes room and bath for three days and two nights at the Dunes Hotel on "The Strip," breakfast both mornings, a buffet banquet and a dinner, afternoon cocktails, and admission to the spectacular stage show. TWA serves Las Vegas with 10 flights daily, including low-fare Sky Tourist service.

Taxis for Real

Haggling with the driver over the cab fare in Mexico City is no more. According to a report received by the American Society of Travel Agents, the Mexican government stepped in and now requires local cabbies to paint their hacks yellow and to place meters therein. Results are easy on the eyes and easier on the pocketbook. Passengers now pay the pesos registered on the meter plus, of course, a reasonable tip.

HOW TO Take Off Old Finish With Paint Remover for a Smooth Surface

1. TAKE OFF old finish with paint remover. Spread it on surfaces evenly—as if you were painting them. When finish becomes soft, it's ready to scrape off. If you're going to re-enamel the piece, you may not have to remove old finish. In this case, sand surfaces and wash them with steel wool soaked in turpentine.

2. WIDE SCRAPER digs softened finish down to bare wood. Make one run with it down surface, then wipe blade. You may have to recoat surface several times to get off all paint or varnish. For best results, follow the manufacturer's directions on the container. Room should be well ventilated when remover is used.

3. STEEL WOOL, dipped in paint remover rubs off stubborn paint spots—let's you get into cracks and crevices. Before you use it, scrape off all the paint you can, and recoat surface with paint remover. Follow direction of wood grain with steel wool pad. When it is caked with softened paint, resoak new one in paint remover.

4. CLEAN WOOD with piece of burlap soaked in turpentine—or according to clean-up directions on paint remover container. Hint: Sawdust sprinkled freely on surfaces, then wiped with burlap pad, speeds cleaning job. Sawdust absorbs the excess paint remover while the burlap acts as "abrasive" and absorbent agent. Finish job by smoothing surface with sandpaper.

Oriental gardens of Huntington Library and Art Gallery are considered to be top example of Japanese garden art in America. Many varieties of flowers bloom there.

Camellias in all their glory may now be seen in San Marino's Huntington Gardens.

Heavenly Garden of Flowers

FLOWER LOVERS whether they are tourists or long-time Southern California residents, experience a real thrill when they visit the five-acre camellia garden, now in full bloom, at the Huntington Library and Art Gallery, San Marino.

The garden is at its best right now, for there are more than a thousand named varieties of Camellia Japonica in full flower. Camellias have been known in

By Walter Finch

California for more than 100 years. On Feb. 3, 1832, a shipment of plants arrived in Sacramento, sent across the Isthmus of Panama, by steamer to San Francisco, and thence by river boat to its destination. These were the first camellias to enter California.

The Huntington camellia garden, begun as a test garden, has been open to the public during the blooming season every year since 1932. On both sides of winding paths where oaks form a canopy of shade and filtering light, the plants brighten the hill with their clear symmetrical blossoms.

But the camellias are only one of the many beautiful sights in the botanical gardens at the Huntington Library. Few visitors explore the entire 50 acres open to visitors. A series of trips the year around would take in each flowering cranny in the more remote corners as well as the better-known expanses of lawn, rose garden, Oriental garden and camellia garden.

The desert plant garden lies to the left as the visitor enters the grounds. Spring and summer find its 10 acres filled with bright blooms. The desert plant garden constitutes the largest collections of mature specimens of cacti and other succulents growing out of doors in the world. Begun in 1907 as a half-acre garden, the collection now numbers more than 25,000 plants, representing 2,500 species and varieties.

THE ORIENTAL garden, considered to be the finest example of Japanese garden art in America, delights with spring-blooming wistaria, azaleas and flowering fruit trees.

Nine hundred plants representing nearly 50 varieties make the rose garden a joy in the spring and summer. Deciduous Chinese magnolia, juniper, New Zealand silk oak and cape chestnut trees from South Africa fringe the grass slope.

Other trees and shrubs from all continents and a variety of climes provide background — a monkey puzzle tree, Australian bottle brush, cinnamon tree from India, the Mexican hand tree, and down at the base of the garden over-arching the lily ponds the great clumps of edible bamboo from southern China.

Near the Art Gallery are the cycads, the great palm-like plants whose botanical interest lies in the fact that they are the intermediate step in the evolution from fern to flowering plant.

The Huntington Botanical Gardens and the exhibitions in the Library and Art Gallery are open to visitors from 1 to 4:00 p.m. every day except Mondays and certain holidays. Reservations are not necessary except for large groups.

HUNTINGTON LIBRARY and Art Gallery is at 1151 Oxford Rd., San Marino. To get there from Long Beach drive north on Lakewood Blvd. which becomes Rosemead; turn left on Huntington Dr., then turn right on Oxford Rd.

The 10-acre garden of desert plants at the San Marino institution constitutes the world's largest cacti and succulent collection growing outdoors.

We All Can Have Beautiful Mums

Beautiful mums may be grown by all. This is author's prize-winning display at the So. Calif. Flower Show.

By David I. Gillfillan

TODAY I WOULD like to discuss the propagation and culture of what I believe to be our finest fall-flowering perennial—the chrysanthemum. In Long Beach area we are indeed a privileged people in that we can grow all types of this favorite, from the small buttons to the large-flowering exhibition types right in our own backyard.

In addition to the many different types and colors, we find that by selecting the proper varieties we can have mums in bloom from September right in to the month of January—many of prizewinning quality if the cultural rules are followed.

There are three methods by which the chrysanthemum may be propagated: by seed, cuttings and root divisions. The last two are most generally used by private growers and home gardeners. We find the commercial growers propagating thousands of plants from seed each year with the hope of introducing some new outstanding varieties.

CUTTINGS ARE BEST taken about mid-March, but they can be started earlier or later. The main reason we start the plants from cuttings is to be sure that we are starting out with strong, healthy plants, free from nematodes or disease. With this in mind, be sure, if you are using root divisions, that the plants are clean.

In selecting the cuttings, use the new growth coming from the old roots and take the cuttings from the outside. In other words, use the new shoots farthest away from the center of the old plant. Cuttings should not be taken from new growth coming from the old stems of last year's plants as they very often go blind; that is, there is a possibility that the plants will not bloom.

The cuttings should be about four inches long and are cut with a sharp knife just below a leaf. The lower leaves are removed and the cutting is inserted in a mixture of clean sharp sand. This is placed in the propagating bench or a regular nursery, flat, tamped down firmly with a brick or block of wood, and given a thorough soaking before the cuttings are set.

NEVER FORCE the cuttings into the sand. This procedure will bruise the rooting structure or "heel." Take a piece of wood about the size of a lead pencil, make the hole in the sand about one inch deep, place the cutting in the hole and tamp the sand firmly around the base of the cutting. This is very important. It is here that many home gardeners make the mistake of having the sand too loose around the cutting. When this happens, the cutting will not root. Just a word of caution: Be sure that you tamp around the base of the cutting, not around the neck at the surface of the sand.

The propagating flat or bench should be in some shady location such as a lath house. The sand should never be allowed to dry out. The cuttings should be rooted in about three weeks, at which time they are taken from the flat and placed in three-inch pots, being transplanted to the garden about three weeks later.

After you have taken your cuttings from the old plants, dig them up and heel them in, in some corner of the garden. This is what we call a safety measure.

THE BEST SOIL for growing chrysanthemums is one that contains an abundance of humus and organic matter. The soil, incidentally, should be slightly on the acid side, and because soils in this area are largely alkaline, dusting the bed with soil sulphur, using three pounds to 100 sq. ft. and applying one-half inch of peat moss over the entire bed will be of tremendous help. Over the peat moss apply a two-inch layer of steer manure, bonemeal at the rate of six pounds to 100 sq. ft. and organic fertilizer at the rate of four pounds to 100 sq. ft. This is turned under the depth of the spade, left in a rough condition and given a thorough soaking. When you are ready to plant, rake the bed smoothly.

The plants are set out in rows. The rows should be two feet apart and the plants spaced 12 or 14 inches apart.

When the plants are six inches tall, snip out the centers. When the new shoots are six inches long, they, too, should have their centers pinched out. This procedure is carried out until about the middle of August, according to the variety, but in most cases the ordinary garden variety is pinched or "stopped," as we call it, at least three times during the season.

The plants should be staked when they are 10 inches tall and proper tying should be carried out until the flowers are out.

DON'T FORGET DEPT:

Don't forget that this is an excellent time to plant balled citrus—Don't forget that this is also a good time to start dichondra lawns. For a good stand of dichondra, use one pound of seed to 1,000 sq. ft.—Don't forget to plant two or three dozen gladiolus every two weeks for a long season of bloom—Don't forget to tell your nurseryman you saw his ad in the Independent, Press-Telegram—Don't forget the big special garden section next Sunday and don't forget that the man who goes to church on Sunday will enjoy his garden better on Monday.

Time to Think of Shade

By Bob Gilmore

IT IS NOT too early for planting shade trees for your late spring and summer garden. Warm weather frequently comes early in the year and ornamental trees started now will make your garden more enjoyable later on. Some of the old favorites for providing shade in this area are sycamores, acacias, elms, olive and pepper trees.

Olive trees thrive throughout California, dotting the landscape all the way from Sacramento in the north to San Diego in the south. The trees are cultivated commercially to a large extent in the southern half of the state and as an ornamental the olive has much in its favor.

THE TREES reach an approximate height of 25 feet and thus fit admirably into the average-sized garden. The foliage has a distinctive color, being a delicate shade of gray-green. The fruits, which are purple in color, are quite attractive but should be cured before being eaten. A fresh olive has an extremely bitter flavor.

The evergreen elm, which attains the same height as the olive, is another splendid shade tree for this area. The tree has a well-rounded contour. During the cooler parts of the year this so-called evergreen may lose some of its foliage. The branches bend over backwards, often reaching almost to the ground. Because of its wide-spreading character the evergreen elm provides an abundance of shade.

THE CHINESE ELM is comparable to the evergreen elm except it is a deciduous plant, the trees losing their foliage

Speaks Tuesday

One of the west's foremost garden authorities, Dorothy Johnson (Dorothy Digs), will lecture before the Stratford Square Garden Club at 8 p.m. Tuesday, March 12. Mrs. Lorraine Kudick, 2821 Charlemagne, garden club program chairman, is in charge of the arrangements for the meeting, to be held at the home of Mrs. John Russell, 5231 E. 28th St., Long Beach. Mrs. Johnson's topic will be "The Most Important Thing in Your Garden."

during winter. It is the speed burner of the shade-giving trees, growing to 50 or 60 feet in a relatively short time. It should not be squeezed into a small-sized landscape. Once established, it thrives on neglect, neither heat, cold, floods or drought causing it any undue hardship.

The California sycamore, if you want a 100-foot tree is one of the best for Southern California growing conditions. It is deciduous but during the dormant state the mottled bark and white markings give it real distinction. These characteristics will provide an accent mark in your winter garden.

THE EUROPEAN sycamore, also used for shade, performs beautifully during the summer season. It may be shaped as desired, severe pruning causing little harm. It is a fast grower. The white birch is exceedingly attractive in lawn areas where the trees should always be planted in threes. As the trees develop the bark turns white, a sight of much beauty in winter when the trees are devoid of any foliage. White birches are often used near pools where their attractive shape casts a delightful reflection. Other possibilities for shade trees during the summer are: pepper trees, acacia floribunda, eucalyptus ficifolia and the "camphor tree."

Fatsias for Foliage

Fatsia japonica lends itself to being trained, as here on a pillar of porch.

By Gladys Diesing

THE BIG BOLD leaves of the fatsias can be used to create striking foliage effects particularly effective with the broad structural lines of modern homes.

The largest is Fatsia papyrifera or rice paper plant, so called because the stem pith is the source of the delicate rice paper made by the Chinese. Slender grey trunks terminate

Camellia Display

Flower lovers revel in the beauty of 50,000 blooming camellia bushes in the 23-acre camellia forest in the Descanso Gardens, 1418 Descanso Dr., La Canada.

The third annual Descanso Gardens Camellia Show opened March 2 and will continue through March 10, sponsored by the Los Angeles Camellia Council, Ltd. and the Los Angeles County Department of Parks and Recreation. Special features are slated daily.

In clusters of great foot-wide, deep-fingered leaves, green above and whitish beneath which are especially attractive when viewed from below. Against a plain expanse of wall, the plant will cast interesting shadow patterns. December brings the large wooly panicles of creamy-white flowers carried above the leaf cluster. This, however, results in the only bad feature of the plant — self-sown seeds which often bring a horde of little plants, even invading the neighbor's premises.

Fatsia japonica is a smaller-growing plant forming a shrub 4 to 6 feet high and about as broad. It, too, has large, deeply lobed leaves but they are dark green and glossy instead of dull. Its amenability to container confinement and tolerance of full shade make it a good plant for the patio where its lush foliage may be enjoyed at close quarters. It will grow in the sun but the foliage tends to take on a yellow tone. Flowers appear in the fall followed by clusters of shiny black seeds. Thinning will often result in forming an even more interesting pattern than results from massed effects.

A PLANT EVEN MORE interesting to work with in forming pattern and structural effects is the hybrid, Fatsia xedra. This is a cross between Fatsia japonica and Hedera helix hibernica (Irish ivy) and takes on characteristics of both plants, being shrubby like the fatsia but sending out long vine-like stems like the ivy. The leaves are shiny green with three to five lobes. Pruning and training will form it into almost any shape desired. Although it vines, it requires support. Some means of attachment must be used.

Both Fatsia japonica and Fatsia xedra are susceptible to aphids and mealybugs so a spray for sucking and chewing insects like oil-nicotine should be used. None of the fatsias are particularly as to soil, but of course like best a rich, well-drained loam. All are susceptible to low temperatures but will make rapid recovery even when temperatures drop as low as 25°.

By Dorothy Jonson

When the aphid army invades your rose garden, the easiest thing to do is turn to a two-purpose spray that will combat mildew, rust and blackspot at the same time that you destroy aphids, thrips and other destructive insects. Thus, one material does an all-around job as far as roses are concerned. It shouldn't be necessary to spray very often.

You cannot possibly prevent aphids from reinfesting your garden at the height of the migratory period. You can wash them down with the water hose between sprayings and, if you do a very thorough job when you do spray, you can thus "nurse" your roses through this trying period without the necessity of over-spraying . . . and without permitting them to become broken down in health and vitality by the infestation. The advent of hot weather will help to get rid of the aphid by natural process of elimination.

Garden Tips

GARDENING TIPS for the week . . . Dahlias should be staked at the time of planting. Set the "eye" end adjacent to the stake but not quite touching it. If the stakes are driven into the ground at a later date they may injure the roots.

Newly planted deciduous stock such as roses or fruit trees must have lots of water to get established. Let the water soak into the soil as any drying out may seriously injure the plants.

As the weather warms up you should become more vigilant in your fight against bugs and plant diseases. These varmints thrive in warm weather . . . just like the plants they attack. Consult with your nurseryman regarding the type of control most necessary at this time in your particular locality.

CAMERA ANGLES

Doing What Comes Naturally

By the Shutterbug

ARE YOU looking for an easy way to get better pictures of your family and friends? Well, you'll have a superior snapshot of a person every time if you just try catching him in the midst of some activity he enjoys—or if you give him something to do that's natural and typical for him to be doing.

In that way, you can be sure even the most self-conscious or reluctant subject will relax and be himself. Although your camera's aimed right at him, his attention remains on the task he's performing—and you'll be spared a stiff-necked pose or a glassy-eyed stare in your viewfinder.

BY LETTING ACTIVITIES keynote your snapshots of people, your reputation as a picture-taker is bound to grow. Your prints will show more than just what your subjects look like. Rather, they'll reveal what each person is like—what he likes to do—what it's like to be with him.

Of course, there are other points to remember, too, when you snap your friends and family. Check the background carefully before you shoot. Make sure it's not so cluttered and confusing that your subject will be lost in a welter of detail.

CAMERA VIEWPOINT can also make a world of difference in your pictures of people. In general, you'll do well to snap your subject on his own level or from slightly below. Naturally, your choice of camera angle will depend on the particular elements you want to emphasize in your picture.

When you're picturing people, study and select background, viewpoint and lighting carefully. But most important of all, catch your subjects "in action."

ARE YOU CONFUSED by f-numbers, film speeds, guide

numbers, shutter settings—and their relation to light and distance? The Pic-Kwick Photo-Dial, a neat new camera aid, will help you. It is direct-reading; can be used for any film, in any light, day or night, and requires no calculations. Comes in a plastic case containing latest data on films, flashbulbs and photofloods. Includes a leaflet called Pic-Kwick PhotoNotes which gives a basic lesson in photography, and even tells how to take pictures by moonlight, or of city lights, or from the TV tube. Costs only $2 post-paid including tax. Available by mail from Russell J. Love, 24 California St., San Francisco 11, Calif.

PET PARADE

Keys to a New Life

By Eleanor Avery Price

TO GIVE sightless persons the simple dignity of freedom and independence is the aim of the Cherry Valley Eye Dog Foundation at Beaumont, according to Mrs. Virginia Strahan, general manager of the foundation.

The pleasure given those persons who are students of or owners of dogs from the foundation justifies the endeavors of those who strive to continue the operation. Mrs. Strahan said, pointing out that the enterprise is one of only three licensed guide dog schools west of the Mississippi.

The Eye Dog Foundation (founded by the Hazel Hurst Foundation for the Blind) was previously located in Aruba but suspended operations when it lost its state-licensed trainer. When another state-licensed trainer, Everett L. Espy, was obtained, the location was changed to Beaumont, and, according to Andrew Marrin, executive secretary of the State Guide Dog Board, the school is rendering top service to blind persons from California and other states.

ONLY A SHORT time ago, Harry G. Klingbiel, rehabilitation counselor for the State Bureau of Vocational Rehabilitation, inspected the foundation and reported that the most discriminating judge would be pleased with the requirements that have been met.

The Eye Dog Foundation is located on a four-acre ranch at 3876 Vineland Ave., Beaumont. The fenced kennels will accommodate a number of dogs. An obstacle course has been erected where dogs and, later, both dogs and students can be adequately trained. Housing for students has been accomplished with the volunteer help of the San Geronio local of the carpenters' union. There is also a garden where fruits, vegetables, chickens and rabbits are raised to save expense. Ronald M. Soutar, apprentice trainer, is caretaker and gardener, and he has had 22 years of experience in soil conservation and similar activities.

APPLICANTS ARE carefully screened for this school because, although there are around 25,000 blind persons in California and approximately 350,000 in the country, only a moderate percentage of blind persons are able to use guide dogs.

Since the cost of providing one blind person with a guide dog is $1,000 or more, including living accommodations during the one-month period of training, the foundation can continue only through donations (tax-deductible). The blind do not pay for the dog or its training, and the organization is strictly non-profit. Even the board of directors is composed of volunteers.

AN ANNUAL CAMPAIGN is inaugurated to solicit public donations, but donations of any amount are welcome at any time. There is never any door-to-door solicitation. Assistance is given by the Lions Club.

As there are approximately only nine guide dog schools in the United States, each one operating independently, there is always a waiting list for dogs. The Eye Dog Foundation is shown in statements of students like that of Mrs. Daisy Fleming of Santee: "To be able to walk out my front door and down the street all by myself will be very close to heaven to me."

VIVIAN LAIRD HILL
A Party Every Night

EVERY NIGHT is an informal party night at Vivian Laird's supper club, Alamitos at 1st St., with gay groups dining and dancing, strolling from the Jungle Room to the Garden Room and Terrace Room—and in general having a bang-up good time.

The way people enjoy themselves at the supper club constantly amazes Vivian Laird Hill, its gracious owner and hostess.

"Many times as they leave," comments Mrs. Hill, "they thank me for a lovely evening. They thank me as thoughtfully and sincerely as if they hadn't had to pay out a cent during the entire evening!"

Perhaps one reason the guests depart so cheerfully is because there's never a cover or minimum charge at Vivian Laird's and dinner prices start as low as $2.25. Reed Williams and his orchestra, featured at the supper club for most of the last four years, play for dancing from 8:30 on. From 9 o'clock on, comic musician Pee Wee Markley goes great guns on the organ, piano and celeste in the Jungle Room. One of three cocktail lounges at Vivian Laird's, the Jungle Room is decorated with brilliant murals of jungle dancing scenes.

Prepared with care by expert chefs, the supper club's cuisine features prime eastern beef, chicken and sea foods. All entrées are accompanied by a large salad, with choice of dressing, baked potato with melted cheese sauce and choice of beverage. Among the many entrées are the 14-ounce charcoal broiled New York steak, $1.50; 10-ounce charcoal broiled top sirloin, $3.50; delectable, tender prime rib au jus, $3.50; broiled whole lobster with drawn butter, $2.50, and tender jumbo shrimp, $2.25.

Opened by Mrs. Hill in December 1947, the spacious supper club has facilities enough to accommodate 450 persons at one time. It is open every night.

—TEDD THOMAS

The Russian from Madison Avenue

by FANNIE HURST

There are times when human relations are cruelly twisted. At the moment, the vast United States and vast Russia are far apart in ideas and ideals. The Soviet government has obscured from our eyes the millions of Russian people living their day-by-day lives behind a miasmic fog.

Fortunately, a memorable humanizing incident once befell me, reminding me that, though crushed to earth, the humanness of nature can rise again.

In 1939 I was in Russia shortly after Tichon, the Patriarch of the Greek Orthodox Church, had been banished and was living in an abandoned monastery about 15 miles outside Moscow. After many difficulties, I finally obtained permission to visit the exiled potentate. Following a drive over deeply rutted roads, I suddenly came to the decaying old monastery, bleak upon a barren hill. Inside the chilly structure I was shown into a bare, white-washed room. Seated on wooden benches along the walls were eight onetime dignitaries of the church.

Finally a door opened and a magnificent figure in ceremonial white, his patriarchal beard flowing over his robes, walked into the room. Then he spoke in laborious, but clear, English: "I understand there are Americans present. Yes?"

I stepped forward and Tichon came toward me with outstretched hands, his face lighting. "You make me happy," he said. "Eight years I lived in your country." Then he added the note of the indomitable brotherhood of man.

"Tell me," he asked, "how are my good friends, Mr. and Mrs. Norman Hapgood? I used to live next door to them on Madison Avenue. We first met while shopping for our groceries at the corner store."

Down the long, often bloody corridors of history, the human race would not have survived to tell its tale except for this brotherhood. It only seems a far cry from the exiled head of the Russian Church to a corner store in Manhattan, U.S.A.

HUBBY'S timely gift tied the marital knot in a hurry.

All is forgiven

by W. E. FARBSTAIN

A magistrate in Phoenix, Ariz., learned why a motorist was given three speeding tickets in one afternoon: he was rushing his badly injured daughter to a hospital. Sentence suspended.

In St. Louis, a young woman handed $389 to the director of the Internal Revenue Bureau, tearfully confessing she had cheated on her tax return. The director permitted her to leave without divulging her name, put the money into the Bureau's "Conscience Fund."

Arrested for drunken driving, a Pittsburgh motorist admitted he had taken "five or six cocktails." The judge, dumfounded at his candor, let him off.

A Chicago divorcee asked the judge to set aside the divorce decree. Her husband, she explained, had just bought her a new convertible.

And a divorcee in Knoxville, Tenn., who returned to her home and found it on fire, dashed into the flames to rescue her ex-husband's picture.

The city council of Graham, N.C., accepted a history teacher's apology for including this multiple-choice question in a term examination: "The Graham City Council is largely composed of a) idiots, b) ignoramuses, c) ne'er-do-wells."

A Detroit girl offered to marry her fiance while he was being held in jail for forging checks to pay the bills for their scheduled wedding.

Employees of a Minersville, Pa., dress manufacturer, who struck because he owed their union $1,500, agreed to lend him the money until he got back on his feet.

The Pompton Lakes, N.J., library announced a Forgiveness Week, during which all overdue books would be accepted without fines.

FIRST "MAJOR BARBARA" in the U.S. was Grace George, shown here with Ernest Lawford in the Shaw comedy. Year: 1915.

Glamor girls of The Army

Today The Salvation Army celebrates a birthday — its 77th in the U.S. Through the years its "soldiers" have gone about their business of saving souls and giving material help to thousands of unfortunates. At the same time, The Army has run up quite a record as a theatrical success. Since 1897, when a chorus line pranced as "Trumpeters of the Purity Brigade," the Salvation Army lass has been glamorized in hits from Major Barbara to Guys and Dolls — and been glamorized in turn by top stars of stage and screen. Herewith, PARADE presents a gallery of them.

MOVIE VERSION starred Wendy Hiller as Major Barbara. Co-stars: Rex Harrison (center), Robert Newton.

MRS. FISKE wrung the hearts of theater-goers as "Salvation Nell" (1908).

MARILYN MILLER was Salvationist in Flo Ziegfeld's Smiles. Year: 1930.

JOAN CRAWFORD was a screen Army lassie in Laughing Sinners in 1931.

GLYNIS JOHNS starred in current stage Major Barbara. New star: Anne Jackson.

CRIME 1957

Why is it booming — and where? Is your life in danger? Start this important new series today

by JACK ANDERSON and FRED BLUMENTHAL PARADE Washington correspondents

THE BULLET-TORN BODY of a man bobbed up near an Eastern city recently. To date, police have not located the killer. But, investigating the victim, they have uncovered the motive: a war between rival mobs over who should control local garbage collection.

This is one facet of crime, 1957. The tactic, murder, is as old as Cain. The target, garbage collection, is one the Prohibition-era gangster would scarcely have soiled his hands with. But crime's new face is no less menacing to you and to America than the Capone look of the 1920s, the Dillinger look of the '30s or the black-marketeer look of the 1940s.

By a skillful blending of old and new, criminal and respectable, crime this year will lift an estimated $20 to $25 billion from American wallets. Your family's share will be $467. It will go painlessly; most Americans seem only dimly aware of the nation's crime problem.

But police are not. "Civil warfare," New York's Police Commissioner Stephen Kennedy brands the nation's crime wave. "Alarming" is FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover's word for the situation.

PARADE reporters have been investigating crime coast to coast. They interviewed law-enforcement officers, inspected the confidential files of the Senate Crime Committee and other inside sources, dug through masses of crime reports and statistics, talked to underworld contacts and victims, visited prisons and reformatories.

Briefly, here is what they learned:

- America has been on a 10-year crime binge, culminating last year in a record 2,534,000 reported crimes — one-third more than in 1951.

- The wave is heading even higher this year. One estimate forecasts 3,000,000 reported crimes.

- The big cities are hardest hit, but no part of the country escapes. Police report crime up in rural areas and small towns. Above all, the new postwar suburbs are beginning to feel it.

- Growing narcotics addiction will add to the increase in other crimes. One official says 25 per cent of the crimes nationally are being staged by dope users.
- Juvenile delinquency is declining slightly. But it is increasing in savagery. The number of teenagers arrested for major crimes — many shockingly vicious — keeps rising.

The sources PARADE talked to are agreed on another point: organized crime in 1957 is better organized than ever, but it is more quiet about it. (Usually rackets, vice, narcotics and gambling are controlled by mobs; holdups, burglary and larceny are not. Murder and assault are practiced by both amateurs and professionals.) In one Southern city, citizens were almost unaware of their vast underworld until a particularly brutal murder forced them to notice it.

Capone-style notoriety went out when organized crime moved into what once were legitimate businesses. Currently, the Senate investigation into labor racketeering points out one example of modern crime in masquerade. Likewise, organized crime reportedly has applied muscle methods to the jukebox business in some places, clothing and real estate in others, even the fruit-and-vegetable business.

At the same time, organized crime is keeping its stranglehold on the old gold mines: gambling, rackets, vice, narcotics. In some places, these businesses have become so professionalized that their rulers speak of "business expenses" (bribes and payoffs), "mergers" (moving in on smaller mobs) and "liquidations" (self-explanatory).

Is There a Big Boss?

PARADE's informants doubt that one supreme overlord — or clique of overlords — rules rackets from coast to coast. Their version of today's underworld organization is a loose confederation of local mobs with "working agreements."

Enforcing these agreements — with blood, if necessary — is the true role of the much-discussed but still shadowy Mafia, these sources feel. A secret society imported from Sicily, the Mafia also is believed to be the communications net between regional mobs. Police often pick up a mobster in, say, Chicago and find an address book full of nation-wide gang contacts. Likewise they know a New York mob may call on out-of-towners to furnish a professional killer; the favor can be returned at some later date.

In one classic case, a victim was hounded from city to city until, after three years and several changes of name, his head was blown off from ambush in a small California town. The killer has never been found. Most major communities have similar cases. Tampa, Fla., a moderate-sized city, currently has 13 believed the result of mob revenge.

Murder of late has been going up; it jumped 4 per cent from 1955 to 1956. But most murders are crimes of the moment, and police make arrests in 92 per cent of cases. Of the other 8 per cent, the Mafia can take credit for a large share. Murder is its livelihood.

Organized crime has further means of livelihood. Jewel thieves and hijackers (a long-dormant crime again on the rise) use special organizations to unload and dispose of loot. Usually these are not tied to the racket mobs. Recently Sen. Estes Kefauver was told that confidence games have gone modern. A witness declared that a mobile mob, complete with contact girls, instructors and bookkeepers, sweeps from city to city in search of victims.

The Menace of Dope

The sinister dope traffic, however, often is laid to the racket mobs — and many police consider this a worse offense than racket murders. "Death on the installment plan," Capt. Karl McCormick of Washington's narcotics squad calls the dope habit. One major source of the organization's supply is Red China.

Of all crimes, the growing use of dope most concerns police. PARADE interviewed. Juvenile crime is alarming, but may be stopped by a frontal assault; the organized mobs are predictable; even stickups and murder follow a pattern. But the dope addict knows no rules — nothing must stand between him and his drug.

Not long ago a Montgomery County, Md., policeman stopped a motorist for a traffic violation and ordered him to the station. The motorist's reply was to shoot the policeman in the head. The killer turned out to be an addict headed home for a "fix."

Hooked with an $18-to-$100-a-day habit, the user will turn to forgery, robbery, prostitution to get money. Dope addicts have helped drive burglary and larceny cases to record highs. At the same time, however, robbery has been dropping. It fell 14 per cent in 1955, and another 1.1 per cent last year.

One reason was an offensive against bank robbery, which had made such headlines previously. Alarmed by the trend, the FBI sponsored a series of law-enforcement conferences emphasizing this crime. Such police instruction, Hoover noted recently, brought an immediate and gratifying drop.

The banks still lose to the rising wave of embezzlement (estimated at $100 million a year from U.S. business) but the embezzler is one of few lone hands turning a neat penny. (See Could You Be an Embezzler?, PARADE, July 29, 1956.) Skilled pickpockets are a dying breed; although forgery still is a problem, the Secret Service, at least, has a high record of convictions; counterfeiting is under control.

What satisfaction police take from these few bright spots is largely offset by a rise in murder, rape and assault, and the juvenile situation. Much teen-age crime (particularly in large cities) is concentrated in auto theft and can be written off to joyriding and skylarking. But Hoover noted recently that "gang-style ferocity" now centers mostly in teenagers, not adult criminals. And it shows no signs of abating.

Hoover and many other police feel that kids who commit adult crimes should be handled with adult tactics, including publishing their names. Says the FBI chief, "Recent happenings shatter the illusion that soft-hearted mollycoddling is the answer..."

Teen-age Killers

He cited as "not isolated incidents" the confessions of a group of Michigan 15-to-17-year-olds to 30 crimes, including rape and murder; the arrest of three teenagers in a Louisiana housebreak-murder; and the shooting of a teacher and wounding of two other persons by a 14-year-old Maryland schoolboy.

Hoover's examples also show that the teen-age problem is not limited to big cities nor even to a few areas of the country. For that matter, the whole crime problem is of nation-wide concern. Preliminary figures show a jump, nationally, of 14.4 per cent over 1955.

The FBI lists eight major crimes: murder, negligent manslaughter, rape, robbery, aggravated assault, burglary, larceny and auto theft. There is little to choose between city and country. Murder and rape are up in the city, down in the country, but the country outdoes the city in assault, burglary and larceny.

The safest place to live, crimewise, is a New England city between 2,500 and 10,000 population, and the most dangerous a South Atlantic city between 100,000 and 250,000. But both share in the nation-wide trend — up 34.4 per cent since 1951. Continued on page 10

DOPE RAID turned up this valuable cache and two prisoners recently. Narcotics traffic, police say, runs into millions — and causes other crimes.

TRAINING PROGRAM gives rookie cops specialized skills. Here a New Jersey State Police instructor demonstrates how to handle a knife attack.

The best weapon to stop crime is a public that knows its enemies

Statistically, this makes the '50s America's most lawless decade — if you believe statistics. One school of thought claims that the crime wave exists only on paper, meaning that there was just as much crime in the past — but more of it is reported today.

Many police officials agree in part. Likewise they admit that population gains account for part of the rise in crime. But neither is a full explanation. Crime has been increasing three times as fast as population.

Paradoxically, the reason most offered by policemen is prosperity. Its effects — more money, vast shifts in population, uneven financial gains, the yearning of some for social status and its symbols — have increased tensions and made many persons dissatisfied, according to Police Chief George Otley of the Chicago Park District, president of the Police Chiefs' Association.

More leisure has given the criminally restless more time to get into trouble.

And inflation has eroded the salaries of many Americans — among them, policemen. The inevitable result is that a good man is hard to find.

Yet modern police work demands qualified officers. Today an applicant must go through intensified training before he sets foot on a beat.

"We don't want the man who seeks a badge so he can throw his weight around," says Washington's Chief Robert Murray. "Nor the man who is job-hopping. But to get the caliber we want, we must offer more incentive."

More and better police is the best way to halt and reverse the increase in crime, officials agree. As proof, they point to Chicago, which added 2,000 men to its force last year, and Washington, which authorized police to work an extra day at extra pay. In both cities crime promptly fell off.

Police also would like to see "stiffer sentences for offenders. And they think legal loopholes which allow criminals to go free should be closed. But most important is an enlightened, educated public.

In coming issues, PARADE will show you the full dimensions of Crime, 1957. Reporters have dug into important cases and will spread them before you in complete detail. Other articles will rip off the new masks that hide old swindles. Still others will show you top sleuths at work — and the cases they solve.

You'll learn how to protect yourself against criminals (and how to spot them). And you'll find out about advances in rehabilitating offenders.

"Eternal vigilance," says Senator Kefauver, "is the price a community and nation must pay to be free of crime. PARADE's survey indicates we must alert all citizens to this growing problem." ■

How you can help stop crime

You can help to stem the wave of crime sweeping the U.S. Here's what law-enforcement officers suggest:

- Don't patronize your local bookie. Your small bet helps to keep organized crime in business, even finances racket murders.
- If you do any hiring, check new employees for criminal records.
- Obey the laws. Don't keep police busy watching you. Free them to go after major violators.
- Give the cops a break. Don't have the attitude they're your enemies.

'Miracle in Hollywood' —a friendly divorce

by LLOYD SHEARER

PARADE West Coast correspondent

What happens when a beautiful actress leaves her husband for another man?

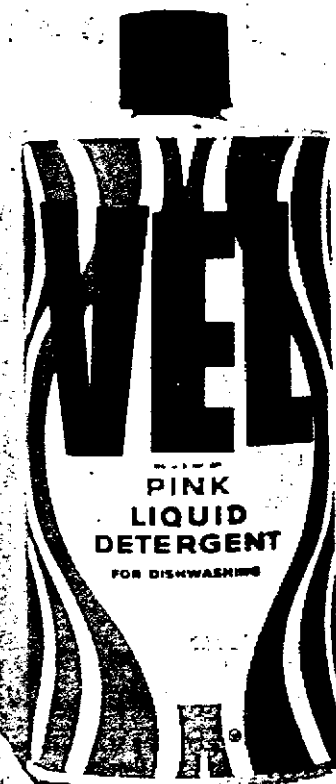

In this emotion-ridden community, the husband frequently resorts to violence (as in the Jeanne Crain case) or sues his wife for community property (as in the Susan Hayward case). But occasionally a star and her husband agree to a divorce without wrangling, bitterness or the airing of unclean laundry—with, instead, mutual respect and consideration for the children. In Hollywood this is called a miracle.

Such a miracle happened recently with Elizabeth Taylor Hilton Wilding, 25, and Michael Wilding, 44. Now that Elizabeth has added still another name—Todd—a review of the hows and whys seems in order.

It was during a trial separation from Wilding that Elizabeth Taylor became attracted to her present husband: Mike Todd, 50, producer of Around the World in 80 Days. When she told Wilding she wanted a divorce, he naturally was hurt. He had left England, where he ranked as the screen's No. 1 light comedian, to marry Elizabeth and come to Hollywood—where his motion-picture career promptly foundered. He had turned down the lead in the road company of My Fair Lady to remain with his wife and their two children.

And now this beautiful young woman was leaving him.

Michael Wilding, however, is a gentleman.

"I saw no point," he says, "in turning the whole thing into a three-ring circus. Why fight about a divorce and all that jazz? Why let bitterness develop that would affect the children?"

"Liz and I sat down and decided that we would sell our house and divide the money, and share the custody of the boys. Liz is to have them for nine months and I for three. The settlement was fair and friendly. So friendly, in fact, that when Liz decided that she'd like a quick Mexican divorce in order to marry Mike Todd, I flew down to Mexico to expedite things with them.

MIRACLE

"People ask me," Wilding continues, "why I don't feel bitter towards Liz and Mike. The truth is that I am adult enough to reconcile myself to circumstances. Elizabeth and Mike Todd did not start going together until we were separated. Todd's conduct in this whole thing has been above reproach. The only one I reproach is myself—for making the kind of climate in which Elizabeth might find other attentions more attractive than my own.

"I am not a particularly strong man. Never have been. I'm like Liz, lazy and slothful. Todd is different. He's a much stronger man than I—a regular dynamo. He's ambitious, energetic, forceful. He can make Elizabeth do things I never could. He can get her up early in the morning when she isn't working. He can get her into a cutting room to help edit film. He can fire her with enthusiasm. He and Liz are opposites. They attract each other.

"The trouble with us was that we were too much alike. I knew that before I married her. I got to love her against my better judgment."

NEW FILM, Raintree County, gives Elizabeth a chance to wear period costume.

Behind the divorce lies a story

What sort of man is Michael Wilding, who talks with such composure and honesty? As a group, actors certainly don't behave this way. But Wilding is an unemotional, low-pressure man who became an actor more by accident than design. Born in Westcliffe-on-Sea in England, educated as a child in Russia, he originally wanted to become a commercial artist.

"When I was 18," he says, "I went to Brussels to study art. Then I got a job in a British film studio designing sets. Next thing someone hired me as a stand-in for Douglas Fairbanks, Jr. in Catherine the Great. They paid me five pounds, and that's how I became an actor."

In the 1930s and '40s Wilding developed into one of England's three outstanding male screen attractions. (The other two: James Mason, Stewart Granger.) He met Elizabeth Taylor for the first time in 1948.

"She was only 16," he recalls, "and had come over to London to star with Robert Taylor in The Conspirators. I saw her in the commissary and she was sort of jazzing around. She had a flawless face and the most provocative figure, and she knew it. Instead of asking the waitress for the salt, she'd swish across the whole length of the commissary floor. Naturally, I was attracted."

Dinner, Then Marriage

A few years later Elizabeth turned up again, this time to make Ivanhoe. Wilding asked her to dinner. Thus began the romance that in 1952 culminated in marriage—and Wilding's abandonment of a 10-year film contract.

Today, friends feel Wilding made a major mistake in leaving England. Although MGM signed him to a contract, he was regarded not as a star in his own right but as "Liz Taylor's husband." He also was cast in a series of very bad pictures.

of careers that didn't match

"Whereas he had been a big shot in England," one of his intimates told me, "and Elizabeth had hung on his every word, in America he deteriorated into a small fish in a very large lake. Disenchantment gradually set in. As Elizabeth grew older she no longer turned to Michael for advice. He seemed unable to advise himself. The crowning blow came when he took the role of Pharaoh in that lemon, The Egyptian. Soon the studio dropped him."

Eventually Wilding found himself reduced to acting in television plays — and nursing his young wife through various illnesses. Whenever she came down with sciatica, neuritis or the spinal-disk ailment for which she recently had an operation in New York, Wilding was a constant visitor to her bedside. He also took marvelous care of their two sons.

Unfortunately, as his career declined, his wife's zoomed. Elizabeth went into Giant and Raintree County while Wilding turned down the road-company lead in My Fair Lady. "I just can't see being away from my family that long," he explained. Instead, he committed himself to make a movie in Sweden. The day he departed for Europe, MGM announced the Wildings had separated.

After that Elizabeth met Mike Todd. When Wilding returned from Europe, she asked for a divorce, and he consented. Elizabeth then took off for New York. Wilding in turn began dating Marie McDonald, ex-actress whose apparent kidnaping soon made headlines. (At the time, he told me he thought the kidnaping was genuine.)

Presently the McDonald case died down. Elizabeth Taylor and Mike Todd went to Acapulco, Mexico. There Wilding joined them and cheerfully agreed to a Mexican divorce. A few days later Elizabeth became Mrs. Michael Todd.

Now I hear Todd will star Wilding in his next production, Don Quixote. How friendly can people get? ■

TUNA TREATS

by BETH MERRIMAN
PARADE FOOD EDITOR

Here's something really new: Crisp pastry, scattered with flecks of sweet pickle, gives a "just right" flavor accent to tuna. Make little pie shells with the pastry, fill with savory creamed tuna and you have a dish to delight your guests. (The recipe is easily increased for a buffet.) Begin meal with fruit cup; with Tuna Treats, serve green peas with mushrooms and tossed salad.

TUNA TREATS

½ cup crisp pickle slices*
1 pkg. piecrust mix
Creamed tuna*
Drain pickle slices on absorbent paper. Chop very fine. Add chopped pickles to piecrust mix; add water as directed on package. Wrap in waxed paper or foil; chill. Divide mixture into four equal portions. Roll each portion into 7" circle on lightly floured board. Fit circles into four individual pie pans 5" in diameter. Flute edges; prick shells with fork. Bake in hot oven (425°) 12 to 15 minutes. Fill with creamed tuna.

*CREAMED TUNA

3 tablespoons butter or margarine
¼ cup minced onion
¼ cup minced green pepper
4 tablespoons flour
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
2 cups milk
1 can (6 or 7 oz.) tuna
Melt butter. Add onion and green pepper; cook until tender but not brown. Blend in flour, salt and pepper. Add milk all at once. Cook and stir over low heat until thickened. Drain tuna; flake; add. Serve hot in pie shells. Makes filling for four individual pies.

*CRISP PICKLE SLICES

Drain 1 jar (32 oz.) sour pickles. (Save liquid to use in salad dressings.) Cut pickles crosswise into thin slices. Combine 1½ cups brown sugar, 2 teaspoons each mustard seed and celery seed. Put about ¼ of the pickle slices back into jar. Add ¼ of the sugar mixture. Repeat three times. Put original cover back on jar tightly. Store in refrigerator three days, turning jar several times.

HOMEWORK TIPS: Worked out with the cooperation of Dr. Phyllis Martin of Pennsylvania College for Women, these tips to make your studies easier should help you get better marks — and give you more time for fun.

- Relax before starting to study. Exercise in the fresh air is best, but don't get all tired out.
- Get out everything you'll need — books, pencils, pen, paper, dictionary, ruler, compass, etc.
- Write out a work schedule. Check it as you work, doing the hard subjects first, the easier ones last.
- Sit up straight at a desk or table; you'll be less likely to daydream.
- Study in a quiet, well-lighted, slightly cool room.
- In doing reference work, take accurate notes. Jot down the name of the book, page numbers, word-for-word quotes. File the information on 3"-x-5" index cards.

- If you have a lot of work to do (say more than a good solid hour's worth), do some after school, the rest after dinner.
- If you get really bogged down, get up and move around or poke your head out of the window. For extra energy, munch candy or drink fruit juice.

• To memorize something: Learn it perfectly just before going to bed. Repeat it first thing in the morning. This is a magic formula that often makes things stick.

• Take good notes in class, and write clearly. Learn to make short, clear outlines. Insert little slips of paper in your books at important points. All this saves cramming at exam time.

• Study during study periods. If you do, you won't have as much, if any, homework to do.

• A relatively painless way to boost your grades is to do a little extra work when you come across something that interests you — a personality, an incident in history or whatever. Keep all related information together, and you'll have material for a theme.

LETTERS have started to come in from readers of my new column. Do you agree with what the boys I asked had to say about this girl's problem?

Question: I think my father is much too strict. He insists that I have a definite coming-home time — always. When I'm a minute late he raises the roof.

Answer: We like a girl to have a curfew. When she doesn't, you feel she's wild or that her parents don't care about her. The curfew should be flexible, though, with maybe a half-hour leeway. And the girl should tell her date about the curfew beforehand. ■

Smoother cheese sauce in just 3 minutes!

Imagine! Just 3 minutes for a cheese sauce! Smoothest you've ever made, too. And all because Carnation has special blending qualities not found in ordinary milk. Try it tonight in one of the delicious new Lenten casseroles shown below.

RECIPE

CARNATION 3-MINUTE CHEESE SAUCE

- 1 ½ cups (large can) undiluted CARNATION EVAPORATED MILK
- ½ teaspoon salt
- 1 ½ teaspoons dry mustard
- 2 cups (about 8 ounces) grated process American Cheese*

Simmer Carnation, salt and mustard in saucepan over low heat to just below boiling (2 minutes). Add cheese. Stir over low heat until cheese melts (1 minute longer).

SEAFARER CASSEROLE: Mix 4 cups cooked macaroni. 1 cup well-drained canned tuna. 2 tablespoons finely diced onion. ½ cup chopped stuffed olives together in bowl. Pour Carnation 3 Minute Cheese Sauce over mixture; blend. Place macaroni mixture in buttered 1½ quart casserole. Bake in moderate oven (350°F.) about 30 minutes.

TUNA NOODLE BUFFET: Arrange 3 cups cooked noodles, ¼ cup sliced mushrooms, 1 tablespoon chopped onion, 1 cup tuna in layers in 4 individual buttered casseroles. Pour Carnation 3-Minute Cheese Sauce over casseroles. Sprinkle with ¼ cup toasted almonds. Bake in moderate oven (350°F.) about 30 minutes.

WORLD'S BEST BASKETBALL PLAYERS

This week the cream of the nation's college basketball teams will meet in a flurry of tournaments. To most experts, one thing is sure even before the first winner has been crowned: there is no player in the world as good as any of the top 10 in the professional National Basketball Association.

In fact, the five NBA players on today's cover (below) could easily be the five best in the world. Lump them with five other NBA stars—to allow for differences of opinion among fans—and there'd be no doubt that you'd have the world's best team.

The pictures here and on page 22, showing NBA players in action during this year's All-Star game, offer partial proof. But weightier evidence came during the 1956 Olympics.

The U.S. basketball team, made up of our best college and AAU players and led by 6'10" Bill Russell, beat the best from every nation. Yet Russell, now playing for Boston in the NBA, isn't even in the league's top 15.

Russell himself admits he's never seen such troublesome competition. "In college," he says, "we'd let tall men take long set shots; they mostly missed because they were used to shooting close to the basket. But here you can't underestimate anybody. I was guarding Syracuse's Earl Lloyd—he's 6'6"—and I let him take some long 30-footers. He sank eight in a row!"

Russell, however, has made good in the NBA, unlike many other publicized college stars. Of more than 60 top collegians who tried out for the eight NBA teams at the start of this season, only 17 succeeded.

One of the 17 is Boston's Tom Heinsohn, formerly of Holy Cross, who's favored to win the rookie-of-the-year award. Collegians, he says, are impressed most by the roughness of NBA play. "In college," he points out, "a man might only brush you and they'd call a foul on him. Here you've got to get smacked hard before you hear a referee's whistle."

Two for 20

NBA veteran Bob Cousy agrees that pro ball is rough. Only 6'1", small by NBA standards, Cousy says he'd turn down an extra two inches for 20 more pounds. "Height," he says, "isn't as important in this league as muscle."

Fans apparently like it rough. Attendance for the league, now in its 11th year, is at an all-time high. And millions in 145 non-NBA cities watch a game each week on TV (NBC-TV, Saturdays, 2:30 p.m. EST).

Biggest criticism of the NBA comes from purists, who claim the pros are more interested in scoring than stopping points. But for photo-proof that NBA high-scorers can also play defense, turn to page 22.

These NBA stars are shown taking the shots they consider their best.

1 Bob Pettit, 6'9", of the St. Louis Hawks, leaps for a jump shot. Top scorer last season (25 points a game), he's also led most of this season.

2 George Yardley, 6'5", of the Fort Wayne Pistons, pumps a one-handed push shot. He helped Pistons capture the Western Division championship last season.

3 Adolph Schayes, 6'8", of the Syracuse

Nationals, tosses a two-handed set. He's been on the all-NBA first or second team every year since 1950.

4 Bob Cousy, 6'1", of the Boston Celtics, drives for a lay-up. He passes to teammates for points (he's led NBA five years in assists) or scores himself (near 20 a game). 5 Neil Johnston, 6'8", of the Philadelphia Warriors, twists off a hook shot. Last year he popped in 45 per cent of his shots—best in the league.

High-scorer Pettit proves NBA plays defense too

PETTIT (9) is outfeinted by Harry Gallatin of New York in this year's annual All-Star game — East vs. West — in the NBA.

GALLATIN goes up for lay-up as Pettit, recovering, closes in. Note how Johnston (6) keeps opponent away from backboard.

BALL (arrow) flies off court after Pettit deflected it. Defense, say most players, is tighter in NBA than in college ball.

Will Dial Soap make you a better dancing partner? Absolutely. And understandably. For Dial is the most effective deodorant soap known. That's because Dial's AT-7 is the most effective deodorant ingredient in any soap. It removes odor-causing bacteria far better than any ordinary soap—far better than any other deodorant soap! Yes, Dial is the soap that stops odor before it starts! No wonder gentle Dial is America's number one soap.

Aren't you glad you use Dial Soap?

TV demonstration shows why
Dial stops odor before it starts!

You've seen it proved on the George Gobel and Danny Thomas shows. Washing, even scrubbing, with ordinary good soaps can't remove odor-causing bacteria effectively. But Dial—with amazing AT-7—removes up to 95% of these odor makers. Actually stops odor before it starts!
